Coastline campership now underway

The Coastline Campership for Kids is an effort underway by a group of concerned citizens and professionals from the seven-town "Coastal Area" including Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate, to provide assistance to disadvantaged children with special needs.

Children who are physically handicapped, mentally retarded, learning disabled, emotionally disturbed or children from families in crisis greatly benefit by having a summer camp experience. A summer without camp and a structured program may result in substantial regression or loss of skills these children worked so hard to master.

Fund raising efforts will be aimed at soliciting interest and contributions from civic and church organizations, businesses and private individuals from the seven-town area that the program will serve. The group will sponsor special fund raising events.

The committee wishes to acknowledge the support given during 1980 from Richard Dwan of Hingham and the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset.

If you wish to be included on the committee to help provide children with a valuable opportunity, please contact the Coastline Council of the Office for Children, 195 Whiting Street, Hingham, 749-2719.

Library Director Richard Hayes

Pratt Library needs volunteers

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library depends heavily on volunteers to keep it going.

Next year 22 percent of the library staff will be volunteers, according to Richard Hayes, library director.

Like other department heads, Dick is trying to cope with Proposition 2½. He finds most of the library's patrons don't know about the cutbacks.

"People will come up to me and ask why Paula isn't here and then be surprised when I tell them, we had to cut the staff due to Proposition 2½.

"I don't think people realize what's happening to the library. All of a sudden it will dawn on them when they find the doors closed."

But while the percentage of volunteers will increase next year, the use of free labor is nothing new. Volunteers make up 20 percent of the staff this year.

The library will be closed on Tuesdays, due to Proposition 2½. Staff cuts forced a reduction in the number of hours the building can be used. No one discussed the budget reduction at town meeting. The details were worked out by the Chasing the chocolate egg, etc.

By Patricia Desmond

On your mark, get set, get chocolate Easter eggs.

The toddlers and more mature children of the town, massed on the lawns of Deer Hill, 400 strong for the Recreation Commission's annual Easter egg hunt.

There were no tearful losers in the group. And that's because there were no losers in the group.

The children, officially three to eleven, converged behind the school just a bit before 1 p.m. Saturday. It was easy to see there were a few kids under three in the throng and some of the littler ones had trouble with the directions.

Members of the Cohasset Jaycees cooperated with the Recreation Commission in putting together the event.

Richard Barrow of the Recreation Commission said he'd like to see the event expanded to include more activities.

"It's over so fast," he said.

Selectmen 2-1 against search committee for exec. secretary

By John McNabb, Jr.

A special search committee is not likely to be appointed to screen candidates for an executive secretary.

Two Selectmen have indicated that they oppose the idea of a search committee, which was proposed by the Town Structure Study Committee and endorsed by vote of Town Meeting this year.

Newly elected Selectman Mary Jane McArthur does favor forming a search committee. She said the message she has heard is that the people of Cohasset want a search committee to be appointed.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said he didn't hear any strong voice in favor of the proposal at Town Meeting. At Town Meeting, a resolution proposed by Donna McGee that a search committee be appointed was approved by voice vote.

Ainslie said he thought the vote on that resolution was close, and that he was convinced there wasn't a strong show of support for it. "I just haven't changed my position," as a result of Town Meeting, he said.

McArthur said she thought the selectmen had a responsibility to follow the wishes of the town, whether or not they thought it was a close vote. She said she was in favor of having a search committee appointed.

Every effort should be made to ensure that the entire process of appointing the Executive Secretary be open and as above-board as possible, she said.

Ainslie said he does not think the resolution has any weight.

Ainslie read a letter from Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, who said in his opinion "that the resolution has no legal effect nor standing..."

"It is further my opinion," he wrote, "that the language of the amendment authorizing the selectmen to appoint an executive secretary is such that the selectmen should have complete freedom in making this choice, having in mind that the executive secretary shall serve at the discretion and pleasure of the Board."

Thaxter concluded: "While the Board may listen to the recommendations of a search committee, it would be contrary to the 1980 Town Meeting vote to limit consideration to the three candidates which such committee suggests."

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said he saw no reason why the selectmen could not make the decision themselves, and said he was not in favor of appointing a search committee.

Revaluation will hike assessments

In the old days — which were last year — the town's assessors would struggle and fight with the state trying to keep the townwide valuation figure as low as possible.

Now with Proposition 2½, the process turned around.

The old benefits of a low valuation were higher state aid. The new benefit of a high valuation is the ability to raise more local taxes to run the town.

Tom Mahaney, a consultant, is working on a townwide revaluation for the assessors right now.

Warren Pratt, one of the assessors, says he isn't sure when the new valuation figures will be available.

From the figures thus far available it would seem most assessments will double or better.

The tax bill in May is the same as last November's bill. The new bills under 2½ begin in the fall.

The town valuation on paper is about $100 million today. Warren said he expects the new valuation figure will be in the neighborhood of $267 or $270 million. Now some large part of that is new construction. But certainly not all of it.

"We don't talk about 100 percent at all," Warren said. "We talk about full and fair market value."

He pointed out that you can't buy a house in town today at $60,000.

From what Warren says, the figures that went into the town budget — as far as assessments go — are on the low side.

Town meeting operated on the basis of a budget amounting to 2½ percent of a valuation of $225 million. That's more than $40 million less than the new assessments that will probably come in.

In 1980 the state believed the town would be worth

Cohasset's Week

The '80 stats

Record of births, marriages and deaths recorded in 1980:

BIRTHS

The total number of births recorded was seventy-nine, of which ten were delayed returns and corrections of past years. Of the sixty-nine born in the year 1980 all the parents were residents of Cohasset. There were thirty-four males and thirty-five females.

MARRIAGES

Total number of marriages was forty-eight including those where both parties were non-residents of Cohasset, thirty-six were solemnized in Cohasset during the current year.

DEATHS

Total number of deaths was seventy-eight including residents of Cohasset who died elsewhere and non-residents who died in Cohasset. Of the fifty-one who were residents of Cohasset, twenty were males and thirty-one females.

Roof problem continues

It might be a while before the Town Hall's slate roof, which has been crumbling, will be checked out.

Apparently the slater who was going to take a look at the falling slate injured himself in a fall from a roof. The driveway on one side of the Town Hall has been roped off to protect people from the falling slate.

Beach stickers

Beach stickers, which now cost $10, will be issued starting July 1, yet Selectmen have not established any procedures for handing them out. They do expect to have a workable set of regulations written by then.

No parking rules

Don't park on Government Island Pier or in two parking spaces between Lawrence Wharf and Fieldbrook Yacht Sales from 7 a.m.-7 p.m. Those areas are now loading zones, with no parking allowed.

Selectmen last week voted to adopt those new parking regulations, which were first proposed six years ago. Harbormaster Harry Ritter told the Selectmen that since the Harbor Committee suggested the new regulations in 1975, nothing has been done.

Ritter said signs are already up, and have been up for years, designating those areas as loading zones, but that police could not enforce them since the rules were not officially adopted.

The new regulations prohibit parking in those locations from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Ritter said that parking should be restricted there to allow fishermen to unload their catch each day.

He said that Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter wrote the regulations, and that they would be legal after suitable notice was made in the Mariner. Ritter said that the new regulations had to be filed with the Town Clerk and sent to the Mass. Department of Public Works before they could be legally enforced.

The regulations provide that cars illegally parked be towed at owner's expense.

Yocum new dog officer

Richard Yocum of 25 Pleasant Street was unanimously appointed the town's new dog officer last week by the selectmen.

Yocum has worked at the Hingham Animal Hospital for nine years as a veterinary assistant. He is a permanent intermittent police officer in Cohasset, and has his Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) certification.

Yocum replaced former Dog Officer Jack Barret, who resigned a few weeks ago. Yocum was the only applicant for the post, which pays $2,000 a year plus $1,075 for expenses.

Cogill to school

New Police Officer David Cogill will attend the Barnstable County Police Academy soon. Selectmen approved his application last week.

Ainslie leads selectmen

Selectman Henry Ainslie was unanimously elected chairman of the board of selectmen last week.

Ainslie was nominated by Selectman Rocco Laugelle.

Ainslie has served as a selectman for over 10 years, and is the board's senior member. He also served as a water commissioner.

Ainslie succeeds Arthur L. Clark as chairman. Clark recently retired from the board, after 14 years as a selectman and 10 years as its chairman.

Pratt leaves post

The town needs a new Fence Viewer. Burtram Pratt of 75 Ripley Road recently resigned from the position, saying, "I have been proud to serve the town in this important and sensitive post."

Cohasset people...Sumner Smith

As a correspondent and feature writer for various newspapers, one of the most positive aspects of my assignments has been the interesting people I have met. As a Cohasset resident for eight years, it seems as if our town has more than its share of people to write about and now the Cohasset Mariner has given me the opportunity to do just that. I only hope that you, the reader, will derive as much pleasure from reading my articles as I do from writing them.

By Laura Doherty

Sumner Smith is a tall, quiet man with a searching mind and a long tradition of working for what he believes in. Townspeople have been known to call him "a gentlemen's gentleman."

With the town election, he completed 21 years of a commitment to the educational welfare of Cohasset students. From 1960 until 1972, he served on the Cohasset School Committee. In 1972, he became Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Regional School Committee, on which he has served for the past nine years.

Mr. Smith traces his tradition of public service back to his family in Lincoln.

"My family was always active in local government," he recalls. He has found that most people, like himself, join a committee because they "want to find out more about it and to contribute to it." As the last person to serve 12 consecutive years on the Cohasset School Committee, Mr. Smith stresses the "need to take an overall view and to do the best possible for all students and staff."

One of the biggest issues he faces as a member of the Cohasset committee, was whether the town should join the METCO Program.

"That generated the most mail I ever got," he recalls as he notes that most favored joining.

He points out with pride that South Shore Vo-Tech was the first regional vocational school in the state. While he has served on its governing board he has had the satisfaction of watching it grow. From the very beginning, the idea behind the school "seemed sensible," continues Smith.

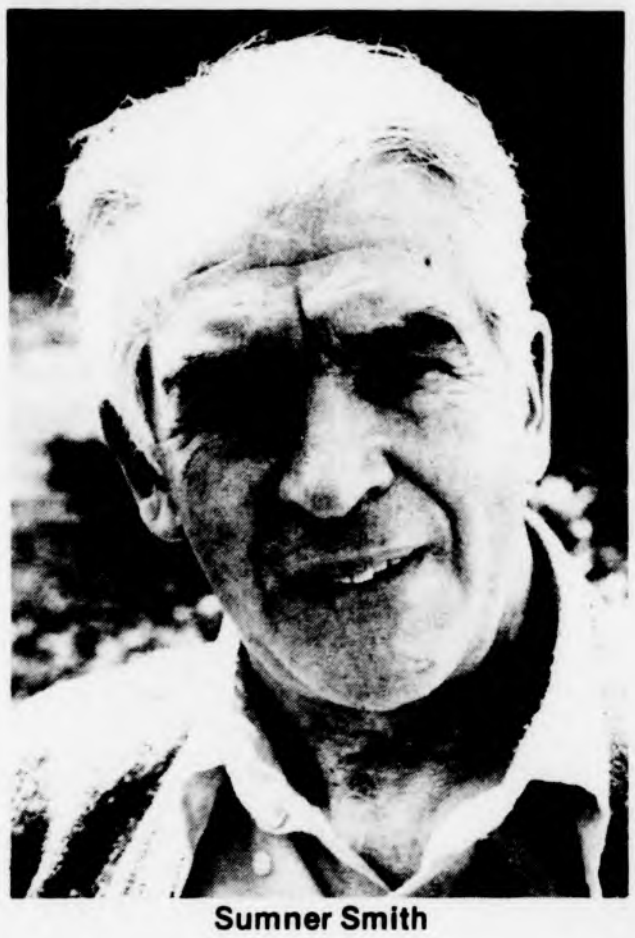
"Students could be basically trained and go in a lot of different directions from those foundations," he explains.

Mr. Smith regrets the more Cohasset students don't take advantage of the school. Currently, there are nine students from the town attending Vo-Tech, although the quota for the town is about 35 students. There has never been more than 17 students, he adds.

Part of the reason, according to Mr. Smith, is Cohasset prides itself on being college oriented. Another is the distance of the school, located in Hanover. He explains the problems of the Cohasset students who do elect to attend Vo-Tech. "It's difficult for them — almost like going away to prep school — they have to give up many of their friends."

The vital importance of vocational schools is underlined by Mr. Smith. "There are shortages in skilled people all over the United States," he emphasizes. "Today, the country is short 60,000 tool and die makers, in five years that number will reach 250,000."

He feels strongly that if Governor King's program to Make It In Massachusetts is to succeed, more encouragement and support should be given to vocational schools.



Sumner Smith

He points to the success that his company, Abington Inc., has had in hiring graduates from the vocational schools.

"They come in and know how to work. They have the basic skills to learn and progress. The hardest thing is to keep them," he says with a chuckle.

Some Vo-Tech students do go on to college, says Mr. Smith. Four teachers currently at Vo-Tech are former students.

"People who get involved with vocational education really become enthusiastic about it. It's kind of like 'We're #2 and have to try harder'," he adds.

The regional concept is particularly attractive to the man who feels that it offers one way to get around Proposition 2½.

"Afterall," he explains, "the one reason Cohasset separated from Hingham was because of the distance to go to church and that's not a factor anymore. Certain economies have to be weighed against individualism," he concludes.

One of the reasons he decided not to run for reelection was because he feels that others should have the opportunity to get close to the situation. He sums up his main source of satisfaction while serving on both committees as "working with other people to get things done."

Atop the square rig

By Gilbert Tower

People continue to urge me to write more reminiscences, but my supply of yarns to spin is about exhausted. However, here is one that may be interesting.

I was twenty years old during my senior year at Tech. I belonged to a fraternity that had a house on Beacon Street. One member of the group was Bob Nichols from Searsport, Maine.

His father was captain of a large ship that had arrived at Boston and was berthed at the Mystic Wharf, north of Boston Harbor. One day word passed around that Bob would take a group of us to see his father's ship. She was a four masted bark and a big one. She had sailed from India with a cargo of gambia, which is something used in connection with the process of dyeing. It is not a dye stuff but is a "mordent" that facilitates dyeing.

One of our party was Pete Merriweather, a rollicking young man from Cincinnati, Ohio. He noticed that there was a ball at the very top of each mast, and he asked a sailor what that was. He was told that the flag halyards passed through it and it was called "the truck." "Well, I am going up to spit on it," Pete said. And he did it.

To the writer it seemed like a crazy thing to do, but I thought if a land lubber from the west could do it so could a boy with a sea-going tradition from Cohasset do it also. So I climbed up the ratlines between the main shrouds and reached the main top. From that point another set of shrouds led up to the top gallent head. Finally, the shrouds came together and above that point was a bare pole about 12 feet long with the truck at the top. I dutifully shinnied up the bare pole and spit on the truck, taking time to look out at Boston Light at the entrance of the harbor. It was a very high-up view.

Looking back

Coming down, hand over hand, was easy, always hanging on with one hand. Towards the deck I found a rope leading down so I wound my legs around it and slid down. When I looked back it seemed a fool-hardy thing to have done. But it was customary for sailors on square rigged ships to do a lot of climbing around in the rigging, holding on with one hand and working with the other hand.

When my father, Daniel N. Tower, was a 15 year old boy in 1862, he and three other Cohasset boys sailed to Liverpool in the ship, North America, with Captain James Collier. They managed the royals, which are the topmost square sails. The three other boys with my father were Walter Tower, Nichols Tower and George Smith. That one voyage was all the seagoing my father could take.

For years the principle occupation for Cohasset boys was going to sea and becoming sea captains. In the woods up in back of the town there were oak trees.

In the winter they would be cut down and transported on sleds, drawn by oxen, to the ship yard at the cove. One can imagine what is now the Cox estate covered with oak wood to be fashioned into frames to be covered with planks.

Eventually the supply of available oak became exhausted and that spelled the end of ship building in sea shore towns like Cohasset. After 1862 steam ships developed and there was little use for sailing ships, which resulted in many retired sea captains in Cohasset.

Search Committee

Selectmen Henry Ainslie and Rocco Laugelle should reconsider their decision to abandon a search committee that would screen candidates for the post of executive secretary.

Selectmen are empowered to appoint an executive secretary and, of course, don't have to listen to anyone in making that decision. Still, we believe a little advice would be helpful.

The idea of a search committee has been recommended by a town study committee and endorsed by a voice vote at town meeting. While neither action forces Mr. Ainslie or Mr. Laugelle to go along, we agree with Selectman Jean McArthur (the minority here) that the Board has a responsibility to follow the wishes of the town.

Mr. Ainslie's suggestion that the town meeting resolution carries no weight begs the question; the will of the electorate should not be casually cast adrift.

If the decision on whom to appoint executive secretary has already been made, Messrs. Ainslie and Laugelle ought to share the secret with the rest of us. Otherwise they should accept the will of voters and an informed study committee and appoint a search committee.

Bouquets

Jacqueline and Ralph Dormitzer's letter to the editor this week deserves attention; their point in defending two former members of the School Committee is valid indeed.

As active and contributing members of the School Committee, Frank England and Patricia Walsh received their share of flak and that is to be expected. Good public servants are subject to criticism, since the nature of their work is not to win popularity contests but to make wise and honest decisions. Mr. England and Mrs. Walsh deserve praise for doing both.

Cohasset, like so many other places, needs qualified men and women to run for public office. Since neither the pay (if it exists) nor the power is alluring, those who do seek the reins of government must be motivated by an honorable wish to serve. They should expect opposition, of course, but should not be subjected to a torrent of criticism by others unwilling to enter the arena.

Former Selectman Arthur Clark has received considerable praise for his valuable contributions to Cohasset. Similar contributions have come from Mrs. Walsh and Mr. England and for those, they deserve their share of bouquets as well.

The vandals have lost more

By Edward Atkinson
Minister, First Parish Church

When vandals broke into the Deer Hill School this past weekend and tore down the projects which the sixth grade students had prepared for exhibit at the Science Fair a bitter lesson was learned; namely, that the patient creative labor of several months can be destroyed in but a few seconds.

Commentary

It is a sad lesson which has been repeated many times in human history from before the days when the vandals sacked Rome, an incident from which the label Vandals derives, to the present day when nations build weapons of war that may in an instant annihilate life on this planet which has been billions of years in the making. How terribly unfair the world seems at times!

Months, years, centuries, millennia to create and seconds to destory. The balance appears overwhelmingly to favor the destroyers.

But in the long run I hope that the students will come to learn another lesson. In truth the vandals have lost far more than they. For the students there is frustration, anger and disappointment upon having their work torn apart before they have had the chance to share it with their classmates, parents and teachers.

But for them there remains the knowledge which they have gained through their work. That knowledge is something the vandals can never destroy and with that knowledge the projects can be rebuilt. Also, and far more importantly with that knowledge the students may continue to grow in self-respect and pride.

For the vandals on the other hand there remains only shame and the fear of being exposed.

A toast to Frank England & Patricia Walsh

To the Editor:

We wish to congratulate Dick Conley on his election to the Cohasset School Committee. We join with many others who have already wished him and his fellow committee members well. Lost in the congratulations, however, has been any acknowledgment of the contribution made by the two former members: Frank England and Patricia Walsh.

One of the most demanding of all public offices, membership on the school committee is also one of the most thankless. Frank and Pat have received only perfunctory praise in this newspaper and none in other local papers or public forums. More disturbing is the following statement, attributed to former school superintendent John Maloney, which appeared in last week's Mariner: "The committee of the past was too involved with power struggles to deal with the issues." This criticism is unfair and untrue. The fact is, the committee during the past year served the schools admirably.

Under Frank's leadership the committee worked more effectively than it had for many years. Disagreements reflected honest and thoughtful differences of opinion. The committee focused on the issues, gave citizens a chance to voice their views, authorized citizens' committees to assist on important matters, and hired an outstanding new superintendent, Mr. Eugene Crowell.

In cooperation with the school committee, Supt. Crowell prepared a budget and made decisions that greatly softened the impact of Prop. 2½. After a turnover of four superintendents in twelve years, the prospects are now excellent for continuity in the school system. For this we are grateful to the previous school committee.

Pat Walsh deserves praise for her initiative, her responsiveness to the concerns of parents, and her remarkable fund of information that enabled the committee to make decisions based on facts.

We hope that the motives of school committee members will no longer be impugned and that qualified citizens will be encouraged to seek membership on the school committee. Credit, not blame, should reward dedicated service to the town.

Explaining vandalism

To the Editor:

The senseless act of vandalism in a Cohasset elementary school is, I believe, due to a dangerous philosophy that permeates all echelons of our modern day society: Secular Humanism. Of late many alert parents across the country are becoming aware of the origins of this philosophy.

A "Humanist Manifesto" was codified in 1933 by educator John Dewey, father of progressive education, renewed in 1973 and published again in 1980.

DOVE needs a new home

By Bernadette MacPherson and Jean Zagoudis For Dove

Joyce is a 22 year old high school graduate married at 17 and the mother of a four year old and an eleven month old.

She may well be one of the Cohasset women who has lived in DOVE's Quincy shelter in the two-and-a-half years it has existed.

Now DOVE is facing a May 31 deadline for moving. The city has sold the property used by DOVE, an acronym for Domestic Violence Ended.

Joyce entered DOVE in October after two hours of verbal abuse concerning a telephone bill for long distance calls. Joyce was blamed for the amount of the bill, although several of the calls were made by her husband. Joyce was afraid that physical violence would ensue as he had abused her many times in the past. During the most recent incident, he kicked her in the groin while wearing steel toe boots.

Joyce has left her husband several times. On these occasions she stayed with relatives for a few days until her husband persuaded her to come home.

Joyce's husband is a good provider and they have a new home. He works days, nights and Saturdays. He feels Joyce should be happy in her new home and should want nothing more than to take care of the house and children.

Her husband was abused as a child and saw his father beat his mother. Perhaps as a result of these experiences, he feels that his physical violence towards his wife is acceptable behavior.

Some of the services provided for Joyce during her stay at the shelter were crisis counseling, emergency shelter, support groups for battered women, court advocacy for protective orders and referrals for family counseling.

We have witnessed a great change in Joyce's attitude toward herself. She has become positive and is determined to change her lifestyle.

Joyce has called periodically to relate that she and her husband are involved in marriage counseling and are working toward a violence-free marriage.

Her husband has moved back into the house and has stopped working nights and Saturdays.

Without DOVE, which provides a hotline and shelter, women and children in the area will again be victims without recourse.

The agency has provided emergency shelter and supportive programs for 391 women and 585 children from Norfolk County as well as 156 from other communities. Over 6,000 calls have been handled on the hotline.

The average length of stay was 11.1 days, although 47 percent of the clients stayed from one to four days.

On leaving the shelter, 66 percent of the women with court orders return home. The rest of the women who get court orders move in with friends, relatives or find new homes.

Without going through a court route, 49 percent return home and 51 percent find new homes or temporary places with friends and relatives.

DOVE is looking for ideas and help with the need for a shelter. More information is available at 471-5087.

The following is an excerpt from the Humanist Manifesto.

"We find insufficient evidence for belief in the existence of a supernatural, it is either meaningless or irrelevant to the question of the survival and fulfillment of the human race."

"Traditional, dogmatic or authoritarian religions ...do a disservice to the human species."

"We seek the good life here and now."

All of the 30 signers of the Humanist Manifesto are leaders in our world today. The list includes: Alan Guttmacher, president of Planned Parenthood (40 percent of whose budget is American taxpayers' dollars) Betty Freidan, mother of Women's Liberation movement, Lester A. Kirkendall, father of sex education movement.

U.S. Representative John Conlan of Arizona, recently described secular humanism as a significant trend in education today that teaches children that there are no values, that there is no right or wrong, that there is no God and that man is his own God.

I sincerely hope that Cohasset parents and parents everywhere will learn to recognize and root out humanist techniques that are being used today that undermine parental authority and remove all dependence on God.

The Science Fair succeeds at Deer Hill

At Deer Hill the children learn resiliency.

Oh, maybe the lesson is harsh. But those kids bounced back from their experience with vandalism with more elastic than there is in a rubber band factory.

The science fair, which was last week, was restored and despite some lingering anger, the 125 participants in the sixth grades displaying their projects seemed no different from the participants of other years.

There were a few parents who thought their own child should have won a prize, that wasn't awarded.

There were a few students who thought others cheated by getting parental help.

And that's the way it is every year and at every school's fair.

It's impossible to please everyone.

But what did come through, far louder than the occasional snipe, was a sense of accomplishment.

The participants in the fair talked about what they had learned from doing the projects as parents and friends moved through the maze of posters and displays.

They also talked about what they had learned from putting the fair back together.

Frank Deakin said the kids had learned a lot from the experience.

"The way we've tried to present it to them is that no one was injured. We've tried to dwell on the positive."

Indeed the students seemed to appreciate the fair more.

"When you come close to losing something, you realize what it's worth," Frank said.

He expects all the publicity and discussion will lead to more interest in the fair next year.

Science fair winners are selected in various categories.

In the category of animals, winners were: Lisa Schumaker, first place with the wonderful world of shells; Patrick Walsh, second; Paulina Rosano, third and honorable mention to Amy Mitman.

In earth science, first place went to Lisa Clinton for the wonderful world of clouds, Jill Shockman, second; Jason Proodian and Ryan Hunter, tied for third. Honorable mention went to Patrick O'Connor, Jeff Hughes, Glen Bernstein and Rick Ainslie.

In energy, first place went to Erik Maki for making water work. In second place was Tyler Henderson and Robert Durkin, who tied. Cindy Bell was third. Honorable mention went to Kimberly Bearce, Timothy Chamberlain, Kathy Frees, Susan Reilly and Melissa Shea.

In human biology, the winner was Maureen Farren with teeth, Chad Culotto, second place, John Scott, third and honorable mention to Scott Fitzsimmons and Wayne Warren-Young.

In the category miscellaneous, Philip Mahoney was in first place with the growth and behavior of plants, Carl Becker, second, tied for third were Lindsey Berntz and Sandra Dunn. John Dockray received honorable mention.

In social studies, Sarah Dickerman was first with the stock market, second, Andrew Glasfeld, third Kristin Contis and honorable mention to Maria Cahill and Caitlin Staunton.

In sports the winner was Susan O'Donnell with animation. Second was Karl Hublitz. Tied for third were Merik Fisher and Betsy Wilson. Honorable mention went to Chris Conant and Jimmy Cooke.

In technology Christian Sheppard was first with rockets, Karin Anglin, second, Mike Milligan, third and Liane Ward, honorable mention.

Despite the plague of vandalism at the Deer Hill School, children and staff righted the damage and drew a full house to the school's Science Fair last week. (Greg Derr photo)

Selectmen briefs...

Mary Jane McArthur has resigned from the advisory board. McArthur, as everyone should know is now a selectman, and cannot serve on the appointed board.

Scott Bailey Co. of Cohasset was unanimously awarded the contract for installing the Town Hall's new heating system by the selectmen last week.

The company was the low bidder, at about $38,600, among the 11 bids opened March 25. The Town Offices Study Committee had recommended that the bid be accepted.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink expects Captain James Lee Gurry to complete a fire inspection of the Elm Street Elderly Housing Project soon.

Selectmen called in Piepenbrink to discuss the matter because of a letter they received from Lloyd W. Prescott of the Housing Authority. Prescott complained that he had been unable to contact the Fire Chief about the inspection. He asked, "What do we have to do to get results from Chief Piepenbrink?"

Prescott said that the elderly have a tendency to keep old papers that often create fire hazards, and that other fire hazards may exist in the building.

around town

☐This Easter Karin Bartow didn't have to sit at a typewriter late at night, dashing off notes about the people around town, trying to finish before the Mariner deadline.

Karin, who decided she didn't want the wonderful world of holiday work, had a chance to spend some time with her family. Good luck in all future endeavors, Karin!

This Easter I had the chance to spend time on the telephone, seeking out pieces of good news from people in town.

I wonder what his retirement will be like if he ends up in that interim job for the board of selectmen?

Good luck to Fred Hanson, the local reporter for the Cohasset Mirror. The paper has advertised his job — it's 30 hours a week. We understand the pay is not astronomical.

An informed source says that other workers in the Mirror group which is part of MPG, owned by Scott Low of Cohasset, have sent a letter of protest to people at the top, complaining about Fred's treatment.

They had a son April 13 at Quincy City Hospital.

The boy, Benjamin, weighed eight pounds and 14 ounces at birth. No light weight.

Any available workers may call her at 383-9395.

☐Speaking of the First Parish Church, on Easter Sunday the Duncombe family served as ushers and greeters for the church congregation.

That included John, Suzanne, David, William, Scott and Amy. In the midst of the lilies and Easter bonnets (it seems they're back in style), the family looked lovely.

☐Alex and Barbara Spooner are looking forward to being the town's first American Field Service, AFS, host family.

The AFS chapter is being revitalized by parents of high schoolers, who are looking for a few more families willing to take in a foreign student for a school year or a summer.

The Spooners, who have two daughters, are the new group's coordinators.

The town had a chapter once. It faded away about 10 years ago.

☐Sunday, April 26, Katie McNamera will be eight-years-old. Happy day, Katie.

The Grade 2 student is planning a special birthday luncheon at her home for a few of her friends. Alison Doherty will be in the group of well-wishers at the party.

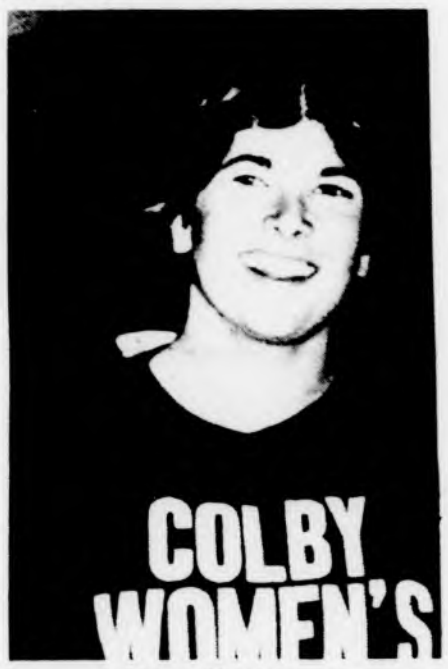
☐Mary Coe of Cohasset, a senior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, shared Most-Valuable-Player honors as a member of the women's varsity hockey team. Colby finished the season fourth among 36 Eastern teams with a 12-6-1 record.

Mary, a forward, was the leading scorer with 14 goals and 20 assists. A tri-captain, she was elected an All-Star player by the Women's College Ice Hockey Association.

Coach Bob Ewell, noting that she had never played hockey before coming to Colby, said, "She's a great example of what can be accomplished through dedication to a sport."

An administrative science major, Mary is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Coe.



Mary Coe

☐With school vacation week leaving the kids with not much to do, Louise Smullen decided to take her Girl Scout troop to the Blue Hills to trot along the trails on horseback.

The troop members are all working for their riding badges.

☐John McNabb Jr. who has been doing some reporting for the Mariner lately won't be contributing any more.

John found a staff job on the South Shore Chronicle in Hull. The fulltime position means John is the newspaper's staff reporter.

Good luck in the future, John.

☐Congratulations to William Sestito. The student at South Shore Regional Vocational Technical School happened to be the only Cohasset resident listed on the school's honor roll for the last term.

Bill studies auto body as his specialty.

☐John Lanata of Beechwood Street and Joseph Mercurio of Cedar Acres Lane both received promotions at Boston University.

John is the university's assistant vice president for auxiliary services. He has been at the university since 1975 and has been the director of auxiliary services.

Philip Pratt, 7, is intent as he moves up the tunnel slide at the Osgood School playground.

Joseph is the comptroller and assistant vice president for financial and business affairs. He has been associate comptroller for three years, having worked in various capacities at the university since 1973.

☐Whitney Halloren of Pleasant Street has been accepted at Sophia University in Japan.

He expects to complete his studies there in the fall. He spent last summer at Hokaiddo University in Japan. He is working in the Asian Studies program affiliated with the University of Mass. at Amherst.

☐The Mariner is looking for a person interested in writing the Around Town column.

Pay isn't much but working with Cohasset people can be fun.

Transfer sought to pay Clark

Newly elected Selectman Mary Jane McArthur split with Selectmen Henry Ainslie and Rocco Laugelle on a move to hire former Selectman Arthur Clark for the rest of the fiscal year.

The Selectmen voted 2-1, with McArthur opposed, requesting a transfer of $434 from the Surplus Fund to help pay Clark until July 1, when the town's first Executive Secretary would be hired.

The vote was not whether or not to hire Clark, but to request the transfer to help pay for him if Selectmen decided to hire him later.

Ainslie suggested that Clark be hired to help the board complete a long list of items he said needed to be completed before July 1.The list was compiled by Clark before he retired as selectman.

Ainslie said that the $434 transfer would be added to $833 still in the expense account for the chairman of selectmen, to provide enough funds to pay Clark at the same rate he was paid this year. Last year the town voted to pay Clark $6,000 to reimburse him for the full-time work he did as selectman.

The money could have been used by Ainslie, who is now chairman. But, he said he accepted the chairmanship on the condition he waived the use of those expense funds.

Donna McGee asked if selectmen would be, in effect, hiring Clark as an executive secretary before the position can legally be established July 1. She noted that if Clark were hired for the few weeks before July, he would not have the same powers he had when working as a full-time selectman.

McArthur said she saw the position Clark would be hired for as very different from the post he held before. She asked that if it was a new position, would it have to go before the Personnel Board.

Ainslie said no, that they just wanted to hire Clark as part time help, and that part-time help doesn't have to go before the Personnel Board.

McArthur said she did not think that the list of things they had to do was too long for the selectmen to accomplish themselves. She saw no reason why they need to hire anyone to help them.

It was pointed out that since Clark has been a town official, he cannot be hired by the town less than 30 days after he left the service of the town. His immediate hiring is prohibited by Massachusetts conflict-of-interest laws.

Laugelle said he thought the town needed some extra help before July to help them complete the list. He said he was in favor of the transfer, to hire someone, whether it was Arthur Clark or anyone else.

The request for a transfer of funds goes to the Advisory Committee, who should decide whether to grant it the next time they meet.

DeBassio wants fence at Mill River bridge

Police Chief John DeBassio suggests that a six-foot chain-link fence be built over the Mill River and Cunningham Bridges to prevent kids from jumping over them this summer.

DeBassio said that the cost of the fence would more than offset the cost of sending police officers to the bridges to chase kids away, and would be much more effective.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said the board would look into the cost of building the fence, which would be a semicircular arch over the bridge.

The selectmen received complaints about kids jumping off the bridges from Mrs. John Howe of 20 Hobart Lane and from Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCormick of Florida, summer residents of Cohasset.

The McCormicks said that the situation was a "great source of irritation for the last two summers," and that the kids would often walk across their front lawn. They objected to the language used by the youngsters, and noted that it was extremely dangerous for them to jump off the bridge.

Navy to use town space

The Navy will be recruiting out of an office in Bates Hall or town hall sometime soon. Selectmen last week agreed to allow the Navy recruiters to use town office space for three hours one day a week.

Sculpture workshop at Art Center

A One-Day Sculpture Workshop will be taught by Ruth Mordecai-Slavet Saturday, May 2 from 10 to 5 at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

This workshop is open to anyone interested in art (not necessarily a sculptor). The morning will be devoted to working in clay from the model on several small poses with one being selected for completion in the afternoon.

Discussion, slides and notetaking in a journal will take place after lunch. The fee includes clay, a journal, model fee and the students take home a completed figure and their journals.

For further information, call the Center at 383-9548.

Excerpts from preliminary reviews of the book:

"We are very pleased with this publication." — Dr. Seldon V. Whitaker Jr., Superintendent of Schools, Duxbury.

"Most newspapers have for their reporters what they call a Style Book, which explains their preference for writing. But this little book is written for everyone. It is amusing and easy to read and is the answer to all the puzzling questions about writing." — Alison Arnold. (Mrs. Arnold, who now writes for the Clipper, is former Society Editor of the Boston Herald and The Boston Globe.)

"A most enlightening and engaging little book. Every young writer learning his trade should have it on his shelf near to Strunk, Fowler, Webster's Collegiate, the Concise Oxford and Partridge's Dictionary of Cliches." — Francis Russell (Francis Russell is the author of Tragedy in Dedham and Shadow of Blooming Grove.)

Obituaries

John Ferreira

John Joseph Ferreira, 82, a lifelong Cohasset resident and a retired Boston Naval Shipyard superintendent, died April 15 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

A painter by trade, he had worked at the Navy Yard for 22 years. He had also been a special town police officer for 40 years and was a part-time call fireman.

He was a Navy Fireman first class and a member of the Cohasset Police and Massachusetts Police Associations, and Norfolk County Retirement Association.

He leaves his wife, Lena (Gilmore) Ferreira; three sons, Gerald T. Ferreira of Plymouth, Lee Ferreira of Seattle, Wash. and Ronald Ferreira of Norwood; two daughters, Linda L. Healy of Duxbury and Cynthia S. James of Cohasset; a sister, Adelaide Holland of Scituate; and 14 grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated April 20 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Beechwood Cemetery.

Report from the Council on Aging

Open meetings of the Council are held every second Tuesday of the month at 10:00 a.m. at the Parish House of the First Parish Church. The nine volunteer member board meets to discuss plans for the welfare of a very important segment of the town's population — the elderly.

The following programs and activities are made possible through the efforts of the Council, the Social Service League and over one hundred dedicated volunteers.

Nutrition: The Meals on Wheels program, serving approximately 5,000 meals per year, is supervised by volunteers from the Social Service League. Meals are delivered six days a week to the homes of the elderly who need assistance. Special diets are arranged when necessary. There is a nominal fee of $1.55 per meal, but financial aid is available. The actual cost of the meals, prepared by the Red Lion Inn is $2. The Council pays the difference.

In addition, lunches prepared at the High School are served every Tuesday during the school year at the Parish House of the First Parish Church at 12:30 p.m. Over 1,300 meals were served by volunteers from St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, Second Congregational and the First Parish Church. Those interested should call 383-1100 by Monday noon. Lunch is $1.

Transportation: The Rotary Club conducted a drive throughout the town to purchase an eight passenger bus. The response was excellent and the Council wishes to express its deep gratitude to the Rotary Club and the townspeople.

The Senior Shuttle Bus makes approximately 100 trips each week to the shopping plazas, medical offices and various functions. The trips are handled by 40 Social Service League volunteers.

On Sundays another group of nine volunteers drive the bus to the various churches.

For information on the bus schedules consult the Vista or call 383-0821.

Information: A Council sponsored monthly publication, the Vista, is mailed to 325 homes each month. To receive this news of upcoming social, educational and recreational activities, call 383-1100 weekday mornings.

Recreation: Two bus trips a year are sponsored by the Council. The Council works closely with the 60 Plus Club and its 200 members. The 60 Plus Club meets on the third Thursday of the month at the Parish House of the First Parish Church.

Along with ten other South Shore Communities, Cohasset is a participant in the South Shore Home Care, Inc., 140 South Main St., Cohasset. This corporation is under aegis of the Department of Elder Affairs, both State and Federal, and is concerned with all aspects of care for the elderly. This year the Social Service League was the recipient of a grant from the South Shore Home Care.

Respectfully submitted,
Rev. John Keohane, Chairman
Mrs. Helen Barbar, Housing Representative
Mrs. John Daunt, Secretary
Mrs. Charles Donovan, Pres. 60 Plus Club
Mrs. W. Howard Enders, Chrm. Tuesday Luncheons

At CHS ... okay week for tennis, not baseball

By Rob Tis

It was another trying week for the Cohasset Skipper baseball team. Ed Barrett of Duxbury fired a complete game two hitter against the Skippers on Monday.

The Dragons scored four runs off starter Bill Kurtz in the second inning which was enough to let them glide to a 6-2 victory.

On Wednesday the Skippers had their fourth loss handed to them by East Bridgewater 7-0. The Skippers made 10 errors and could not get the clutch hitting. However the men in blue received a fine effort in relief from Jack Hernah.

On Thursday the Skippers were outmanned by Norwell as pitcher/shortstop Bill Kurtz and third baseman Mark Froio headed for Florida and catcher Bill Cuff sunned himself in the Bahamas. The Clippers scored 15 runs on 14 hits to pace themselves to an early lead as the game was decided as early as the second inning. The Skipper relief team however got a good workout.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

It was an up and down week for the Skippers softball team this week. First they were down, on Monday when they lost to a very strong Duxbury team 14-1. Wednesday the Skippers were almost back to their winning ways but lost a heartbreaker to East Bridgewater 11-10. Stacy Thompson had a 9 perfect day at the plate with 4 hits. Heidi Brown managed to get on base and score 4 times. But a 4 run onslaught by the Vikings in the sixth inning withstood and dropped the Skippers record to 1-3.

Thursday was an up day for the Skippers as they edged Norwell 4-3. Lindsay Gilmore smashed a homer to left-center clinching the game for Cohasset. Liz Atkinson and Gia Barresi each had extra base hits in the fifth inning producing two runs.

BOYS' TENNIS

Miracles do occur, as it was proven this week. The boys' tennis team lost a match. Don't despair however, the Skippers easily won another one against Norwell steadying their record at 3-1 and good enough for second place in the league.

The Skippers' loss was against South Shore league powerhouse Duxbury 5-0. It was much closer than this however, as Gerry White split sets at 3rd singles 6-7, 6-4, 6-3 and both doubles teams were losing by only one or two games in the straight set defeats.

Norwell on Thursday was a different story however as the Skippers prevailed 4-1 with Joe Whelan, Gerry White, Jason Gill, Paul Riley, Rob Whelan and yours truly all chalking up victories. Shannon Collins was narrowly defeated by the Clipper's best man.

GIRLS' TENNIS

The girls' tennis team had the same experience as the boys' against Duxbury losing 5 tough matches Wednesday. It was a very frustrating day for the girls as they faced E. Bridgewater who, because there is no boys' team, sports three gentlemen on the girls' team. Mia Graham lost in a split set tie breaker to a boy as did the second doubles team, 3rd singles also lost giving the Vikings 3 points, enough for a victory that they didn't deserve.

Thursday the Skippers got back on the right track as they rolled over Norwell with Mias Graham, Sue Dalrymple, Joy Pratt, Lauren Alemian, Chrissy Ralphy, Kate Smalzel, and Karen Murphy all scoring victories.

Going down low, Cohasset second basement Kevin Dooley tags a Norwell runner out at second base. Alas, the Skippers still fell to the Clippers. (Greg Derr photo)

Baseball opens

The Cohasset Baseball 1981 season will be open with a parade, opening ceremony, and exhibition game Saturday, April 25.

All baseball players should be at the town parking lot at 11 a.m. in uniform. The parade will advance to Barnes Field for the opening ceremonies and guest speakers. Following the ceremony the teams will play an exhibition game.

The 1980 champions of both the Pony and Little League teams will be awarded trophies.

The refreshment stand will be in full operation for the opening and all are invited to participate in the festivities.

Drama Club's 'Night Must Fall' in production

By Jane A. Marshall

The spring offering of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, "Night Must Fall" by Emlyn Williams, is in full production.

Behind the scenes a production crew has been working diligently for, needless to say, a play can not go on without sound, props, publicity, costumes, make-up, set designing, building, decorating, and lighting.

David Wadsworth of Cohasset, publicity chairman, has been busy composing articles to keep the community informed of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's latest undertaking, as well as rehearsing for his supporting role as Hubert Laurie.

His articles have been punctuated throughout the area with the striking publicity poster designed by Katy Miessner of Scituate. The small props chairman, Roberta Raffa, has been scouting the South Shore for curtains, chocolates, hatbox, tea service, china, pillows, suitcases, and — Does anyone have a stuffed bird?

During the run of the play on May 7, 8 and 9, Mrs. Raffa and her crew will make sure that the props for each scene are in place, and that each actor will have in hand his or her prop when necessary.

The action will take place in an English bungalow set, designed by J. Whitney Hall of Hingham. His primary concern when drafting the plan for the parlor set, was accommodating a cumbersome wheelchair of the 1930's which must be wheeled around the stage numerous times and out various doorways during the play's three acts.

Construction of the set, under the supervision by Hall, takes three or four days, several splinters, and a few bruised thumbs to finish. Painting of the set and detail work then follows — again taking several days for completion. The painting must finish off the set, and give the audience the feeling that an actual living room of an English country house has been established on the stage of the Cohasset Town Hall.

During this time, the large props chairman, Rosanne Ring of Cohasset, is lining up the furniture that will dress the set. Her concern, like his, is to find pieces that will fit the period, as well as allow for movement of the wheelchair.

Of course when all is completed and placed on stage, the intense work and gathering of materials would be for naught without the expertise of the lighting people.

The lighting effects of an October morning, early afternoon, evening, and late, fall night are the responsibility of Arthur Paquette of Duxbury and Clark Young of Cohasset. These two men must set the time of day, and help establish the play's mood for the audience — a challenging task.

Adding another scope to "Night Must Fall," will be the sound effects chairman, Don Massa of Cohasset. Through his and his assistant's electronic abilities will come the sounds of the mantel clock chiming, the victrola playing, Hubert's piano playing off stage, and the play's mood music, arranged and played, in part, by Chris Williams of Cohasset.

All the technical work and care put into "Night Must Fall," will be admirably complemented by the make-up crew, headed by Ubaldo DiBenedetto of Cohasset, and the costume staff headed by Gari Glennon of Hull. These two groups make sure that the actors appear on stage in clothes which both fit the period and the personality of the character, and proper cosmetic color which will not fade under the strong stage lights.

The outcome of all this labor is finally tested together at the technical rehearsal.

After that final rehearsal..."Curtain Up" — or in the case of the Cohasset Town Hall — "Curtain Aside...Light the Lights..." and to you the audience, the production crew and cast of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, present on the Cohasset Town Hall stage: "Night Must Fall," 8 p.m., admission $3; $1 for students and senior citizens free on Thursday, May 7, 8 and 9.

Bancroft Way is still open

Bancroft Way, a small spur of a road off Bancroft Road, is still open, despite a Town Meeting vote last year.

Selectmen discussed the matter last week, and decided to talk the issue over with the School Committee before moving to close the road.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur told Selectmen last week that although Town Meeting voted unanimously to close Bancroft Way, no action has ever been taken to do so.

Selectmen discussed the possibility of erecting a gate instead of permanently blocking Bancroft Way. Selectman Henry Ainslie said that a gate like ones at the beach would cost from $3,000 to $5,000 each.

CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton told the Selectmen that Bancroft Way was useful to the School Athletic Department after school to transport equipment.

McArthur pointed out that the intentions of the School Committee, which submitted the Town Meeting article, and the abuttors, who are concerned about cars racing down Bancroft Way, could be very different.

A permanent barrier, such as some large rocks, may be what the Bancroft Way abuttors want, she indicated.

Town Meeting last year voted, in Article 58, "That the Town vote in accordance with Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 82, Section 21, discontinue that portion of Bancroft Way as a way to which the public has access."

Revaluation will hike assessments

$194 million, if it were at full value, meaning the property in town is assessed at somewhere around 50 percent of its value.

But Warren pointed out that things are changing quickly in Cohasset.

"There are alot of new homes," he said. "No matter what they say about construction, there are a lot of homes in town."

Those include projects like the Logan Estates off Jerusalem Road, Aaron River in Beechwood and the development off Forest Avenue. The list goes on.

By now most of the buildable land in town has been used, Warren explained. What's left is wetland, ledge or public property.

Anyway once the new valuation figures are approved by the assessors, taxpayers will have a chance for a hearing and the state will have the right to analyze the data.

The state can force the town to futher increase the assessments, if the numbers warrant, Warren says.

"Pembroke didn't set their rate for this year until after the first of the year," he said.

But he expects the Cohasset rate will be available before the October deadline.

Painting, photography exhibits at Art Center

On Friday, May 1 from 6 to 8:30 p.m., the South Shore Art Center will hold a reception for an exhibition of paintings by Jean S. Cain and photography by Joan Hacker in its Invitational Gallery.

Joan Hacker, who received her B.S. from the University of Evansville, Indiana, studied at the New England School of Photography, John Dascher Country School of Color Photography and Maine Photographic Workshops.

Jean S. Cain, former co-owner of the Bare Cove Gallery in Hingham, received her B.F.A. from Syracuse University and also studied at the Arts Students League in New York.

Her most recent awards include the National Arts Club Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Acrylic Award in 1978, Brockton Art Museum South Shore Popular Award, 2nd prize 1977 and the South Shore Art Center Spring Festival, First Prize in Acrylics.

Ms. Cain has exhibited extensively including the Copley Society's Great Cities of the World show in 1980, South Shore Art Center's Juried Symphony Hall Show in 1980, "Yes We Can" (20 outstanding women artists) at the John B. Hynes Auditorium, Boston, 1975 and locally at the Bare Cove Gallery. Her work is in the collections of the Parker Bros. Game Co., The Babson Co., Ocean Spray Cranberry Co. and Goodwin Proctor & Hoar Law Offices.

This show runs from April 28 to May 23.

Gallery hours of the Center are Monday to Friday 12 to 4 p.m. and on Saturday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, please call the Center at 383-9548.

Who called Helsinki?

By Claire McDonough

On October 27 a teenager came home from school and did not head for the telephone. He was immediately signed to appear on "That's Incredible."

On April 19 my Dragon roared into the kitchen waving a phone bill.

"Who," he thundered, "has been calling Helsinki?"

Breida sniffed. "You can bet it's some boy."

"Not me," Skipper assured us. "But I need the phone now and I can't find it. I have to get a ride home from skating."

"They always say," Breida continued, "that girls talk on the phone a lot. If you notice, in this house it's always a boy on the phone."

"This doesn't answer my question." The Dragon's voice had become ominously quiet.

Larry studied his fingernails.

"If you notice," Breida persisted, "whenever the phone rings it's never for a girl."

"Your face is red; your temple is throbbing, and the cords in your neck are sticking out," I cautioned the Dragon. "Why don't we talk this over calmly? Where's Kevin?"

We followed the 22 foot telephone line that serves Kevin as an umbilical cord. It went across the kitchen floor and under the cellar door. Just as we reached for the knob the door flew open and Kevin burst into the kitchen, a look of shocked incredulity on his face.

"I just picked up the receiver to make an important call and Mrs. Foley was already on the line." He looked at me accusingly. "It's for Ma!"

"If she's calling collect from Helsinki tell her to forget it," the Dragon warned.

Larry looked at the ceiling and whistled softly.

I handled my phone call expeditiously and with dispatch. I mean, 45 minutes isn't long for a rehash of the Democratic Issues Convention, right?

When I rejoined my family, Kevin had assumed an air of injured innocence. "I have never called Helsinki in my life," he protested.

Commentary

"I think I believe him," Breida contributed. "He never calls anyone but Kim, and she lives in Weymouth. The question is, how did anybody else get it away from him long enough to phone anywhere?"

Everyone, except Skipper, who was frantically dialing, agreed that this did, indeed, present a problem.

"It must have been Thursday the 15th between 3 and 5," Kevin offered. "Kim had a dentist's appointment and I was off the phone for an hour and thirty seven minutes."

"Well," said Breida firmly, "I was babysitting for the Lewises that afternoon and Skipper was at soccer practice, and Patrick was at work.

Larry edged casually toward the door. When he realized that all eyes were fixed on him, he sighed.

"What could I do?" he asked rhetorically. "Frank's father won't let him use the phone any more because their bill is so high, and he saw an ad for this really great South City system in "Finland After Dark."

"You let him use our phone to call Europe?" I gasped.

"What," he asked virtuously, "are friends for?"

"That settles it." The Dragon breathed fire. "I'm putting this lock on the telephone, and I'm keeping the only key."

I conveniently remembered a conservation commission meeting and slipped out the door to mingled cries of

"My social life is ruined!"

"But I have to call the guys for boy scouts!" and

"I never get to use it anyway."

When I returned several hours later, there was a broken lock and a pair of metal clippers on the telephone stand.

"What happened?" I asked.

The Dragon looked sheepish. "I had to make an important call and I forgot where I left the key.

Just then we heard the muffled sound of the phone ringing behind the cellar door. Almost immediately Kevin appeared.

"This is too much," he told us. "You'd think I'd be able to call Kim at 10:30 at night without someone with a foreign accent calling for Larry."

The Dragon and I looked at each other. "What's the time difference in Helsinki?" we asked.

Parents plan Derby Spring Fair

The April 2nd Derby Parents' Association meeting enthusiastically endorsed the idea of aviation as the theme of the May 9 Spring Fair.

Since a large number of Derby relatives and friends are pilots, many valuable aviational resources are available to the Academy. Already arranged and confirmed is a hot air balloon ascension from the grounds of Derby during the Fair (weather permitting). Among the potential attractions are the display of a high performance fibreglass contest glider, meteorological exhibition and flight simulator. Correlated educational prsentations to the students prior to the Fair such as a movie on gliding, mathematical problems relating to aviation, and a topical book display in the library were seen as possibilities.

With plans well underway for the activities, events, and goodies that have always made the Derby Spring Fair a special event and the addition of the aviation elements, May 9 should be a high flying success.

The Big Name in Small Buildings

The Easter Egg Hunt ...

THEY'RE OFF — A happy bunch of Cohasset children dash from the starting line at Saturday's Easter egg hunt. The event, sponsored by the Recreation Department, drew a good crowd to the Deer Hill School.

Young Timmy Desmond came up empty handed but the good guys from the Recreation Department filled his basket anyway.

... chasing the chocolate egg, etc.

chocolate Easter eggs had no complaints about the speed of the hunt.

Roy Fitzsimmons, a Jaycee, stood guard over the pack of children three to five. Parents infiltrated the line-up, waiting for the magic word, Go.

He explained the plan several times while the kids moved nervously. Some held brown paper bags. A few held straw Easter baskets. One young lady held somebody's baseball hat as her collection devise.

"I forgot to bring something," the pretty five-year-old explained.

Just a few feet away the ground glittered with metallic Easter egg wrap. The field had been heavily salted with the chocolate eggs, covered with foil.

John Kinchla, another Jaycee, was at the front of the middle-aged children. These kids were more serious and needed no help from parents or other instructions.

The older kids were more intense about the whole thing. The older group, where a few eleven-and-a-half year-olds could be spotted, seemed to smile more.

Prizes, donated by local merchants, went to the kids who found specially numbered Easter eggs. It seemed a better idea than giving awards to the ones with the most eggs.

"I only got two," one nine-year-old pouted when the mad dash ended.

"There's about 20 in the bags," her brother offered.

"You better get it quick before they run out."

Reading clinic to meet May 5th

The Reading Clinic has invited Mary Chatillon, a consultant, to speak Tuesday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cushing Room, Rockland Trust Company, Cushing Plaza, on specific language disability and the Orton-Gillingham approach to remediation.

This will be an informal public meeting to answer questions concerning dyslexia and the services available to both children and adults.

The Reading Clinic will, also, offer a summer reading clinic for children and young adults with specific language disability. The clinic will be held June 29 through August 7, directed by Marcia H. Murphy and Marie Kenerson, both certified reading consultants.

The faculty will include experienced teachers trained in the Orton-Gillingham approach.

The Orton-Gillingham approach is used by the Mayo Clinic, Texas Scottish Rite Hospital and the Massachusetts General Hospital. The program is a highly structured, multisensory program for teaching children and adults who have not been successful in learning to read, spell or write with conventional classroom methods despite possession of average or above average intelligence.

The program is based on structured phonics for reading and spelling. The student is trained to hear speech sounds and to name or write all the phonic units used to represent each sound. Enrollment is limited. Interested persons should contact Mrs. Murphy at 383-0839 or Mrs. Kenerson at 925-1399 for further information.

Greek Orthodox Church offers special service

The Greek Orthodox Church of Cohasset invites Christians of all denominations to share our first commemoration of the Passion and celebration of the Resurrection of our Lord, to be held at the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road.

Guest pastor for the week will be the eloquent Father Vaporis, Dean of the Holy Cross School of Theology.

There are several events during the week of particular interest to non-Orthodox Christians. Wednesday vespers will be graced by the participation of the Bishop of Boston, Anthimos. Thursday will be the traditional Reading of the Gospel in 12 languages.

The Good Friday evening service features a candlelight procession of mourning around the church building. Saturday midnight is climaxed by the most beautiful of all orthodox ceremonies, the passing from one to another of the Light of Resurrection.

Here is the Easter Church schedule:

April 23, Holy Thursday, Holy Communion, 7a.m. and 7 p.m.

April 24, Good Friday, 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

April 25, Holy Saturday, Holy Communion, 7 a.m. and 10:30 p.m.

April 26, Easter Sunday, Agape Service, 3 p.m.

Erin McAllister, 5, is not displeased with her booty.

Pratt Library

library trustees and the advisory board, faced with the need to cut somewhere.

But the library is one of the town's larger investments.

Dick points out that the inventory is worth a half million dollars.

"It costs $40 an hour to keep the library open," Dick said.

Garden Clubs meet at Lothrop House

A two-day "Standard Flower Show" in Cohasset is being planned by the 30 garden clubs which make up the South Shore District of The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, reports Show Chairman, Mrs. Donald Parkes of Hull.

The show will be staged at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, in Cohasset, through the courtesy of the Cohasset Historical Society on Friday, May 1 from 1 to 6 p.m. and Saturday, May 2 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The classic Georgian brick-end dwelling has been acquired and refurbished by the Society.

Mrs. Lawrence Parker, president, explains that the gracious home, the only one of its kind in Cohasset, was built in 1823 by Caleb Lothrop and remained in his family for 143 years. This occasion will mark the first time that both the first and second floors will be open to the public.

Using the theme "Nature and the Poet," designers from the various garden clubs will create floral arrangements interpreting titles of poems written by the American poet, William Wordsworth. In addition, there will be horticulture, education and conservation exhibits as well as a Junior Gardeners' Division.

Mrs. Grandin Wise of Sharon, the incoming South Shore District Director, is ticket chairman. Admission will be $2 in advance and $3 at the door.

Tickets will be available through the membership of all the area garden clubs. Proceeds will be used for South Shore District scholarships and projects.

Other committee members include: Mrs. Robert Fandel and Mrs. Richmond Luther, the Garden Club of Hingham; Mrs. John Hower, Cohasset Garden Club; and Mrs. Stephen Bobo and Mrs. Frederic Wood, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

Turn your clock back Sunday!!!

Police may be without one cruiser

The police may have to go through the summer with the cars they have now, unless Chief John DeBassio can find an economical bid for the vehicles.

DeBassio says he doesn't expect the town's two police cruisers to make it through the summer, but said he may not have much choice unless he can find two cars for $14,500 or less.

There was only one bid for the two cruisers — about $2,200 higher than the amount budgeted. Shiretown Motors, Inc. of Plymouth sent in the bid for $16,768 for cruisers, without air conditioning.

Selectmen agreed that they did not want to request a transfer from the Advisory Committee for the excess $2,200, and asked DeBassio what he recommended. DeBassio said he would check to see if there were any police line vehicles in stock they could negotiate for.

DeBassio said that they may have to use a non-police line to get them through the summer, and then re-bid for the vehicles next year and hope to get more applications. "We're going to have to continue negotiating," he said.

They were looking for two 1981 Ford LTD's, 4-door sedan, with or without air-conditioning.

One way to fool your family into thinking you've been slaving over the proverbial hot stove when you've really just arrived home from a fun day minutes before is to set the table right away. This way they're assured of eating (hopefully soon). Throw together Margaret Braun's Pot Luck Casserole and while it's baking, reach for the corn muffin mix. When that's in the oven, make a salad and you're home free. Your main dish is called:

POT LUCK CASSEROLE

1 lb. ground beef
1/3 c. chopped onion
1 c. shredded cheddar cheese
1 can condensed tomato soup
2 c. cooked medium noodles
1 c. cooked corn, or green beans
1/4 c. water
1 tsp. mustard
1 tsp. salt

Brown beef and onion. Pour off fat and stir in 3/4 c. of cheese and remaining ingredients. Place in casserole and top with remaining cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 min. Serves four.

How to get out of the kitchen and into the great outdoors these magical Spring days is top priority as wielding a rake becomes far more appealing than rattling pans. Early morning is too chilly for most of us to venture out and a good time to do something about preparing the evening meal. It's time to make up a big bowl of salad, refrigerated, covered and ready to toss with its dressing just before serving. Scrub your vegetables and take out the meat from the freezer. If you also had Marguerite Miller's pound cake stashed away in the freezer, you'd be way ahead of the game. Baked at 300 degrees for 1½ hours, the recipe makes two loaves baked in 5 x 8 pans.

SOUR CREAM POUND CAKE

3 c. flour
3 c. sugar
1½ tsp. soda
2 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. lemon flavoring
Pinch of salt
1 c. butter or margarine
6 eggs, separated
1 c. sour cream
Pinch of mace

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each. Add soda, salt and mace to flour. Add alternately with sour cream to egg mixtures. Add flavoring, then fold in beaten egg whites last. Freeze one and enjoy the other.

Viewing our little world through gleaming windows framed by freshly laundered curtains makes spring cleaning seem worthwhile. However, when cleaning closets and tidying drawers seems sheer drudgery, it's good to leave it all behind. Doing just that, Community League members were treated to Lennie Foley's crepes at a recent luncheon. The hall was jammed that day, for we all knew a treat was in store, having sampled his food many times at his Rte. 53 restaurant in Pembroke called the "Leonard M." If you're too busy to make your own crepes, you can buy frozen ones and fill with this

CREPE FILLING

4½ T butter
1½ small onions, chopped fine
1½ c. chopped mushrooms
1¼ c. beer
1/2 c. light cream
1 c. cooked ham, cut in thin strips
3 T cold water - 1½ T cornstarch
1 tsp. salt
Pepper to taste
1½ c. grated Swiss cheese

Melt butter in skillet. Add onions and mushrooms, cooking for 2 min. Stir in beer, cream and ham. Simmer 3 min. Dissolve cornstarch in cold water. Add to mushroom mixture. Season with salt and pepper. Cook over low heat till mixture thickens. Stir in cheese. Fill crepes and roll. Sprinkle cheese on top and bake at 275 degrees for approx. 5 min.

Do you need a new roof?

How old is your roof? If it's more than ten years old, it's high time to give it a close inspection. Because 15 years is about as long as most roofs can be expected to function and not look shabby.

The concentrated heat of the sun, rain, snow, sleet, gusty winds and just time alone can make shingles dry and brittle, rob a roof of its protective qualities. Let us give your roof a thorough check-up, inspect all potential trouble spots. It could save you a bundle — because a faulty roof soon leaks, and leaks can be expensive. If you roof just needs repair, we'll tell you. If you need a new roof, we'll be happy to advise you and give you a free estimate.

There's no obligation whatsoever, just call Vining & Fletcher Roofing for a free estimate.

Candlepins for laughs

By Lois Martin

There are some opportunities for which one knock is more than enough. And I'll tell you why.

It was a Tuesday afternoon. Supper was in the works. The week's Mariner had been put into its pajamas if not completely to bed. A brief reprieve in the week for me.

Then the phone rang. A cheery woman on the other end of the line congratulated me. I couldn't think why. Supper would be good but not great. That wasn't it.

Her name, she breezed, was Annette and the computer had selected me to be on "Candlepins for Cash." Grab a pencil, she said, get down my directions for my Saturday appearance at the Channel 25 bowling headquarters in Waltham.

Whoa, I said. What do you mean? I can't bowl. How on earth did the computer get my name?

Someone sent it in. Anyone who's ever seen me bowl is too bent over with laughter to write. It was a joke. To Annette I demured, confessing my ineptitude and guaranteed failure.

She said I was too modest. It would be a good time and I could get $5 for three gutter balls. She raced on. Bring six to eight friends who cheer a lot. I could win gift certificates from Star Market and the jackpot was up to $6000.

I told her I'd get back to her. And I called the friend whom I held suspect in the case of the entered bowling name.

My suspicions confirmed, she and I spent 20 minutes laughing. 'Candlepins for Cash' has always been a show I haven't watched if I could get to the dial. It's because I'm nervous for people bowling. Our accents are stronger on TV than off. Even those who are good bowlers fall prone to the jitters. Some even fall in the alley.

Of course I wouldn't go. Then for reasons I don't understand, I considered it. I'd go bowling Wednesday, I thought. Maybe I'm good now that I haven't been bowling for years. There might have been a metamorphosis in my bowling average.

The friend who submitted my name had told the computer my average was 95. I never found out what she said my age and occupation were. She told me they were both lies. But it was no lie that my membership on a high school league team was based, not on my 40 average, but on my participation in team spirit.

The Wednesday night practice was a disaster. The three people with whom I went sailed that ball right down the middle, scarcely avoiding regular strikes, competing, the three of them for the night's championship.

I bowled about 42 the first game and sunk to 26 the second.

As if charmed, the ball rolled off my right index finger into the gutter. When I compensated for the error, it rolled off my thumb into the left gutter. I went home discouraged.

But it bugged me. I couldn't understand, as I rubbed my displaced left hip, why I was so bad. It must be my attitude. I'd give it one more shot Thursday.

In the afternoon I called my son Terry, told him I'd pick him up and we'd go bowling. He was most supportive. He said anyone should have a go at $6000. As I picked up my bowling shoes the woman smiled at me, recognizing me from the night before.

The first game I got 48, the next 36. It was then Coach really leaned on me. He showed me how I bowled, shoulders slumped, defeated expression.

Stand up straight, he said. Get your shoulders back. Survey the situation and use your energy. He pulled a muscle as he demonstrated. But that game I got up to 43. And by the fourth string I had 70.

I was jubilant. I could do it. Coach was right. I placed a long distance call to an out-of-town husband and left a message. "Your wife bowled 70."

We took a brief break for a chicken sandwich and headed back to the bowling alley. This time the woman beamed at me as she handed me my shoes. "You must really be enjoying this," she said. I told her it was a long story. We limped to our places. Coach with his pulled muscle, I with a disjointed left thigh.

A three year old with his mother in the next lane bowled 52. I sneered at him and put my shoulders back. Coach commented that he was embarrassed. No 15 year old should be seen with his mother at a bowling alley for five hours in one day. I managed to tally a 50 and then a 51 before heading home to the tub.

The next morning I told Coach I guessed I wouldn't go on the show, that I, with his help, had met and slayed the dragon on the edge of town, so to speak. I'd proved I could do better than 40. Enough.

He said I'd be a wimp if I quit.

I'm not clear on what 'wimp' means but I knew what Coach meant. I decided if I didn't get through to Annette. I'd go. I never even called her. I don't know why, some strange strain of masochism.

Saturday came. My intimates didn't volunteer to be among the six or eight people who'd cheer a lot. They were working, busy, sick, they said. I refused to tease them. They'd be more embarrassed than I.

I tried to get to Waltham too late. I failed. I overheard Annette turning away a woman because everyone had showed up. And I was exhilerated. But I was an authentic contestant for the Friday show. I wasn't to leave.

We watched the taping of Thursday's show. And I knew I couldn't do it. I couldn't possibly walk through that dumb cardboard-looing magic door, at least not without tripping and knocking it over. A senior spectator next to us loved Bob Gamere. She has two drinks and supper with his show every weekday evening. "Isn't he cute," she said.

Well, he was, I guess. Certainly his hair was neater than mine, and his make up looked good. I spoke with him after I'd warmed up with three gutter balls before our taping. He got basic information and I went to the bench with the other contestants. One woman brought a matching blue damp towel on which to wipe her hands between the three balls bowled.

I drew my place on the show, #1. Good. Get out there, make a fool of yourself and be done with it. I got behind the magic door and ignored the mirror there. Too late. My name was called and I got through the door. During my inane conversation with Bob I introduced my one friend who'd come with me to endure her own misery as compensation for sending in my name.

My Pin Pal was from Salem, N.H., some poor soul who'd waited for years to have his name drawn on the show. My first ball: in the gutter. My friend started chuckling. I joined her.

But the second went, by miracle, down straight and knocked over some pins. I don't know how many. I didn't care. Victory. No three gutter balls. I didn't pay attention to the third, so grateful was I to have managed a few pins down.

Not since I left the delivery room have I been so happy that time had passed. I chatted and cheered with my fellow contestants and went home with a little note from Bob telling me to expect my check in several weeks.

That check will go to Coach.

Last Friday I appeared on Channel 25's Candlepins for Cash. It was to have been my secret until after the show. But some zealous fellow workers at the Mariner managed to sneak the coming event in last week's paper.

And for any of you out there who like to send in names, forget mine. No marathon, no roller derby, no sky diving. Next time just enter me for a trip to Florida.

Police ball coming to Country Club

On Friday, May 15, the Cohasset Police Association will hold its Annual Ball at the Cohasset Country Club from 8 p.m to midnight.

Rene and Maria Rancourt will play. Rene is the soloist who sings the National Anthem at Boston Bruin home games.

The Cohasset Police Associaltion utilizes funds raised from this event in various areas, including a Little League Baseball team, and an annual scholarship of $500 to the graduating class of Cohasset High School and a Little League Baseball team.

In the past, funds were used to aid in the purchase of "The Jaws of Life," for use by the Cohasset Fire Department. Consideration for future expenditures include support for the appearance of "Toma" for a comprehensive drug and alcohol education program at Cohasset High School.

Response to the tickets by mail campaign in the past has made this social event a great success. Make a tax deductable donation, $3 per ticket, payable to the "Cohasset Police Association."

Selectmen still lukewarm to license agent

For the third time, the Selectmen have tabled the request of Police Chief John DeBassio to appoint a police officer as the town's license agent.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said he was concerned about the powers of the license agent, who would be empowered to check invoices, financial records and employment records.

DeBassio said the license agent would take no such action except in extreme instances, and then not unless he was so authorized by Selectmen.

He added that those are powers that the Selectmen have as the town's Licensing Authority, and that the license agent, representing them, would also have those powers.

DeBassio told Selectmen that the license agent would conduct his investigations while in plain clothes. Ainslie said he was concerned about a uniformed officer going into businesses and asking for financial information.

Licensing is something which has not yet been addressed effectively by the town, DeBassio said. There is no set procedure for forwarding complaints from customers of license holders to the licensing authority, he said.

Chief DeBassio told Selectmen he was "quite enthusiastic about the officer and what he could offer the town." He has recommended officer Richard J. Fairbairn be appointed license agent.

DeBassio said that the license agent would specialize in learning about licensing laws, and would be consulted by other officers when they had to deal with a license violation. The position would not give the officer any extra pay, he said.

A license agent would be able to fulfill a consumer function, he said, and to investigate complaints about license holders such as second and third class used auto dealers.

Presently, no one in the town is doing this on a regular basis, he said. The Town of Scituate is considering appointing a license agent, DeBassio said.

A license agent is needed to acquaint license holders with rules and regulations that apply to the license, he said. The Police Department could not effectively deal with liquor problems in the summer, when more minors seek to procure liquor in the town, without the license agent, he said.

Ainslie said that when they hired DeBassio as Chief they expected him to make changes to modernize the force, and that he did not wish to block him in his efforts. But, he did say that he still had reservations about the license agent position.

DeBassio first proposed the license agent position on March 18, and then again on March 25.

Tracking crime in Cohasset

Chief DeBassio to use computer codes

By tracking and tabulating crime, Chief John DeBassio may be able to decrease its rate of frequency.

To do this the police department is moving into the world of codes.

Crime analysts can predict where crimes are likely to occur. But crime analysis usually means a computer and the chief says that sort of expense is somewhere in the future.

"We're moving toward that (computerization)," the chief said last week.

"We're going to a new system of record keeping, trying to have the information readily available.

"The first step is dispatching by codes."

This means sometime a month or so from now, people tuned into the police band will hear a dispatcher direct one of the cruisers to a Code 16 at such and such address, instead of to a burglary in progress.

The chief says the log will change somewhat with the adoption of codes but times, names and services will still be listed.

"This will reduce the time spent in record keeping as well as make it easier to gather information. I understand the log is a real popular item. We'll try not to change it too much," the chief said.

The chief is in the process of hiring a civilian dispatcher who will learn the new codes immediately. The police union is already protesting that move. Right now senior men or officers handle the desk and dispatching duties.

Chief DeBassio doesn't seem concerned about the outcome of the latest grievance.

"It will take some time for the men to adjust to the new system," he continued.

Beach, parking, float fees up

By Jennifer Grisdale

The harbingers of summer in Cohasset: a proposal by the Harbor Study Committee to charge a mooring fee for floats; a vote by selectmen to increase parking fines from $10 to $20 in the Sandy Beach and Wadleigh Park areas; and an agreement by that board not to limit the number of beach stickers available to each household.

A fee will be charged for them however. The first one in each household will cost $10 and $2 will be charged for every additional sticker issued to a family member. Two-week guest stickers will also be available.

The fee for floats will be the same as that currently charged for mooring boats: $1.50 per linear foot.

Harbor study committee chairman Charles Fink admitted he hadn't heard anyone speak out in support of the proposal.

"I feel strongly businesses (with floats in the harbor) should pay," Selectman Rocco Laugelle commented. "In the middle of Proposition two and a half, we are raising everything we possibly can."

Members of both the Sailing and Yacht Clubs have voiced opposition to the proposal, and harbormaster Harry Ritter conceded he would not have mooring for one-quarter of the boats in the harbor if the two clubs removed their floats from the harbor.

The revenue from this fee would amount to between $800 and $1,000.

Easter at the new church in town

By Patricia Desmond

It was Easter on Jerusalem Road this week, colored eggs and all.

It was the first Easter celebration, and the holiest day of the year, for the congregation of the new Church of the Nativity and Assumption of the Most Holy Virgin — which is the Old Pope Memorial Church.

There was splendor and ritual in the Greek Orthodox service. There was incense, bells, embroidered banners, precious vessles, and candles.

At midnight Saturday the church was dark, save one lighted candle in the hands of the Rev. N. Michael Vaporis.

Fr. Vaporis is not the regular priest of the parish. He spend the holy week in Cohasset, praying the Greek liturgy. He regularly serves as dean of the Holy Cross School of Theology.

At midnight he was the shepherd of the congregation. One by one candles in the crowded church were lit as from one to another members of the congregation shared the light.

A woman walked into the church after the service was underway. When she arrived all the other worshippers, more accustomed to the Easter service, had taken long white candles from the vestibule.

The woman, obviously not aware of the Orthodox custom, stood watching the others proceed with the simple ceremony. Michael Vallas of Cohasset, president of the South Shore Hellenic Church and Cultural Organization, walked out for just a moment and brought her back a candle. The taper was equipped with a small aluminum pie pan, to catch the drippings.

Fr. Vaporis began his slow procession about the candle lit room. Incense wafted up to the beamed ceiling. It seemed people moved their candle in the sign of the cross.

Ex. Selectman Clark back to work

Selectmen will begin advertising for their new executive secretary beginning the week of May 6, but in the meantime they plan to hire former board chairman Arthur Clark to help keep the office going.

Clark decided not to run for re-election to the board this spring. Mary Jane McArthur recently won the three-man race for his seat.

Bruce Edmonds questioned the selectmen's authority to appoint Clark to the temporary position, scheduled to begin May 11 and continue through June 30, without either posting the job or working through the personnel board. He said if Clark is appointed to the position, he will question the appointment.

Newly appointed chairman Henry Ainslie explained he did not think his board needed to work through the personnel board in this case bcause Clark would be negotiating an agreement with selectmen only to work for a given amount of time.

However, the board did agree to send a letter to the personnel board advising them of their proposed action.

Clark would be paid the same salary he received as chairman, $117 a week. He would also receive medical coverage under the town's Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan, as do all town employees. He would not be able to pay into the pension plan, however, because he is over 70 years old.

Clark is working at the town hall now each day for free.

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Ainslie said they wanted to hire Clark exclusively because they felt he was the only one who could do the job.

Mary Jane McArthur commended Clark for volunteering his time at the town hall. "It clearly demonstrates his dedication to the town, and there are a lot of tasks that need to be completed."

She still maintained, though, that the town does not need to actually hire Clark. "I don't think we need to create a temporary position. If we all work hard I think we can get the job done."

Cohasset's week

New fire union

The fire fighters are joining the International Association of Fire Fighters Local 2804.

Thus ends the old, independent Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Association on paper.

The official election was conducted by Shirley De Marco of the State Labor Relations Commission late Friday afternoon at fire headquarters.

One of the options listed on the ballot was for no union representation.

William Protulis, president of the union, told selectmen recently the vote will have no effect on bargaining. Local men will still do the bargaining. The international will provide advice and information.

CACG expansion

Citizens Against Casino Gambling, CACG, is trying to open new chapters in communities elsewhere in the state, according to Carol Oteri, president.

While the joint legislative Committee on Government Regulations decided last week to hold the gaming bills for further study, CACG won't relax.

Police to file grievance

The police union plans to fight the proposal to hire a new clerk dispatcher.

Last week the union voted to move forward with a complaint about the decision. Chief John DeBassio said Monday he hopes a worker can be selected for the job and employed within the next two weeks.

He said the union's displeasure will not slow up the process.

The actual selection may be done by the end of the week.

The move is a cost cutting measure. DeBassio is using the dispatcher to provide additional manpower at less money. The advisory committee did not seek to cut any police jobs this year, on the chief's recommendation. The fire department, on the other hand, lost four positions.

Police Union President Richard Barrows said the union's attorney, Joseph McPartland of Quincy, is handling the matter. McPartland was unavailable for comment.

The police plan to grieve another budgetary decision. The union which just won a case involving the employment of permanent intermittent officers used several years ago to cut overtime is unhappy with a $1,000 figure in the police budget for auxiliary or special officers to patrol the beaches this summer.

Alarm system for schools

School officials are thinking about leasing an $11,000 alarm system for all the school buildings.

The superintendent's office says the system, which first was discussed a year ago, won't be on the school committee agenda in the next few weeks.

"But it is something in the future," the spokesman said.

There is an alarm system now but it is ineffective since it is set off when the heating system turns on.

The leased alarm would use sonic waves to search out intruders.

There would be 18 of the stations at the high school and six each at Deer Hill and Osgood schools.

School officials say security is already tighter in the aftermath of the break at Deer Hill.

Postal union anti bigger zip

Members of the local postal union don't like the idea of a nine-digit zip code any more than the people in the street do.

While the average person talks about the nine numbers as being too difficult to remember, Cohasset postal workers talk about the loss of jobs.

The system is awaiting Congressional action.

Expectations are the new system could cut two-and-a-half clerks' jobs from the local post office. There are now seven clerks employed.

Hayes leads library study

Dick Hayes, library director at the Paul Pratt, is chairman of a committee to study automation in libraries for the Eastern Massachusetts Regional Library System.

The System is headquartered at the Boston Public Library, which already has computer applications.

THE ROOF IS FALLING — Ken Sargent, town hall custodian, holds a piece of slate that fell recently from the town hall roof. Repairs are being thought about. (Greg Derr photo)

Dick's committee was appointed by the Regional Advisory Council made up of the 200 libraries in the region. He'd like to hear from systems designers in town who would contribute a conversation toward his education.

The region is funded with $2.3 million in state money, and each year gets additional federal grants. Top priority for grants this year is library network automation.

Easter at the new church in town

The priest in red and gold robes read from the missal "Behold through the Christ, joy has come to the whole world...and by his death, he destroyed death."

He went back to intoning in Greek. Plaintive prayers of the Resurrection.

The church, bought last year by the congregation, means for many their first Easter service in the church of their fathers.

About 300 people, including quite a few children, were at the special service. Ernest Sofis of Hingham pointed out later that until the church organized, people from Marshfield and Scituate had to travel to Quincy to attend Greek Orthodox services — or to Brockton.

"Probably 10 percent didn't even go to church on Easter," he said.

The service moved into the Mass, the usual liturgy, and some young families began trickling out.

Sofis said it is unusual for so many to stay for the full service. To accomodate the people who leave after the ritual of candles, men stand in the vestibule, handing out red colored Easter eggs.

The hard boiled eggs are a tradition, Mike Anjos of Hingham, ecclesiatical chairman of the community explained.

"For 40 days instead of saying 'hello' to each other we say 'Christ is risen' and the response is 'Truly he is.' "

The red eggs, hard-boiled, are also symbols of the Resurrection, symbols of the new life purchased by Christ's blood.

Anjos talked of the many needs the church still has. An altar screen must be purchased. And there is a need for more space for classes for Sunday school.

There is some talk of having Greek classes also. And a social center.

At the traditional breakfast after the service Fr. Vaporis talked about the week he had completed. The services begin after Palm Sunday, which in the Orthodox Church is similar to other Christian experiences. Monday and Tuesday of Holy Week the services focus on Christ as the bridegroom, humbling himself to undergo the events.

Wednesday there is an unction service, a blessing of the sick, the priest explained.

Thursday, the anniversary of the Last Supper, 12 gospels are read, all the Passion gospels. Friday is the serice of burial. A tomb is created within the church and a procession mourns the death of Christ.

Saturday at midnight is the Resurrection service. Beginning with total darkness and ending with hymns and joy.

When it was all over 13-year-old Ted Vallas of Cohasset and his 10-year-old sister Mary talked about what they liked about the ceremony. Neither of them has seen an Easter service in the Greek church before.

"What I liked best was the candles," Ted said, getting ready to crack open his red egg.

"Yeah, that was the best part," his sister smiled. Not looking a bit tired for the time.

Beaches, etc. fees up

"It hardly amounts to a great deal of money," study committee member Ted Macklin stated, "but we can't provide services as we once could for free. We felt this would be one way to make the harbor more self-sufficient."

Ritter said he will check with surrounding towns and see what kind of fees they charge. "Other towns don't tax individual floats but they do charge tie up fees for floats."

"I don't think we should necessarily follow other towns. I think we can lead the way," Laugelle commented.

Fink said he will consider holding a public hearing on this matter sometime soon to gain public input.

School security

Let's keep the school doors locked.

Now that may seem an impossible task, after all the police often find the doors to local businesses open in the middle of the night. Maybe it's too much to expect the schools, with all the dozens of entrances could be locked tight every night.

Maybe.

Just two-and-a-half weeks ago vandals pushed through the Deer Hill School. The children of the 6th Grade recovered wonderfully from the damage to the science fair, rebuilding displays and getting on with the positive lesson.

And last week school officials were talking about tightening up security. Perhaps leasing an expensive alarm system as a way of deterring future acts of vandalism.

Also last week, a police officer on routine patrol found a door open at the high school.

It's true there are many doors to the schools. And many people using the buildings. Sure, it's hard for the people responsible to make sure everything is locked tight.

But we think that is the first step toward tighter security.

Too often the unedited police log has had notations about doors being open at one school or another. Some police officers feel the system promotes breaks.

It seems unlikely a complicated alarm system tied into the police department will do any good (or much good) if doors are left open.

How can anyone be sure the person with the keys will remember to turn it on?

Computerization

The police log will soon move from its rambling and interesting style to a system of codes.

At first thought, we hated the idea. After all, we enjoy reading the comings and goings of townspeople who lose their wallets, fall asleep in their cars and complain about loud parties or barking dogs.

But Police Chief John DeBassio says he hopes that sort of general information can be continued along with the more scientific style of coding incidents and crimes.

This is the beginning of a system that has led to a decrease in crime in other communities.

Coming out...

By Patricia Desmond

The place was the parish house of the Unitarian Church.

The time was early 1971.

The scene was my coming out. Not socially, of course. I never could have made anyone's debutante list. No, I was coming out of the dark ages of a millenium of oppression.

I was a young woman, confused and deeply troubled. And it was in that period of searching, I discovered the meaning of sisterhood.

I became a member of the National Organization for Women, Plymouth County Chapter. I saw four paragraphs about the organization, just beginning then, in a shopper that was mailed everywhere at the time.

The last line said to call Linda at a Hanover number if you were interested. I did. Linda Volin, who founded the chapter, talked to me for an hour about how it felt living in the suburbs, working, when every other woman on the street stayed home, whether or not she was raising kids.

Linda moved away long ago. The last address I have for her is in Arizona. She dropped out of NOW at least five years ago — she said she felt she had gone too far to spend her time with non-paid organizational work any longer.

I suppose she had.

Anyway, shortly after my conversation with Linda the NOW people began a course at the parish house on the legal status of women.

They let me research part of the topic and act as one of the leaders.

Some in my family thought this meant I was a lesbian. Some at work (namely, my bosses) thought this meant I was a communist, radical, hippie, pinko.

I wondered why these people thought the idea of women's equality was so radical. You see when I was growing up, I was led to believe that when the word men was used in a prayer or a sentence, the reading was to be taken as human-kind, men and women.

As a child, I honestly thought when the Declaration of Independence said: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal..." what they were talking about was all people.

Silly child. I thought all Christians believed in the equality of all people as a matter of doctrine. I thought all Americans, who were Real Americans, believed in equality.

It wasn't until I was in college that I heard about the sufferage question, that I read the Constitution and saw that black men were worth three-fifths a white man in deciding representation and women weren't mentioned, that I learned any women's history.

At the time I thought the world was as naive as I happened to be.

I thought that if I could just explain what it was like to be a woman in search of something more than a starter job or explain what it is like to have someone you don't even know call you 'honey,' or the like, that these people would be believers in the idea of equality.

Well it's 10 years later and the Plymouth County NOW chapter has helped get a daycare center started in Hingham, worked through a program on sex stereotyping in public school curricula, run lectures, self-help groups, courses, consciousness-raising and more.

The 60 to 75 members of NOW today are different from the women who came together and founded the chapter a while back. The difference is today most of the women work. Quite a few support themselves and their families. They have less time. But they still share some basic beliefs.

In the early days most of the members were married and caring for young children.

I went to my first meeting not expecting to meet so many mothers, certainly not expecting to meet so many women who like motherhood. I went with stereotypes of my own.

What I found was a support group. Women who told me I could do anything I wanted to do. Who spent time encouraging each other to have all the children we wanted (which meant a range of one to four); to do the work we wanted (which meant, paid or non-paid, housework or professional careers).

Marlene Goldstein, who since moved to Brookline where she practices law, used to say again and again, "Men don't have to choose between their jobs and their children, they have both, why should we feel guilty about wanting both too?"

In the early days of the chapter, the meetings were all in Cohasset at Cushing Plaza. Now the location changes frequently.

From a core of about six, the group expanded to 10 times the number in just a few years. The membership has had large turnover but the number remains stable.

Eleanor Cooney of Cohasset, current president of the chapter, points out there is a bargain rate campaign to increase membership in May. Dues for this month only are $20, that's five less than the usual amount. Half goes to the national organization busy fighting for the Equal Rights Amendment and working to hold ground on the issue of reproductive rights.

The chapter itself isn't working on a large scale project these days. Of course there are letter writing groups and discussions.

Most of the women work on other projects these days, whether than means volunteering for DOVE, the hotline for abused women, or some other public service agency concerned about women's issues.

The work still goes on.

[NOW is having a yard sale beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 16 at the home of Ruth Spencer, 462 Main St., Hingham. Carol Schuler is in charge, call her at 749-3736, if you need information.]

In defense of humanism

Letters

To the Editor:

In response to last week's letter from Rita Burke against "humanism" I would like to point out that the word derives from the Latin humanus — of man, pertaining to mankind. Therefore humanism refers to concern for mankind in its simplest meaning. Words from the same root are humane and humanitarian.

Traditionally humanism refers to a movement in arts and letters begun in Florence in Italy with Petrarch, et al, who were devoted to the study of ancient languages and literature of the Golden Age in Greece. The movement came along again in the Renaissance in Europe represented by such geniuses as the great Catholic humanist, Erasmus, who tried to foster a rebirth of caring for people as individuals.

Christianity is an humanism. Christ came as a man among men. Christ was seen among the poor and the sinners. Christ chose Mary Magdalene to follow him. He did not say, "Listen woman, you are too low down — God doesn't hear your prayers; only the moral majority can follow me." He chose ordinary plain old human beings, not religious fanatics with devotion to ritual and showy sacrifices and unified belief. He admired the poor widow who gave her mite in secret.

Modern humanists beginning with Jefferson and Lincoln on down to the present Pope have been persons who cared about the weak and the downtrodden. People who live the spirit of St. Francis of Assisi, who are gentle and peaceable are the true humanists. People who are concerned with giving joy to old people and children through theatre and music and art programs are humanists.

Mrs. Burke has castigated humanism as a movement in society which leads to vandalism, godlessness and irresponsibility. She has taken that position along with pro-life, pro-family, moral majority leaders and even, in fact, neo-nazis and Ku Klux Klansmen. Such persons wish to quell truth by shutting off public TV and radio, by restricting the press.

I believe Mrs. Burke herself has good intentions: as an upright member of the community she is rightly shocked by the destructive forces at work in our everyday lives. But does she realize that in allying herself with anti-democratic groups in order to fight evil she may end up giving aid to the very evil she deplores?

Our system of checks and balances, imperfect as it is, has been what has saved us from totalitarianism.

Personally, Mrs. Burke, I agree with you about a great many important things. I did not elect abortion even when my doctor warned my life might be in danger and I could leave four children without a mother. I believe that babies have a soul and that they are brought into this world for a reason. Personally, I believe in God. I believe in prayer. I would like to see attention to worship in schools, so long as it is not mandatory upon those with conflicting beliefs. I believe it is God who will decide who is right and who is wrong. Therefore I believe in the right to choose, without hurting another. That is the true spirit of humanism. "Judge not that you be not judged." (Matthew 7:1). Let the person without sin cast the first stone. Who am I to decide that God doesn't hear the prayers of the Jews? or the homosexuals? or the young girls who have chosen abortion? In the spirit of humanism I can offer them what comfort and help I can give, as I would try to do for any person.

While we are on the subject, Mrs. Burke, how do you propose to educate the young children if you do away with public education? We can't all afford private schools, even with Prop. 2½. Why are people so eager to get to the moon and spend billions on defense and so reluctant to spend money on day care for poor mothers who have to work, or on good schools for the young children.

It is the first seven years that count. If you want to end vandalism, instead of knocking an esoteric "ism," why not encourage better programs for the elementary school children? The children spend the majority of their waking hours in classrooms without enough teacher guidance due to lack of funds to hire aids. That's where we lose those children.

We can't go into their homes and turn off the violent TV programs and throw out the junk food, but we can given them positive and constructive activities in the schools. That is what humanism is all about, Mrs. Burke, and I, for one, am willing to work with you for a better, more humanistic society, and to end such evils as the vandalism at the Deer Hill School.

Fence won't stop the JUMP

To the Editor:

The proposal to place chain link fences between hot youngsters and the cool swift summer waters beneath Mill Bridge and Cunningham's Bridge seems to me to lack merit.

Such structures would have all the beauty and effectiveness of the Maginot Line, and well they should. Both locations offer rigorous, albeit potentially dangerous, exercise and I would rather see energies directed in that pursuit than into destructive ones.

I think history will show that most serious accidents at both locations have involved inexperienced non-residents. In any event I would think that riding a bicycle in town produces more injuries in July and August than does jumping off the subject bridges.

Granted, offensive language and abuse of private property are unacceptable anywhere in town, let alone at the bridges, but are chain link fences the answer? I would hope that our police chief could come up with a more enlightened approach than the one under review by the selectmen if for no other reason than as long as there are summers and boys and bridges over water all the chain link fence in the world won't stop the JUMP.

The Harbormaster's report

The annual report of the Harbor Department is one of progress in many areas for the best interest of the boating public and commercial fishermen.

1. The completion of a new breakwater installed at Bryants Point out to the first Dolphin gives good protection to the boats in the Yacht Club area and the commercial boats that moor there during the winter months.

2. The installation of three new Dolphins marking the channel was completed. Sheet piling was used instead of wooden piles. It is believed that they will stand up better under the adverse ice conditions that prevail where they are located.

3. The purchase of the 17' Boston Whaler, the efforts of the personnel assigned to the Harbor Patrol and the cooperation of the Police Department produced the best results in years in curtailing vandalism and theft.

4. It is hoped by the Department, if the red tape on behalf of the Environmentalists can be complied with, that the dredging project scheduled for Lawrence Wharf will be completed before the fiscal year ends.

5. Again it becomes necessary for people who have boats in the harbor to comply with Harbor By-Laws. Those on the waiting list should reaffirm their intent to put a boat in the harbor and follow waiting list procedures.

6. The passage of Proposition 2½ reinforces the rule that mooring fees must be paid by June 1st of a calendar year. If the fee is not paid, the mooring will be removed and reassigned to a person on the waiting list.

It should also be mentioned that every effort will be made by the Department to give the best services possible within the scope of the cuts in the budget.

Again my personal thanks to the Harbor Department Personnel. My thanks also to the Highway, Tree and Park, Water, and Wire Departments who have willingly assisted whenever called upon, and my continued appreciation of the good inter-department cooperation I have always experienced.

Respectfully submitted,
Harry H. Ritter, Harbormaster

It is spring

By Horace Kostos

It is spring. The days are sometimes warm, sometimes edged with cool winds, very often sunny, always pleasant.

Bikers are kicking everything that will go into low gear into low gear. Gases explode, pistons go up and down, up and down, vroom, boom, vroom, boom.

The night sea breeze exhales against the land, chill and damp.

Clouds drift by the moon, the tides murmur, and in the distance, a lone biker controls explosions, vroom, boom, up and down.

A girl smiles at the moon hearing the biker in low gear, far away, vroom, boom.

Up and down.

She smiles occasionally and every smile incites bikers even more distant, low gear and vroom, boom, pistons race up and down, steel ones and psychic ones, vroom, boom.

It is spring.

Conway reports real estate sales up

The Jack Conway Company, New England's largest residential brokerage company, reported a sales increase of 58.7 per cent for the month of March, according to a report by Executive Vice President, John R. Reardon.

Reardon noted the company has posted an overall 35 per cent increase in sales over last year for the first three-month quarter ending March 31.

"The sales results were particularly strong in March because the company was running somewhere about 8 per cent ahead after the first two months but then a built-up buyer surge took over and we broke company records on all fronts from Beacon Hill to Cape Cod," Reardon said.

"These figures and the company's performance continue to amaze me at a time when mortgage interest rates are running anywhere between 15 and 15½ per cent," Reardon observed.

Reardon attributed much of the improvement to the influence of single buyers and families with second incomes.

"This shows that there is a terrific desire on the part of the public to own a home or a condominium and that they are willing to make almost any sacrifice to gain this ownership," Reardon noted.

The company's Cohasset office, managed by Muriel Desmond, was ranked top in the company in March and throughout the first quarter.

Picked for jury duty

Selectmen randomly picked two residents to serve as jurors in the Dedham Superior Court beginning in June. They are Thomas Trautweim of 61 Surry Drive and John Mullett of 45 Beach St.

around town

Rushing around madly this week, trying to get to the things I forgot in the whirlwind of school vacation entertainment plans, I realized my daughter picks up her inability to organize from me.

Thankfully some people around town are organized, they have the ability to call in with the news even at times when the school system is shut down.

Debbie Cook, a member of the Junior League of Boston, wanted to make sure the Mariner knew about the club's latest Show House.

She and other local people have been working hard to make the annual event a success for the club.

"It's always wonderful. But this year the house is more wonderful," Debbie said.

The house is located at 575 Boylston St., Brookline, where 48 decorators and six landscape specialists have created a show case of their work. The display, as it were, is open until May 17. Monday through Saturday the hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, it is also open from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Sundays are 1 to 4 p.m.

Eight decorators from Hingham and Cohasset and two local nurseries are included in the list of contributors.

The 48-room house is the Robert Gregg Stone house.

Speaking of school vacation, two families toured Europe last week, spending some time at Olympic skating rinks all the while.

Joe Hoffman and Lee Wilson, both 14, played on Team USA which had games last week in Austria, Germany and Switzerland.

The boys went on the tour with their families.

Joe is the son of Joe and Joyce Hoffman of Cohasset. His two sisters, Justine and Janey, also went on the trip.

Lee is the son of Lee and Helen Wilson.

This week a note came along with some other releases.

"I would also like an addition made to last week's paper sometime if you could do it for me. My son, Charlie Henry, participated in the 6th grade fair at Deer Hill School.

"He won a second prize for his report titled "Old Ironsides: A Ship and Its History" and tied with Andrew Glasfeld in the Social Studies category.

"As you can imagine, after all that happened this year and after working so hard to compete with a brother who won a first prize six years ago, we had one disappointed boy in our house when his local paper omitted his name."

Sorry the name was omitted.

Marine Cpl. Matthew Conlan, son of Patrick and Marie Conlan of 237 Forest Ave., was promoted to his present rank while serving with the 5th Battalion, 10th Marines, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Congratulations to Kenneth Corcoran Jr. of Stevens Lane on passing his real estate broker's exam.

Dotty and Bob Booth were ushers at First Parish Church last Sunday.

Last week Jean Cochrane of Cohasset managed to finish the Boston Marathon. Her time for the 26 mile race was 3:19.

Now she's preparing for the Newport marathon, which isn't until the fall. She runs about 30 to 40 miles a week, doing much of it on her lunch hours at her job in Boston.

Few of us would even think of competing in a race that long. I thought the Cohasset Jaycees Race By the Sea was too long to think of running at 10 kilometers.

Mrs. John Hower of the Cohasset Garden Club and Mrs. Stephen Bobo and Mrs. Frederic Wood of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset are preparing for a special flower show at Lothrop House Friday, May 1 and Saturday, May 2.

There will be displays from 28 other South Shore clubs at the show.

"Nature and Poet" is the theme and the works of William Wordsworth are the inspiration.

Michael Fichtner of Cohasset was sworn in to the U.S. Naval Reserve on April 21.

He has qualified for the Navy's Aviation Reserve Officer Candidate Program and will be reporting to N.A.S. Pensacola after graduation from Boston College in May 1982 to begin his Officer Candidate and Aviation Training.

Erin O'Brien of Cohasset is a member of the 1981 Springfield College women's track and field team. The squad recently returned from a trip to Santa Barbara, Calif., where they trained and competed in the Southern California Invitational Track Meet. They posted a 4-1 indoor record this winter under head Coach Harry Marra.

Last year the team compiled a 4-1 indoor record and a 6-1 mark outdoors, finishing fifth in the New England Outdoor Championships. Marra has coached the team since its inception in 1977, and has produced a 36-4 record overall.

Erin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien of Pond Street.

She is a Freshman at Springfield majoring in Health Fitness. She competes in the Distance Events.

Cohasset People...Paul Cifrino

He champions good eating habits

By Laura Doherty

Human nutrition is not just an interest or an advocation to Paul Cifrino, it has become a way of life.

Food has always been an important part of Cifrino's life. For 25 years, he and his brothers ran the chain of Supreme Markets which in 1968 merged with Purity Markets to become the present day Purity Supreme. The next year, he left the new chain to do consulting work for the U.S. government in food distribution overseas.

His interest in nutrition began when he was appointed administrator of the U.S. Food Aid Program in India where he lived from 1970-71. He learned that Indian people, if they survive through childhood, not only live as long as people in the United States but also are healthier. "You don't see any pacemakers or crutches, there," he underlines, attributing this to their diet which is mainly from the plant kingdom.

Since 1900, people in the United States have changed their diets drastically, Cifrino continues. He feels strongly that "they have to get back to the plant kingdom" because "man in his natural state was primarily vegetarian."

The nations whose people are the healthiest consume from 50 per cent to 70 per cent of their food from plants, he continues, whereas in the United States, a typical diet will provide only 25 per cent plant foods and will include a lot of extra fat, sugar and salt. Man's very own body such as his teeth, jaws and long digestive tract demonstrates that plants were meant to be the main source of sustenance, according to Cifrino. "Man must learn to trust his own body," Cifrino points out and, "Remember the gorilla which is strong, healthy and almost entirely vegetarian."

Educating people to make better food choices has become a major goal for Cifrino. As a member of the Massachusetts Nutrition Board, he has visited various institutions in order to make recommendations on food supply. Cifrino is also a member of the Human Nutrition Advisory Committee which provides a nonpartisan overview of government policies pertaining to nutrition.

Attitudes toward nutrition are changing slowly, Cifrino says, and there is a greater awareness on the part of American people who are now concerned about the levels of sugar, fat and salt in their diet. "No doubt the whole modern world went wild on chemicals, now they have pulled themselves up short," he adds.

The benefits resulting from good nutrition are many, Cifrino notes, and include not only better health but also as much as a 20 per cent reduction in food costs.

Paul Cifrino

One of the most popular classes in his course on nutrition at the Boston Adult Center is when he takes his students on a walk through an imaginary supermarket. "I show them that there are plenty of good foods right there," he says. A disappointment in his course is that many people who need it are not there, he adds, and others are looking for a "magic food" so they won't have to change their diet.

Cifrino has made many changes in his own life. He now eats much less meat and many more grain foods. About 20 years ago at the age of 40, he began jogging. Now he jogs about 4 miles a day five times a week and is delighted to see the increase in runners over the years.

Cifrino's arguments about the positive benefits of good nutrition are many but the most convincing evidence lies in the man, himself.

Orthodox Easter celebration

MEMBER OF THE CONGREGATION of the Church of the Nativity and Assumption of the Most Holy Virgin prays silently during church services at midnight Saturday.

LIGHTING THE WORLD — An altar boy relights candles at the Greek Orthodox Church at midnight Saturday after a time of symbolic darkness. Christ is the light of the world.

CHANTING IN GREEK — The Rev. N. Michael Vaporis, left, who celebrated the Easter service for the South Shore's Greek congregation, reads the liturgy during services at the church. The church is still in the process of becoming Greek Orthodox, despite the official ceremonies. An altar screen will be purchased soon and a priest will be selected by the parish. At top an altar boy waits during the service. (Greg Derr photos)

Do you need a new roof?
How old is your roof? If it's more than ten years old, it's high time to give it a close inspection. Because 15 years is about as long as most roofs can be expected to function and not look shabby.
The concentrated heat of the sun, rain, snow, sleet, gusty winds and just time alone can make shingles dry and brittle, rob a roof of its protective qualities. Let us give your roof a thorough check-up, inspect all potential trouble spots. It could save you a bundle — because a faulty roof soon leaks, and leaks can be expensive. If you roof just needs repair, we'll tell you. If you need a new roof, we'll be happy to advise you and give you a free estimate.

Churches to focus on long-term illness

Long-term illness can be devastating. In addition to the patient, family and loved ones become victims of the illness.

All concerned feel powerless and isolated as they see protracted illness wear away the resources of life and substance. Few persons know where to turn in these situations. Now help is available.

St. Stephen's, in cooperation with the First Parish Unitarian, Second Congregational and St. Anthony's Church will offer a six-session program of films and discussion to address the major problems resulting from serious illness.

The format will consist of the documentary of the last years of one woman's struggle with cancer. Her experience and that of her husband are the focal points of the series, which illustrates the major problems, questions, trials, and conflicts that almost inevitably arise for families and friends coping with unrelenting illness.

The story is augmented throughout with on-camera advice and guidance from some of the country's foremost authorities with experience in dealing with such problems as doctor/patient relationships, relationships and stress, finances, facing death, patients' rights.

After each film, discussion groups will deal with the film material. These groups will be led by trained persons in the field of counseling and social work.

The program will begin Tuesday, April 28, at 8 p.m. in St. Stephen's Church. It continues Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock. The public is invited.

Babysitting courses at Community Center

All seventh and eighth grade students interested in becoming potential babysitters are encouraged to sign up for the community center's babysitting course which will be offered in cooperation with the 4H Department of the Norfolk County Cooperative Extension Service.

The program will consist of seven classes to be held from 7 to 8 on Monday nights beginning, May 4.

Areas to be covered during the course will be safety and common sense, infant care and first aid, entertaining young children and child development, nutrition and a party for young children. Upon successful completion of the course, each participant will receive an identification card and certificate stating participation in the course.

For further information, call the center weekdays from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. at 383-0088.

Cohasset swimmers in YMCA show

The 30th annual Quincy Y.M.C.A. Synchronized Swim Show will be held Tuesday, May 5 and Wednesday, May 6 at 8 p.m. at the Y.

The show's theme is "ShowStoppers" and includes selections from the theater, films and dance. There are 56 swimmers ranging in age from eight to over 60.

Several Cohasset residents are involved this year: The director of the show is Mrs. Carol Henry who also teaches the advanced high school group. Mrs. Jean Stevens of Cohasset is the women's director this year.

These women will swim in the show along with Annie Henry of the Joseph Osgood School, Sara Bishop of the Deerhill School, and Jeannie Baccari and Suzie Collins of Cohasset High School.

Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for children and are available at the door.

New women's defense course at CCC

Registration is now being held at the Cohasset Community Center for a new Women's Defensive Awareness Program.

The eight-week course will be taught by staff members from the New England Academy of Karate. It will concentrate on enlightening potential victims of the very real possibilities of an unexpected assault that could leave them scarred for life. The course will make them aware of the hundreds of ways to prevent as well as defend against injustices.

Consisting of eight consecutive 1½ hour sessions with an optional half hour seminar following each class, the program will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Thursdays starting April 30 at the center. Junior and senior high school girls susceptible to this type of problem are encouraged to attend. The program could be a joint venture for mothers and daughters.

For further information, call the center at 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Cost of the course is $30.

LAS VEGAS NIGHT

The Cohasset High School Class of 1982 will hold its second annual Las Vegas Night Friday, May 8 in the Sullivan gym of the high school from 6:30 to 11 p.m.

Students, parents and senior citizens are welcome to have a fun "legal" night of gambling. Blackjack, poker, roulette and craps games will be set up and manned by juniors for the first part of the evening. Adult volunteers will spin, shoot and shuffle the rest of the night away.

Prizes donated by local merchants will be auctioned off at the end of the evening. Proceeds will go towards the Class of '82's senior prom.

TEACHER ACTIVITIES

Tom Lucas, art teacher at the high school, judged the Norwell Art Association members' exhibit of paintings and drawings. The judging took place at the Norwell Library March 26.

AFS CHAPTER MEETING

The newly formed AFS Chapter in Cohasset will have a meeting Wednesday, May 6 at 7:30 at the home of Alex and Barbara Spooner, 21 Gammons Road. The chapter is anxious to have any interested members of the community attend.

Communications Council, 383-0486

Ride-A-Bike coming this Sunday

The Cohasset Teachers Association will sponsor the 10th annual Ride-A-Bike from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, May 3.

This is a state-wide effort to raise funds to help the 160,000 retarded citizens through the work of the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens and its local affiliates.

All ages are welcome to participate either by riding, sponsoring a rider, or helping man check-points on the day of the ride.

Riders solicit sponsors from within the community who pledge the cyclists a predetermined amount of money per mile. After the ride, the contributions are collected by the participants from their sponsors.

Interested riders may obtain forms from Mr. Plante at the high school, Mr. Becker at Deer Hill, and Mrs. Manna at the Osgood School.

At the corner of Atlantic Avenue at Nichols Road, the younger riders may turn left, go down Nichols Road to Jerusalem Road, turn left on to Jerusalem Road and finish at the Town Hall for a four mile route. Or, they may go down Atlantic Avenue with the older riders to Jerusalem Road and continue down Jerusalem Road to Forest Avenue (Black Rock Beach), turn left up Forest Avenue to North Main Street and turn left on North Main Street back to the Town Hall for an eight mile route.

Coastline Council 766 program

The Coastline Council for Children will present "Chapter 766: An Evening for Parents" on Wednesday, May 6 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

There will be a panel discussion on the regulations, rights, and responsibilities under the Massachusetts Special Education Law, Chapter 766. The Panel will feature Lori Weiner, Chapter 766 specialist with the Office for Children; Stephen Hart, Director of Special Education for Cohasset; and Mary Benbow, Occupational Therapist for Cohasset. Caral Carlson, Child Advocate with the Coastline Council for Children will moderate the discussion and coordinate a question and answer session following the panel.

The Chapter 766 Committee of the Coastline Council for Children is organizing this session so that parents can become more familiar with the special law and local programming. The Council for Children is made up of volunteers who are working to improve area services to children and their families. It is one of 42 such citizen councils that are part of the Massachusetts Office for Children.

PRIZEWINNER — Two year-old Katie Medanger hoists her prize at the Easter Egg Hunt last week. The hunt brought about 400 youngsters to the Deer Hill School under the auspices of the Recreation Department and with the help of the Jaycees. Prizes were by local businesses.

FACTS meeting May 7

An organizational meeting of the Fine Arts Committee for the Three Schools (FACTS) is planned for Thursday, May 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center Function Room.

The group plans to establish a position of a support and encouragement for all Fine Arts Programs in the Cohasset schools and to raise money for art related programs. Committee members are currently working on membership and hope for a strong turn out at the Thursday meeting.

Tracking crime

Anyway the computer is years away.

"If the town does conform to Proposition 2½ this year, essential services won't be cut again next year," the chief said.

"If the fiscal situation clears up, with the legislature coming up with funds, we hope to go to a mini-computer system."

Quincy used a computer system back in the early 70's. Law enforcement officials there credited the project with holding down crime statistics.

Weymouth has a system of crime analysis that involves a fulltime worker but no computer. The analyst does his own math work and plots out dots and dashes on town maps indicating crimes, home addresses of criminals, accident locations, and other details.

Chief DeBassio said in a town as small as Cohasset it may be possible to chart the codes without the help of a computer.

As the department moves into more detailed record keeping, the community will be divided up into sectors.

The way the system of analysis works is that when charts are kept of particular types of crime, patterns tend to emerge.

For instance, it may be that burglaries are happening every other night on the water end of Jerusalem Road. The police department would respond by increasing police patrols in the area. The idea is to increase the likelihood of catching the crooks.

But while the idea will be put into operation soon, statistics will emerge slowly.

Crime in town is already increasing in what seems to be drastic proportions just comparing the new town report to the one issued last year.

Arrests are also up, with 217 persons being arrested in 1980 compared with 165 in 1979.

Property losses just about doubled in that year. In 1980 $407,214 in property was listed as stolen as opposed to $210,319 in the previous year.

Antique show coming to Beechwood Church

The fifth annual antique show and sale sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church will be held in Cohasset Town Hall Friday, June 5 from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday, June 6 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Antiques to everyone's liking will be on display and for sale. It will have something to interest both young and old, and in-between.

There is ample parking and a snack bar available. Sandwiches, coffee, and desserts will be served next door at the Second Congregational Church. Home baked goods will be available at the ticket area. Mrs. Geraldine Ainslie and Mrs. Linda Graves are in charge of the show.

Tickets for the raffle are available from Linda Graves. The raffle which includes a crazy quilt, a dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn, and a large crocheted elephant will be drawn on June 6.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk, ss.
No. 75F 903-C1-C3
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To ANNE K. OLIVER also known as ANNETTE K. OLIVER of Cohasset, in said County, a person under conservatorship and to her heirs apparent or presumptive and to the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first and final account of JAMES F. REYNOLDS, JR. as Temporary Conservator and the first and second and final accounts of James F. Reynolds, Jr. as Conservator (the fiduciary) of the Property of said ward have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the twentieth day of May, 1981, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this twenty-first day of April 1981.

Fire Facts

The prime concern of firefighters as they respond to a report of a fire in a dwelling is the possibility of persons being trapped. In many cases, fire victims are unable to escape on their own and must wait for help to arrive.

A small child, an elderly person, a blind person or a person handicapped in some other way will need extra assistance in escaping from a fire.

The Metropolitan Fire Rescue sticker is an important aid in assisting a firefighter to save the life of someone you love. The rescue sticker is approximately five inches square and depicts the profile of a helmeted firefighter on an irridescent red background.

The sticker can be placed on the window of a room occupied by a person needing assistance. Arriving firefighters will be alerted, by the rescue stickers, to the areas of the building where first rescue efforts should be concentrated.

The Cohasset Fire Department is participating in this national program with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The Metropolitan Fire Rescue Stickers are now available at the Cohasset Fire Department Headquarters, 44 Elm Street.

Fund-raiser at Hugo's for U-Mass radio

The Federal Communication Commission recently granted the University of Massachusetts at Boston a license to operate a public-service non-commercial FM radio station. Using the call letters WUMB, the station will broadcast on 91.9 on the FM dial to twelve South Shore communities including Cohasset and Hingham.

WUMB plans a format which will provide opportunity for debate and discussion of issues important to its listening audience. Its musical format will focus on contemporary folk music.

Funding for much of the programming must come, as with all non-commercial radio, from the private sector, and to this end WUMB-FM is sponsoring a fund-raising dinner dance to be held at Hugo's Light House in Cohasset on May 3. Tickets to this event, which will kick off the station's fund raising drive, may be obtained by sending your request and a $150 per ticket, tax-deductible donation to WUMB-FM at the University of Massachusetts, Harbor Campus, Boston, Massachusetts, 02125, to the attention of Ms. Susan G. Whitman. The dinner dance feature a drawing for a cash door prize of $7,000, for which all ticket holders will be eligible, along with fine dining and music in the beautiful setting of Cohasset Harbor.

MGM buys Hall Estate

MGM went through with the purchase of the Hall Estate last week — still no bill on gambling has emerged from the legislative committee.

The purchase of the Hull property for more than $300,000 is seen by some as an investment.

A handing along of a heritage

By Lois Martin

Clyde P. Martin died last week. I doubt you'd know him. He wasn't from around here. He was from Maine. And he was my father-in-law.

The call, the kind you dread but know might come, came early Thursday morning. He'd gone out for wood, they said, and he didn't come back. In a brief, blessedly brief moment, his life had gone by.

Yet we would learn, we who hurried to gather with the others, that the full meaning of his life didn't stop at the wood pile. 'Clydie P.,' as he was affectionately referred to by some friends, left an estate, not of money, but of character that supercedes his existence. Indeed it is safely independent of it.

PATCHES

He was a humble patrician of a large family. For three years he'd attended Bates College in Maine but had to leave when money ran out. He was a pitcher there, a sports fan all his life.

Some people said to the sons, "You've no idea how hard your father worked to keep his family going." Living in Hartland, Maine, he worked at the tannery, the singular industry and support of the community. And he was a logger. They say he and another fellow would haul out four truck loads of pulp a day by hand when two a day with the help of a crane was considered good.

Neighbors marveled aloud at Clyde's constitution. But they knew that his constitution was his family. The sons were raised with a firm hand. There was no misunderstanding what behavior was expected.

And in return there was no mistaking the father's thorough delight, his pride in what his children did. If he were here today he'd tell you about his son's expertise on second base, when that little town's American Legion team whipped the daylights out of the big guys from Bangor. As his grandsons came, that same relationship developed. They, too, got the message of right and wrong, owing no money, making good your word. And they got a grandfather whose support and faith in them was limitless.

When we got to Maine for Clyde's funeral, most of the family was there, the sons and daughters, their children, and a living room full of tow-headed great grandchildren. Clyde's newest legacy, like a field of flowers. Some of those grandsons had been nearly reared by their grandfather. The loss cut deep for the young, who suddenly knew more death than they'd like.

One of Clyde's sons told about last winter when he finally got his father into the hospital after several days' prodding. He was a very sick man, the doctor said. Learning of their grandfather's illness, three grandsons living in Massachusetts went back home to see him. They stood at the foot of his hospital bed and suddenly the old man perked up. He got up, got dressed, headed down the hall to sign himself out, as the nurse ran after him. He said he was fine, that he'd go home. And he did, recovered.

Last Saturday morning we got up before 6. And we sat in Roger and Sharlene's kitchen, drinking coffee and going over Clyde's life, their memories, his kind of special estate. The children listened to the conversation between their fathers, the tales they told. And now and then a friend came in with a pot of beans, some brownies, a ham, a hug.

The brothers laughed about the time Roger sold his father's Bates Class Ring for a nickel. "You've heard the expression 'tanning a hide,' " said Roger, "That's when I came to understand what it meant."

The family forbad their children to ride with their grandfather. His driving was infamous in Hartland. Roger said his oldest son couldn't be stopped from going with the old man..."He liked the challenge, wanted to see if he could get through it." He did.

Roger would get phone calls from friends asking if his father planned to trade cars, so they could see him when he was coming at them down the road.

One time Clyde took his sons to help shingle the roof at his hunting camp. Once there, the boys immediately started to play football. "Mister, you want to play football," said Clyde, "you can play it all the way back to Hartland." That was seven miles. And they laughed telling about how their father drove straight on by them, eyes front, hands on the wheel of the truck. And next time, they remembered, they got going faster on the work at the camp.

There was a fine crowd at the funeral, a nice service, sad but somehow warm. Eight of his grandsons were his pallbearers. What an estate, they were, what a legacy. Dressed in their best, hair combed as he would have required, they soberly carried their grandfather to his grave, a final and honorable chore.

As we headed back to our home, I saw in some of those grandsons a deference given to their father, Clyde's boy, Richard. It wasn't that they catered to grief. There wasn't much of that. Instead they recognized a value, a tradition, a handing along of a heritage. And they knew a good thing when they saw it, the handwork of Clydie P. His life had been properly celebrated.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Turn on the TV, or tune in the radio and what do you find these days? Some of our South Shore's most talented cooks. Undaunted by camera crews in her kitchen and food reporter, Dave Maynard of the program "Evening Magazine, Mary Kakas serenely went about the business of preparing a dish so tempting that viewers sent in a record one thousand requests a day for the recipe. "He was so charming and relaxing, I felt I was cooking for family or friends. After the filming Maynard's secretary, my friend, Judy Clarke, Maynard and I sat down to luncheon and he gave me his cookbook which he signed: "To a gracious hostess." Mary's favorite place to be is in the kitchen and that's where you'll find her most evenings from five to 10 p.m., cooking separate meals for her children and another for her husband to enjoy when he arrives home from the family's fur salon on Newbury St. Here is the shrimp dish Mary demonstrated in her Hingham kitchen:

1 1/2 lb. fresh, clean, deveined, medium shrimp
2 cans Pastene artichokes, drained and quartered
3/4 lb. fresh mushrooms

Sautee shrimp in 1/2 T butter, just enough to brown in electric fry pan. In pan on top of stove, make sauce:

2 T diced shallot
1/2 c. white, medium-priced wine
2 c. evaporated skimmed milk
Speck of salt and pepper
1/2 tsp. paprika
2 T cornstarch
2 beaten egg yolks

Cook approx. 15 min. until bubbly. Add to sauce 1/2 c. crabmeat. Layer shrimp, mushrooms, artichokes in chafing dish. Top with sauce. Brown in 350 oven for approx. 10 min. Serves four over rice, or patty shell.

Many listeners of WATD's Talking Information Center for the Blind, know Catherine McCaig through her weekly program called "Catherine's Cookbook Nook." What they probably don't know is that this fabulous lady is one of our senior citizens, a very lively 86-year-old. Her apartment in Winslow Village has a grand piano in one corner, a guitar in another, stacks of tapes she has prepared for radio and cases, tables and shelves overflowing with cookbooks. One of them is called "Stone Soup" and when published in 1956, it was a sellout. It was written by Mrs. McCraig. After afternoon tea with cream puffs and coconut cookies, I came away happily stuffed, with this recipe from her book:

ECONOMY CAKE
[My mother's cake, 1918]

3 c. water
3 T shortening
1 15 oz. pkg. raisins
2 c. sugar
2 tsp. nutmeg
2 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. ginger
1/2 tsp. cloves
1 tsp. salt

Cook all ingredients for 3 min. after they begin to boil. Let cool. Add 4½ c. flour and 3 tsp. baking soda. Mix until smooth. Can be baked on a cookie sheet for 25-30 min. or 3 loaf pans for 1¼ hrs., or cup cakes, baking time 25 min. Will make 7 doz. cupcakes. Oven temp. 350 deg. Good with chocolate frosting of 1/4 lb. butter, 1 lb. confectioners sugar and ½ c. cocoa blended in mixer.

"Why can't I say no?" Some of us have asked ourselves this dozens of times. It's exactly how Barbara Hargt felt after agreeing to appear on Dave Maynard's program. It all began several years ago when Barbara answered his request for recipes for his new cookbook. A family favorite she had made for 30 years, she agreed to making it on camera, never dreaming the filming would have to be repeated three times. There was a practice run in her Scituate kitchen, then a second filming which was discarded when it was discovered that an antenna had been sticking out of Maynard's pocket all the time and a third run just as Barbara ran out of eggs for this

CHOCOLATE MERINGUE PIE

Pie shell:
2 egg whites, using extra large eggs
1/8 tsp. cream of tarter
1/2 c. sugar
1/2 c. walnuts, finely chopped

Add tarter to egg whites and gradually beat in sugar until very stiff. Butter nine inch pie plate and line with meringue. Bake at 300 degrees for 45 min., or until meringue is hard. Cool.

Filling:
1 6 oz. pkg. Nestle bits
2 T sugar
3 T hot water
1 tsp. vanilla
1/2 pt. heavy cream, whipped

Melt bits with hot water and sugar. Add vanilla and cool. Beat cream until stiff. Fold into cooled, melted chocolate. Refrigerate overnight. So rich that eight pieces can be served.

'Night Must Fall' opens May 7

By David Wadsworth

The spring production by the Cohasset Dramatic Club will be Emlyn Williams' classic, English thriller, "Night Must Fall," which was first performed in London in 1935. The original production saw the playwright himself perform one of the leading roles; that of Dan, the mysterious young man.

This year marks the third time the Cohasset Dramatic Club has presented this play. Just 40 years ago, six years after "Night Must Fall" was written, the play made its Cohasset debut on the Town Hall stage, on May 24, 1941. Then again in 1954, on February 26 and 27, the play was presented; on these two nights the performances were to benefit the Cohasset Community Center.

Through the kindness of Isobel Grassie of Yarmouthport, a former Cohasset resident, and active member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club, programs of both the 1941 and 1954 productions have been donated to the club for inclusion into its archives.

The 1941 performance in the Town Hall saw a cast that looks a bit like a "Who's Who" of the Town. A number of prominent residents appeared on stage that year, and others worked backstage.

For instance, the role of the Lord Chief Justice was played by Hollis Gleason; that of Widow Bramson by Martha Blackmur; Olivia was Dorothy Henderson; Hubert was portrayed by Ralph Cahouet; Nurse Libby by Barbara Rice; Mrs. Terence by Virginia Hill; Dora by Helen Walther; Inspector Belsize was Morton Bartlett; and Dan was played by Carleton Spreadbury. Producer-Director of the 1941 performance was Paul Blackmur, still an active member of the Club, and director of numerous productions since that time.

In 1941 active membership dues for the Club were $3 and Associate Membership dues were $4. The program carefully notes that "White House Coffee will be served during the intermission between the 2nd and 3rd acts through the courtesy of G. Roland Crampton." (Not that the audience needed coffee to stay awake during the third act; that's the part where terror stalks upon the stage.) Noting further, "the Cohasset Dramatic Club exists for social, dramatic, and charitable purposes," the program states "The Executive Committee has voted the Club contribute to the Cohasset Social Service League for this year."

In 1954 "Night Must Fall" was performed two nights to benefit the Community Center. There was, of course, an all-new cast. Producing this time was Elizabeth Van Buskirk, and Directing was Phyllis Wheeler. Mrs. Bramson was played by Eleanor Clemens; Olivia by Marjorie Holman; Hubert by Preston Gray; Nurse Libby by Mary Arcand; Mrs. Terence by Isobel Grassie; Dora by Joan Condit; Inspector Belsize by Fred Cole; and Dan by Jack Allyn.

The year 1954 saw Paul Blackmur, Director of the 1941 presentation, now being the Club's President. Again both cast and crew represented a cross section of Cohasset's population. Scituate and Hingham members also were becoming prominent by that time, as the Club attracted talent from every neighboring town.

This year's members of cast and production crew represent several South Shore communities, notably, Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull, and Duxbury, as well as Norwood. Again, a hard working and talented group of dedicated amateur theatre enthusiasts have gathered together to produce and perform the classic thriller, set in an English country cottage.

Club members invite everyone to the Town Hall at 8 p.m. on May 7, 8 and 9 to see the third presentation of "Night Must Fall." It's a thriller that should not be missed. Tickets are $3; Senior Citizens free on Thursday, students $1, Thursday. The Director is Wayne Miessner; production manager is Jane A. Marshall.

Obituary

Jeffrey Barcomb

A memorial service was to be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the First Parish Unitarian Church for Jeffrey W. Barcomb of 110 Jerusalem Road, who died in a car crash Sunday near the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He was 22.

Badly injured in the crash was Suzanne Ellis, 21, of 33 Tower Lane, a friend of Mr. Barcomb's. She was reported in serious condition at the Cooley Dickenson Hospital in Northampton. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ellis.

A 1977 graduate of Cohasset High School, Jeffrey Barcomb was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Barcomb. Besides his parents, he leaves two brothers, Scott, a student at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and David of Cohasset; a sister, Melissa Barcomb of Cohasset; his paternal grandparents, William Barcomb of North Adams and Gertrude (Kent) Jeffries of Holliston; and his maternal grandfather, Aubrey M. Callis of Mathews, Va.

Donations may be made to the Burn Center, Massachusetts General Hospital, 55 Fruit St., Boston.

Cohasset schools will progress despite 2½ says Supt. Crowell

By Jennifer Grisdale

While Proposition 2½ passage may be grinding some school systems to a halt, Cohasset's will continue to progress.

That's School Superintendent Eugene Crowell's philosophy, and to prove it he is working on a proposed five-year goal plan for the school system.

In the meantime, he would like members to make suggestions to him about what should be included in that plan. He wants them to have a formal discussion soon on what their goals are for the next school year.

Crowell said his long range plan will recommend "fine tuning" in such areas as student discipline, continuing academic excellence, policy development, and building maintenance.

For example, he explained, the issue of whether the Joseph Osgood School should remain open must be addressed, and the options considered.

Committee member Martha Gyesteby said she felt the whole policy of tenure for teachers should be examined and the curriculum for the school system should be kept updated.

Chairman Irene Brown suggested members put down their thoughts on this matter and give them to Crowell so they can be discussed at the next meeting.

The School Committee voted Crowell's recommendation for next year's school calendar which features the traditional after Labor Day beginning of school as well as both the winter and spring vacations.

The committee and superintendent had considered several other calendar options including one that featured a combined winter-spring vacation and a pre Labor Day start of the school year.

The only unusual points to this calendar, Crowell explained, is the elimination of a day off for students while teachers attend the Norfolk County Teacher's Convention scheduled for September 30, and minimum use of the five allowed snow days for students.

The reasoning behind these two moves is the late Sept. 7 occurrence of Labor Day this year. Crowell said he did not want the school year to continue until the end of June because it upset summer plans. School is now scheduled to close June 18, provided

Rare virus begins to fade

By Patricia Desmond

In the last six months, Dr. Roger Pompeo treated 500 persons suffering from a virus that can create a fatigue lasting up to five months.

"It's at the tail end now," Dr. Pompeo said. "I've seen fewer patients this week with symptoms."

The good news about the virus is: you get better. Treatment is rest and other common sense ways of dealing with the symptoms.

The disease is cyto megalo virus. Actually the virus is spread widely throughout society.

Why does it create disease when certain people pick it up?

Dr. Pompeo said the answer is still unknown. He has been keeping track of the data on his patients with the virus and is thinking about doing a study.

The doctor, who is in family practice, made it clear during an interview that he is not an expert on CMV.

He first came across a case of the disease last November when an elderly woman came to him with symptoms of fatigue. At first he said he thought she had mononucleosis but those tests came back negative.

Anyway it turns out that CMV has been running rampant on the South Shore, indeed in the state in recent months.

"As I said, the virus is ubiquitous. It is totally benign," the doctor explained.

"If you came to me asking questions about CMV in November, I couldn't have answered them," he said.

Some people have the virus and aren't affected by it at all. Why do others develop symptoms of disease?

Dr. Pompeo said medicine hasn't found the answer.

Other people get the virus and show signs of fatigue.

"There are varying degrees. Some people have to give up tennis, some have to give up partying, some have to give up running, some have to give up work."

Quincy Court honors Stockbridge

Law Day, a traditional celebration at Quincy District Court, brought the award for police officer of the year to Cohasset Police Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge.

The band played the national anthem. The Mayor of Quincy, a couple of clergymen and a few important court officials had a word or two to say last week as the Court House took time out to pay tribute to the town's only police lieutenant.

Charlie Stockbridge is a man of quiet dignity. But he smiled just abit when he talked about the honor bestowed on him. Smiled and agreed that he couldn't remember the award going to a Cohasset officer before.

Chief John DeBassio was on hand at the court house where Charlie spent many hours prosecuting Cohasset cases. The chief did the actual presentation of the placque. Charlie's wife, Arlene, was given a bouquet of roses as a part of the ceremony.

Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, gave Charlie recognition for all the years when he was completely in charge of handling the town's prosecutions. That was before the district attorney's office took over the job.

The selection of the outstanding police officer of the year was made by the members of the Quincy Court and several members of the Quincy Bar.

The placque reads the "Distinguished service award for Law Enforcement, presented to Lt. Charles E. Stockbridge, an outstanding member of

Gymnast Pamela Maynard is a winner

By Laura Doherty

A winner is a winner, is a winner, is...Pamela Maynard.

Thirteen year-old Pam seems to have spent a good part of her young life striving to win and so far she has managed to succeed. This week, the young Cohasset gymnast is down in Florida competing in the Eastern Senior National Championships. She has already won state and regional championships.

Last year, at this time, Pam was fighting to win a different sort of a contest, as she struggled to recover from Osgood Schlatter's Disease. The disease, common among athletes, was serious for Pam and had begun to affect the growth plates in her knees. As a result, she had to return home from Muriel Grossfeld's School of Gymnastics in Connecticut and for seven weeks both legs were wrapped in splints.

At that time, although she suffered a good deal of pain and frustration, Pam always knew she would go back to try again. "I was afraid I wouldn't be as good as I was," she remembers.

"Everyone thought she would never go back, but she went back and she won," her father adds proudly.

Pam was only 10 when she made the decision to attend school far away from her family and the town she loved. But even at that young age, as seen in a report she did for her fifth grade class, she knew what she wanted. "Gymnastics is my favorite hobby because I'm best at it," she wrote. "In gymnastics you have to have confidence in yourself. I plan to be in the 1984 Olympics. I have 15 medals and seven ribbons."

Now, having returned to the school, Pam's daily routine is staggering; in addition to her regular academic classes, she spends five hours a day five days a week in training at the gymnasium. "I guess I'm used to it now," she says.

A major recent concession to her gymnastic career was having her long hair cut. Pam is less than enthusiastic about her new curly haircut. "They call me Mop at school," she laughs. It was necessary, explains her mother, Anna, because they don't want the girls spending a lot of time on their hair and also it has to look neat during competitions.

Another item that Pam is not at all happy about having to give up is junk food. Sighing, she explains

Cohasset's week

Murray legislation

Enabling legislation has been filed by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset authorizing the state to enter the Northeast Regional Energy Power Compact.

This compact is comprised of the six New England states, Maryland, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. The compact will create a joint agency in the Northeast region, which will establish state level policy facilitating the purchase of hydro-electric power from Canada.

This fast track legislation addresses the voting, financing, and other rights of our Commonwealth in it's membership to the Compact. It authorizes the Governor to act in the name of the state. Mary leanette and Rep. Angelo Cataldo of Revere, along with the representatives of the other ten states will present this package to Congress for ratification on or around May 10.

Rep. Murray said, "We should be receiving hydro-electric power by 1985. The cost of this power will be between 30 percent and 50 percent less than the present generating power cost."

The local lawmaker further explained, "When the equipment for transmitting power and the construction of the generators is amortized, the power will be known as free power in Canada. This is because unlike fossil and nuclear power, hydro-electric has a no-cost factor."

Clam probe

The selectmen say they will look into reports two men from out of town were able to obtain resident clam licenses.

The cost of a license for a resident is $5 and for non-residents the cost is $25. Apparently false addresses were used.

New appointments coming

Various annual appointments will soon be made by the selectmen. Some routine appointments are expected to come up this week.

Kearin Dunn of Pond Street has applied for the position of fence viewer.

Peter Basiere has applied for a seat on the conservation commission.

Street lighting study

The problem of the 30 percent deficiency in the street lighting account is still being studied by the selectmen.

Before a final decision is made a public hearing will be held. No date has been scheduled.

The present budget for street lights is $41,500, with price increases already in effect the seletmen would need $22,000 extra to keep all the present lights turned on in the next fiscal year.

No sewer progress

Despite a request from the sewer commissioners to look into the snafu over funds for the new sewage treatment plant, U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds office doesn't know the project's status.

An answer is expected by the end of the week. Meanwhile the town is under court order to come up with design plans for a waste water treatment plant, as they call it, by September.

Seafood permit approved

The sewer commission last week approved a permit for Harry and Marjorie Ritter, allowing them to open a seafood take-out market at 95 Elm St. The permission is subject to state approval.

No beach rules yet

The new beach and dump stickers will come with a set of rules, still unavailable.

The stickers will cost $10 for the first car in a family and $2 for other cars.

Raise for Supt. Crowell

The School Committee showed its appreciation for the weeks of hard work put out by new Superintendent Eugene Crowell, who had to spend many of his first months in a new system coping with the many budgetary problems associated with Proposition 2½, by granting him a 7 percent raise and extending the term of his present contract from September 1983 to August 31, 1985.

"Congratulations for a job well done, and I hope you'll stay longer than 1985," said committee chairman Irene Brown.

Crowell's new salary will be $41,000. The committee also granted him another week of vacation, bringing the total number to six, and raised his travel allowance from $1,200 to $1,500.

"I want to publicly thank the committee," the superintendent commented. "I like it here," he added.

Pamela Maynard is a winner that "You can't eat it during the competition season. But in the summer, we can eat as much as we want."

One of Pam's most noticeable qualities, according to her parents, is her endurance which was how she managed to be accepted at the highly respected Grossfeld school to begin with. "They just took her into the gymnasium, told her to run and left her there and, according to Pam's father, Pam kept running until they came back." He explains that this was one of many endurance tests given to Pam before she was accepted.

It also takes endurance to do the physical therapy which, as a result of her bout with Osgood Schlatter's Disease, she must do if she is to remain in gymnastics. Every day, she must lift a 20 pound lead weight 30 times with each foot.

Her mother feels that Pam's experiences have made her more self sufficient and mature. She is currently on the honor roll and recently received the good citizenship award. "She has been through a lot, but she has that drive." Anna Maynard concludes.

Pam, herself, says that it's all been worth it. "You need hard training to make it to the top," she adds. When asked why she wants to make it to the top she says, "It's mostly the fun and the sport and the popularity when you win."

John Maynard chuckles as he recalls a recent incident resulting from Pam's successes when he was asked, "How does it feel to be the father of Pam Maynard?" Despite the nearly $8,000 expense for Pam's training, it is obvious that both Mr. and Mrs. Maynard are very proud of their daughter.

"We're also very grateful for all the support she has received," they add. "Many area merchants and businessmen were willing to help us out with the enormous cost of Pam's training from the very beginning," Mr. Maynard concludes.

Testimonial coming for Arthur Clark

A gala testimonial dinner as a way of saying "thank you" for over 40 years of public service to Cohasset will be held Thursday evening, May 28 at Hugo's Lighthouse, to honor Arthur Clark. He recently retired from the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

General Chairman of the group arranging the dinner is Philip Murray, Sr., who says that "there's just so many people in town and in surrounding towns who wanted a chance to thank Arthur Clark for his long and dedicated service to our town."

Clark had served on the School Committee, the Water Commision and finally as a member and chairman for a number of years of the Board of Selectmen.

Serving on the arrangements committee are Francis Mitchell, ticket chairman; Henry Ainslie, Jr., A.J. Antoine, Jr., Osborne Ingram, Gerard Keating, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meallo, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pape, William Signorelli and Mrs. John Winters, III.

Tickets are available from the members of the committee and since they will be limited to the capacity of the Lighthouse, those interested are urged to get theirs early.

Wadleigh parking

Wouldn't it be a good idea for the town to find some way of creating legal parking for Black Rock Beach?

The recreation commission has a long stalled plan for turning Wadleigh Park into a parking lot. That can't be quickly done since the land was given to the town with the restriction it remain park land.

Do they call that small green traffic island a park? Or is the park the larger portion of the land that abuts the Salvador property?

Anyway we aren't sure there is a need for any parking lot as large as the 44-car scheme already designed for the recreation commission.

We think the way to find out whether the people of Cohasset are interested in using Black Rock Beach is to loosen up the traffic regulations and allow people who purchase the new beach stickers to park at Wadleigh Park.

Town parking regualtions currently prohibit that.

Now some townspeople may not even know where Black Rock Beach is, since public access is limited by the zero availability of legal parking within reasonable walking distance. It happens to be the rocky beach at the foot of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue.

Of course, it is picturesque as it is, sitting uncluttered by beach-goers.

Isolated beaches are more special. And Black Rock is certainly isolated by the lack of parking.

Occasionally a car or three will park illegally by the roadway and some young kids will steal off into the ocean, with the clear intent of skin diving or maybe just watching the surf crash on the rocks at the small beach. Almost always the cars will end up tagged.

So the beach — which is the only one actually town-owned — remains a neighborhood beach.

It seems unlikely a change in parking regulations would lure many people away from Sandy Beach for summer sun bathing. That superb beach is owned by the Sandy Beach Association and maintained for the benefit of the people of Cohasset.

But we would like to see the selectmen study on the concept of providing some parking for Black Rock Beach. It's possible a few spots could be designated for parking by permit only.

Somehow we think a couple spots would serve the interested public. And that could be done without court action or without turning the entire green space into a parking lot. The cost would be the cost of a new sign, designating the conditions.

Poison for Profit

By Paul Steven Stone

Our children are being poisoned. It's not their bodies in danger, but their minds. Not their lives at stake, but the quality of their lives. Every day they ingest more violence, more hate, more negativity and destruction than any of us ever had to deal with in a month's time when we were growing up.

Our children are being poisoned. And we know the symptoms well enough; the lassitude, the anger, the eruption of energy that spends itself in violence and self-destruction. It's no good to blame the drinking and the drugs on forces beyond our control. We have to take control. We have to set standards — and live standards — that will offer guidance where it is needed, love where it is lacking.

Our children are being poisoned. Their sponge-like minds are soaking up the joys of mutilating defenseless, screaming women; the thrills of smashing up ten to 20 cop cars in a single chase; the glories of adolescent sex in full bloom; the agonies of life in a world where no one understands you; the payoffs of successful thievery. Over and over they are told that violence can resolve problems, that doing their own thing is doing the right thing, that pleasure is a god and there is no obligation given in this life but to serve that god.

We have placed our children in the hands of poor companions — the broadcasters, the publishers, the movie makers. We tend to forget that our children, as sophisticated as they are, haven't the will nor the wisdom to discriminate between good values and pleasant sensations.

Left to their own devices they have taken up and held as true those ideals that seem to glitter most brightly. They have come to seek stimulation and gratification as if that were the be-all and end-all to life as it should be lived. Clearly, we are not giving them values they can cling to. Perhaps the absence of those values in our own lives creates a vacuum that is all too quickly filled with glittering trash in the lives of our children.

Our children are being poisoned. The poison flows from the radio, from the movies, from books, from television, from the shallow portraits of self-indulgence that we present.

We bemoan the absence of true heroes for our young to admire, and yet when it comes to fighting a force so malevolent that it threatens their very health and happiness, our eyes conveniently pass over the problem. Or else we see the problem as so large, so pervasive that it seems unstoppable. Go fight Gulf & Western Industries or Paramount Pictures for creating something as nasty and poisonous as "Friday the 13th Part II." Go fight WNAC or WCVB in Boston, two of the stations which air an ad for that movie which brings you and your children right up to the first-person edge of committing seven or eight murders, all in less than a minute. Go fight the poor fool struggling to make a living with a local theatre that shows such crap to your kids.

Commentary

I was foolish enough to sit down with my three year-old daughter to watch the Celtics playoff game one night at 7:30 when an ad for "Friday the 13th Part II" started to flash its eerie aura of death and destruction into my family room. I wasn't able to reach the on/off knob before some fellow with a dramatic voice — someone who probably has children of his own — told me and my daughter that "The death count continues." Who is he talking to? What is he saying? What is he trying to do? It all boils down to making a few bucks for some actors, for some movie technicians, for some TV stations, for some theatre owners; and making a lot of bucks for Paramount Pictures and their parent money maker, Gulf & Western.

"The deathcount continues." Do we allow our children to hear that five or ten times an evening, to see humans as prey, to learn the various ways that a defenseless human being can be killed? How does that jibe with the pain we've expressed about the killings in Atlanta? Can we be parents in the morning, outraged that the senseless murder of innocents goes on, and then somehow find it unconnected — or unimportant — that a gleeful voice will take us into a fast-changing landscape of murder and mutilation with a cavalry charge of "The Deathcount Continues?"

Our children are being poisoned. There are respectable businesses and businessmen who are making fortunes on the witlessness of youth, the childish craving for stimulation that will lead an infant hand into a fire or an adolescent mind into a movie that celebrates nihilism and murder. It's time we peeled the veneer off the respectability of polluting our youth. It's time we took back the rewards that make those poisons so profitable. It's time we fought to save our children.

Our children are being poisoned for profit. And the deathcount continues.

Come to the High School Chorus

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to call attention to an event coming up on May 13 at the Cohasset High School Auditorium — the annual Junior-Senior High School Chorus and Band Concert.

The students involved spend many long hours, even weeks, putting together a most enjoyable evening of music. Mr. Marks, the music director, and Mr. Dodge, the band director, have worked wonders with these young performers in the past; and this year's performance promises to live up to all those past shows.

It is my intention, through this letter, to call attention to this wonderful effort and ask that the townspeople support and attend these performances. The attendance, in the past, has been very disappointing to these youngsters. Most people tend to complain about young people's activities after school. Well, here is an opportunity to see for yourselves what some of our children are "up to" in their spare time.

Those of you who choose to attend are in for a most enjoyable evening. For those of you who, for one reason or another do not attend, I can only say that it is your loss.

Once again: the date, May 13; the time, 7:30 p.m.; the place, Cohasset High School Auditorium; the cost, free.

Yours truly,
Patricia Litchfield
Beechwood Street

School briefs...

The School Committee approved this week the high school concert band's proposed trip to a competition at Clark University on May 21-22. Students in the band are financing the trip, according to School Superintendent Eugene Crowell, but the school system will supply a bus and van. The concert band won this competition last year.

The committee accepted with regret the resignation of Karla Watts, instructional aide, and Joan Ferry, activity aide. Members approved the appointments of three coaches: Gino DiGirolamo, varsity field hockey; John Mika, varsity combined boys-girls cross country; and Edward Minelli, varsity boys' basketball.

The School Committee approved the appointments of some presently non-tenured teachers. Members plan to vote on the rest of the non-tenured teacher appointments in June. Appointed were Gregory Jones, science; Marea Kotiadis, reading; Jeffrey Dodge, music; Joseph Bouchard, social studies; Michael Gill, health coordinator/teacher; Kathryn Fox, music; and Denise Yess, speech therapist.

Jones, Bouchard, and Fox will become tenured teachers once these reappointments go into effect.

The committee approved the reappointments of the department chairmen: Clark Chatterton, athletic director; Charles Davis, mathematics; Samuel Erbe, science; William Kite, English; Paul Narkiewicz, language; Edward Sheehan, social studies; and Marilyn Watson, physical education.

The School Committee voted unanimously this week to support the formation of a Cohasset Special Service Parents Advisory Council.

Cohasset sculptor wins Chilmark Award

White's 'Five-Gaited House'

Cohasset Sculptor Richardson White received this year's Chilmark Award at the National Sculptor Society's 48th annual exhibition in New York.

White, who has devoted a lifetime to creating bronze statues of animals, won the coveted prize for his "Five-Gaited Horse." The Chilmark Award of $1,000 is presented annually to the best miniature in metal exhibited at the Society's spring show.

Winning prizes for his bronzes is not a new occurrence for White. Earlier he was the recipient at the show of the nation's oldest and largest association of sculptors of the Bronze Medal for his "Bull" (1973) and the Hexter Award for his "Rearing Clydesdale" (1976).

White's work is currently on exhibit in Boston at the Arvest Galleries on Newbury Street and in New York City at the Sportsman's Edge.

CACG names new directors

Members of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc. met in Hingham recently to receive nominations for additional directors of the organization.

Carol Oteri, of Hull, president of C.A.C.G. announced that the expanded board will "draw attention to the fact that the issue of casino gambling goes far beyond the borders of Hull and Adams."

She added, "It is not surprising to receive offers of support from all areas of the state because the issue of casino gambling now has national significance."

Realtor Jack Conway of Cohasset, C.A.C.G. board member, reinforced Oteri's stand that casino gambling is a statewide issue.

He said, "It does not simply concern two towns. If casino gambling comes in all cities and towns will be dessimated."

C.A.C.G. Board Chairman, Paul Reardon, retired justice of the state supreme court, said, "The people of Massachusetts, through their representatives in the General Court should kill the move to bring casinos here. Powerful forces are at work to introduce them. Their arrival would both cheapen and degrade life in this Commonwealth. Hull and Adams would just be a beginning. We do not need smooth talking gentlemen from the West with their highly paid local agents to tell us that we will improve our life by following Las Vegas, Reno, Tahoe and Atlantic City."

Referring to the anti-casino gambling petitions recently presented to Governor King he said, "The 10,000 people who have joined with us will be joined by thousands more. We will seek the support of every citizen who views life as more than a succession of evenings over a gaming table."

For some few people other symptoms develop, like abdominal pain, chest pain or joint pains similar to arthritis.

When the disease is present the spleen and liver are enlarged, as are the lymph glands.

When questioned, Dr. Pompeo saidthere are two cases where care is advised.

For people with enlarged livers, which subside as the disease does, they should remember not to drink alcoholic beverages.

The second possible problem is that pregnant women with the disease may transmit it to their unborn child which may result in a congenital abnormality.

Dr. Pompeo said that among his patients there have been no cases of permanent liver damage. There are a few pregnant women with the disease. Results are unknown.

What can be done to prevent the disease.

Nothing yet discovered, the doctor explained.

"I'd really rather talk about toxo plasmosis," he said. "Which is a disease you can get from cats."

There people can prevent contagion by careful handling of litter boxes and not breathing in the fumes.

"You come in contact with CMV if you go shopping, you can't help being near the virus. But as I said that doesn't mean you'll come down with the disease."

"I tell my patients there's really nothing you can do. You're going to be tired for three to five months."

There is a very low incidence of complications with CMV and those are treated by antibiotics. For people with sore throat, they are told to gargle. For people with a cough, they are told to drink water. And people who are tired are told to sleep.

The disease seems to strike more adults than children. And people who contracted the disease in the fall seemed to have more severe cases than people who contracted it more recently.

"It would need study but my unscientific opinion is either there has been a mutation in the virus or it's something to do with the warmer weather.

Dr. Pompeo has been in touch with Dr. Nicholas Fiumara of the state public health department about the disease. He has also contracted other specialists in the field.

He thinks the outbreak of the disease is more widespread than realized. His own patients come from all over the South Shore. About 30 percent live in Cohasset.

"And too my figures could be deceiving. Some one of my patients with CMV might be talking to a friend who is feeling tired and say, I know who can fix you up, and send them to me."

The doctor thinks the state needs a better system of keeping track of contagious diseases.

"If you know what's going around in the community, you can do better at diagnosis."

The change he would like is a system of clinics in designated areas to monitor the incidence of disease.

the Cohasset Police Department, a protective agency..."

Charlie has been on the force for 26 years. He was promoted to lieutenant on Oct. 2, 1975.

After the ceremony Chief DeBassio said anybody that has been in police work for 26 years deserves a few plaudits.

"I was very pleased to make the presentation," he said. "The lieutenant has been invaluable to me, having come as I did, some seven months ago.

"He has taken the time to show me around and to make an effort to make the transition perfectly comfortable."

The lieutenant is thinking about retiring from the police force within the next year. He said he doesnt plan to give up working, he has something else in mind.

Charlie said no date has been set for his retirement. He is thinking about September, however. Right now he is running the 4 p.m. to midnight shift.

The chief said he believes the department will miss the award-winning officer.

"He certainly has a reputation that extends beyond Cohasset," the chief said. "One evidence of that is the court award."

The chief said the town will give the lieutenant some suitable recognition before the retirement takes effect.

Jean Cain oil paintings on exhibit at Art Center

By Patricia Desmond

Jean Cain packed up her life in quaint, suburban Hingham a year ago, moving with easel and husband to Beacon Street.

Her oil paintings are on display, along with photography by Joan Hacker of Duxbury, at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset for this month. The exhibit closes May 23.

More than a hundred friends and admirers of the two women looked over the show at its opening last week.

Jean calls her display "Transition." It begins in the streets of Hingham and moves right along with her life to the structures of Boston. In this year of transition, Jean's focus has increased. Like a photographer, cropping a frame closely, Jean now moves in on her subject.

Perhaps the more distant look was appropriate for Hingham scenes. But the newer work is startlingly good.

There's a feeling of grey and pink that over takes her palette. For whatever reason, one painting after another, in Hingham and in Boston, uses various shades of the two colors.

Jean said she didn't even realize she was doing that until she put the material for the show together.

The last of the Hingham series, "Back Street" is the scene in the Square along the railroad tracks. That scene is tighter, closer, than the earlier work.

There's an interesting quadritch assembled on a wall, called "Sunday Noon Hingham." The four paintings fit perfectly together, giving an interesting dimension to the scene on South Street in Hingham Square.

The "Arthur Fiedler Footbridge" a large canvas in greys holds a bold, pink arch, different from the sharp angles of the rest of the work.

Jean expects her next series will be somewhat different in tone. After she saw her use of color, grouped as a whole, she decided to put certain shades away.

The year in Boston has been spent in concentrated art. And the effort shows an incredible progression.

The Hingham scenes are well done, well executed. They are realism and local color. But the last Hingham scene and the Boston views are intense, alive, dramatic artistry.

Working 9 to 5 at art is paying off for Jean Cain.

Before moving to Boston, Jean was manager of the Bare Cove Gallery.

She said she began painting 20 years ago, doing still life work. Soon she started looking out the windows for her subject.

"I paint where I am," she said simply.

Joan Hacker calls her part of the display "Mainescapes." Done in Kodak color, the photos are seascapes and still life arrangements.

Several are seen through a fog, that at first glance appears to be some type of filter. Joan explained the work was done in available light.

Her work is composed well.

Joan said she can see her view is changing in her later photographs. She's moved from a bold appraoch to a soft one. Now she sees the romance of Victorianna and her camera snaps it up.

The gallery is open weekdays from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The center at 103 Ripley Road can be reached at 383-9548.

Crime Watch coming May 18

Crime Watch and Project Identification go community-wide at 7 p.m. Monday, May 18, at the high school.

The funds for the program are coming from Jack Conway, Realtor, according to Police Chief John DeBassio.

The programs are geared toward preventing burglaries. The program is multi-faceted, using increased security measures on homes and businesses beginning with items as simple as dead bolt locks for doors vigilence in locking windows.

Conway will speak at the opening program, which will last an hour-and-a-half. Chief DeBassio will outline the program. There will be a film on the identification program and demonstration of locks. Representatives of the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council will participate.

around town

☐Get-well wishes to Marie Dolan who is recovering nicely at Carney Hospital from a recent heart attack. Her friends say she'll be hospitalized for another week and then home, staying quiet, for another six weeks.

☐Carol Bonnar has been named Director of Development for the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Carol will be responsible for carrying out the annual giving solicitation and coordinating the agency's Second Century Fund Campaign.

The Second Century Campaign is a statewide effort to raise $3 million in capital gifts. The monies raised will fund necessary physical plant improvements, strengthen the agency endowment, and allow the MSPCC to pioneer new programs to help prevent child abuse and neglect.

Carol assumes her new role after having been Director of Annual Giving and Alumni Activities at Milton Academy. She is affiliated with the Massachusetts Society of Fund Raisers, the American Society of Training and Development, the Harvard Club, and the Junior League of Boston.

She resides at 22 Gammons Road with her husband, Jay, and their three children, Christopher, Caroline, and Brian.

Thursday, May 14: Early Release Day; baseball, Norwell at Cohasset; boys tennis, Norwell at Cohasset; softball at Norwell; girls tennis at Norwell; and golf, Holbrook at Cohasset.

Friday, May 15: Warnings due.

SOCCER

The Bay State League "B" team, coached by Charlie DeSantis, won their third victory beating Newton 3-1. Goals were scored by Mike DeSantis and David McDonald, with an outstanding goal tending effort by Greg Igo.

LAS VEGAS NIGHT

The Cohasset High School Class of 1982 will hold its Second Annual Las Vegas Night Friday, May 8 in the Sullivan gym of the high school from 6:30 to 11 p.m.

Students, parents and senior citizens are welcome to have a fun "legal" night of gambling. Blackjack, poker, roulette and craps games will be set up and manned by juniors for the first part of the evening. Adult volunteer dealers will spin, shoot and shuffle the rest of the night away.

Prizes donated by local merchants will be auctioned off at the end of the evening. Proceeds will go towards the Class of '82's senior prom.

ART

High school art students are participating in the 25th annual art exhibit at the Second Parish Church in Hingham held May 6-May 9.

MUSIC — CHORUS

The Junior SEMSBA Music Festival took place in Norwell recently and the following Cohasset students participated: Sandra Best, Jennie Packard, Leah Burbank, Susanne Tehranian, Lisa Morse, Heather Davenport and Kim Wright, chorus; Cynthia Conklin and Skip Urmson, band.

Cohasset's Senior High Chorus will compete in the American Choral Director's Association (ACDA) Massachusetts State Competition, Saturday, May 9 at Acton-Boxborough High School.

Cohasset's annual Jr.-Sr. High Spring Choral Concert will be held Wednesday, May 13 at 7:30 p.m. in CHS auditorium. The public is invited; refreshments follow in the cafeteria.

MUSIC — BAND

The Junior High Concert Band and the Needham High Concert Band, plus both junior jazz bands, will perform in a concert in the auditorium Monday, May 11 at 7:30.

COLLEGE FAIR

The National College Fair will be held at the Hynes Auditorium on Boylston Street in Boston May 6 and 7. Representatives from schools, colleges and universities from all over the country will be represented and will answer questions about their institutions. The hours of the Fair are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 6 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday, May 6 and Thursday, May 7 from 9 a.m.-noon.

Since college planning is a family activity, it is strongly suggested that parents and students attend this program. The Guidance Department suggests that the Wednesday evening session might be the most appropriate time and would not interfere with school schedules.

Materials describing the Fair, institutions which will be represented and information about financial aid have been distributed to all Juniors.

Library Friends to hold membership drive

The Friends of the Cohasset Library will hold their annual membership drive from May 4 to May 16, mornings, in the lobby of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Memberships to the Friends, a volunteer organization that supports the library with auxiliary programs and volunteers, are more important than ever this year.

The library's book budget will decrease by 40 percent because of Proposition 2½ and the Friends hope to help supplement the loss. In addition, they buy memberships in Boston's most popular museums — the Fine Arts, Science, Children's, Transportation and the Aquarium — which are used by Cohasset residents. Last year 1,000 families took advantage of this valuable service.

The Friends also sponsor children's programs, summer reading programs, volunteers in the library who do the work of two full-time staffers and 'books on wheels' service to local nursing homes.

The annual membership drive and the used book sale, held in April, are the Friends' only revenue generating activities.

Your library card is free, but all the activities that enhance and strengthen the library need your contributions.

Be sure to drop in during May 4 to May 16 to begin, or renew, your membership in the Friends of the Cohasset Library!

League open house

The officers and board of directors of the Social Service League of Cohasset invite the public to attend an open house at 1 p.m. and the annual meeting at 1:30 p.m. at their new location St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Wednesday, May 13.

The speaker will be the Rev. John Benbow, minister of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset. The topic will be "The League is on the Move. What's Next?"

Quilting at CCC

For all who have admired the fabric picture frames which are now very popular, the Cohasset Community Center will offer a one-day workshop with quilting expert Mary Struzziero.

The $6 program is scheduled for Wednesday, May 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Register for CCC camp

The Cohasset Community Center has announced that applications are now being accepted for Camp Quonahasit.

This unique summer camp is especially designed to meet the needs and abilities of young children between the ages of three and five. Now in its second season, Camp Quonahasit provides a program emphasizing the development of gross motor skills.

Most of the activities are held outdoors, with a wide variety of equipment specially purchased for the development of physical skills. An important part of our camp experience is our "Tumble Tots" program, which provides an introduction to gymnastic skills.

Obituary

Anne O'Neill

Anne R. (Steinkrauss) O'Neill, 67, of Cohasset, died April 24 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a long illness.

She was born in Cambridge and had lived in Milton before moving to Cohasset 26 years ago.

She was a past president of the Carney Hospital Ladies of Charity.

Wife of the late Atty. John J. O'Neill, she is survived by a stepdaughter, Mrs. Judith Hart of Walpole; a stepson, Stephen O'Neill of Florida; a sister, Margaret Eckel of Arlington; two brothers, Walter G. Steinkrauss of Quincy and Maj. Gen. Lawrence Steinkrauss, USAF (Ret.), of Virginia.

A funeral Mass was celebrated April 28 in St. Elizabeth's Church, Milton. Burial was in Milton Cemetery.

League health clinics May 13

The Social Service League of Cohasset will hold a combination hypertension and colo-rectal screening clinic from 8 a.m. to noon, May 13, at the League office on 16 Highland Ave.

The American Cancer Society has designated May 13 as cancer detection day focusing on colo-rectal cancer. The Social Service League will be a distribution site for information and test kits. It is a simple take-home test that screens for hidden blood in the stool. Everyone is urged, especially those 50 or over and those with a family history of colo-rectal cancer, to take part in this screening.

The month of May is National High Blood Pressure Month. One out of six residents is affected with high blood pressure and high blood pressure is a major risk factor for the development of premature cardiovascular disease.

In addition, this month two Keep-Well Clinics will be held for Cohasset residents.

The first on May 21 at 11:30 a.m. prior to the 60 Plus Club meeting at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St.

The second clinic will be held May 27 from 10 a.m. to noon, at Harborview, 60 Elm St. Blood pressures, urine testing and health consultation will be available.

Clark is temporary Exec. Secretary

Arthur Clark, retired town father, is scheduled to come out of retirement this week to fill the temporary job of selectmen's executive secretary.

The money for the job will be available July 1. Arthur has volunteered to do the work in the meantime.

The actual qualifications for the jobs, prepared by the government structure committee, could fit Arthur. The final version, accepted by the selectmen last week, allows enough flexibility to have an administrator who does not have a college degree.

Arthur, a retired plumber, went to the school of hard knocks, as he puts it.

After July the position may pay up to $20,000 a year. While town meeting advised the selectmen the voters wanted a search committee to screen the candidates, the board has decided to handle the work itself.

The qualifications include:

— an extensive background in municipal management, with at least five years experience in a similar position.

— a degree in municipal management or a demonstrated proficiency in municipal administration.

— familiarity with county, state and federal funding sources.

— managerial experience in the private sector with emphasis on accounting, financing, purchasing, labor relations or engineering.

— a working knowledge of basic laws, ordinances in this state.

— ability to express himself clearly and concisely, both orally and in writing.

The executive secretary will supervise all personnel and activities within the scope of the authority of the selectmen.

The position will be advertised soon.

Fire Facts

EVACUATE FIRST...INVESTIGATE LATER!

If you smell smoke...

If you see flames...

If you hear the sound of fire...

If your smoke detector sounds...

FIRST, alert everyone in the house. Help those who can't help themselves...small children, an elderly person, a handicapped person. Don't waste time, even seconds count.

GET EVERYONE OUT!

DON'T investigate. DON'T try to fight the fire, until you're sure that everyone is alerted and on the way to a safe place. Call the fire department as soon as you can, after everyone has been alerted. Call from a place where you won't get trapped by flames or smoke. As you leave the house, try to remember to close the door to slow down the spread of fire.

Register for CCC Nursery School

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School has announced that registration is now being accepted for the 1981-1982 school year.

Limited openings remain in the three and four year old classes, and interested parents are urged to enroll their children as soon as possible.

Children must be two years, nine months for the nursery program, and three years, nine months for the pre-kindergarten program.

The nursery school, which has been in operation in Cohasset since 1952, provides a program balanced in all areas necessary for the growth of the preschool child, including social, intellectual, physical and emotional development. There are separate programs for three and four year olds, and the teachers all have specialized training in early childhood education, in addition to degrees in education.

The Community Center Nursery School welcomes parent participation at all levels. An active and enthusiastic Parents' Committee was organized several years ago, and sponsors many fund-raising and social events for the benefit of the school, as well as informative programs for parents. Parents may also serve as classroom assistants and take the opportunity to observe their child's progress first-hand.

The Community Center Nursery School is a non-profit, non-discriminatory organization, and enrollment is open to non-residents as well as Cohasset residents. Inquiries are welcome and should be directed to the Community Center office at 383-0088 weekday mornings between 9-12, to Mrs. Sandra Putnam, Nursery School Director.

Introduction to bird watching at CCC

The Cohasset Community Center, in its continuing effort to bring interesting and varied activities to the community, is planning an exciting new workshop, An Introduction to Birdwatching.

The one night two-hour program will include a lecture and discussion using slides, taxidermic mounts and touchables. The use of binoculars and telescopes will also be discussed.

The $4 course will be taught by a staff member from the Manomet Bird Sanctuary and is scheduled for Friday, May 15, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Registrations are now being accepted at the center, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Historical Society to hold Flea Market

The annual Spring Flea Market of the Cohasset Historical Society, featuring donations of a myriad of items donated over the course of the winter, will be held on the grounds of the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St., Saturday, May 23 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Dealers will join with the Historical Society to offer a range of articles, and a home-baked-goods table will be added to the event. As usual, hot dogs and soft drinks will be on sale.

"We are still receiving, and will welcome donations of any still usable item for our Flea Market which is one of our regular fund-raising activities," Mrs. Lawrence Parker, president, stated. "With the addition of our storage building at the rear of the Lothrop House we are now able to store more donated articles."

Restoration of the first floor of the Lothrop House has been virtually completed, and much work done in the second floor. Results of the rehabilitation and decoration have been acclaimed by a number of groups who have toured the building.

Additional funds are needed, however, to reduce the mortgage and to complete other necessary work on the house.

Softball girls roll over Abington

By Rob Tis

The softball team showed its championship form on Wednesday as they crushed Abington 13-5 behind fireballing Jennifer Carrol. Carrol had three strikeouts. Ellen Digilronamo had three hits, Gia Baressi had two hits and three RBI's, and Laurie Sandblom had a two-run homer, all part of 10 Skipper runs scored in the first three innings. From here the Skippers breezed to an easy victory.

The tables were turned, however, on Thursday when Holbrook scored six quick runs, dwarfing the Skippers two. The Bulldogs added one more in the fourth opening up a 7-2 lead. The Skippers made things interesting as they scored two unearned runs and one more on a fielder's choice but their destiny was sealed as was a 7-5 Holbrook victory.

GIRLS TENNIS

The girls tennis team upped its record to 4-2 as it shut out Abington 5-0 on Wednesday. Sue Dalyrimple breezed to a 6-1, 6-0 victory at first singles. Mia Graham and Joy Pratt at second and third singles respectively, won their matches 6-1, 6-1. Karen Murphy and Dianne Mullen at first doubles and Krissie Ralph and Dianna Hientz at second doubles both won in straight sets clinching the 5-0 massacre.

GIRLS TRACK

The big story this week is the girls track team who came from behind and grabbed a victory from the Green Wave of Abington, shattering Abington's 37 meet win streak.

The Skippers were behind 55-53 with only two events remaining. Tina Birman, Karen Eckberg, Peggy Maynard and Kristen Fisher zipped through the four by 110 relay in 55 seconds to put the Skippers ahead by five. The whole meet now rested on the shoulders of Michelle Shea, Holly Grant, Sara Trask and Mary Jo Mahoney, the mile relay team. The tension could have been cut with a knife. Most of the Abington girls never having experienced a loss in track, now were facing a grim reality. Michelle Shea went out fast, and when Mary Jo Mahoney crossed the finish line of the gun lap netting a time of 4:38.3, the upset was complete. Tina Birman and Karen Eckberg each won two events, as did Mary Jo Mahoney.

BASEBALL

The Skipper baseball team did not get the breaks this week, dropping two games. Wednesday they faced the Green Wave of Abington, who burst out to a six run first inning. From here on things did not get too much better. However, the Skippers did net three runs as well as an unfortunate 12-3 loss.

Cohasset pitcher Dana Infusino always said he could do it and on Thursday against Holbrook he did. Dana pitched five scoreless innings until he ran into trouble in the sixth. Infusino, who had five strikeouts, drove in two of the Skippers three runs on a crisp double. The sixth inning, however, was nothing less than a horror show for the Skippers as Holbrook netted four runs on a grand slam to put them ahead 4-3. The Bulldogs then scored 11 more times to clinch victory 15-3.

Plant a brick patio this spring . . . you'll grow to love it!

INSTRUCTIONS:
- After planning the size, dig out 6" of soil/dirt.
- Border with soldier brick or R.R. ties or treated lumber.
- Spread 4" of sand and tamp 'til firm and level.
- Figure 4½ to 5 brick per sq. ft. Use a hard brick suitable for paving (at Plymouth Quarries you'll find a wide variety of top quality brick pavers)
- Plant brick firmly into sand 'til level and sweep sand into joints between brick.
- Water lightly . . . then enjoy.

We have everything you need to plant your patio this spring . . . we're the South Shore's largest masonry supply dealer.

Do you need a new roof?
How old is your roof? If it's more than ten years old, it's high time to give it a close inspection. Because 15 years is about as long as most roofs can be expected to function and not look shabby.
The concentrated heat of the sun, rain, snow, sleet, gusty winds and just time alone can make shingles dry and brittle, rob a roof of its protective qualities. Let us give your roof a thorough check-up, inspect all potential trouble spots. It could save you a bundle — because a faulty roof soon leaks, and leaks can be expensive. If you roof just needs repair, we'll tell you. If you need a new roof, we'll be happy to advise you and give you a free estimate.
There's no obligation whatsoever, just call Vining & Fletcher Roofing for a free estimate.

Decorator's Show features Cohasset work

The Decorator's Show House, sponsored by the Junior League of Boston, is displaying the work of a number of local people.

Marge Benson of Cohasset worked with her partner, Nancy Gesner of Duxbury, to create the family room for the house at 575 Boylston St., Brookline.

Cafe Pineapple, which serves lunches, is decorated by Carol Ann Dahill of Hingham. Imported French wallpaper covers the door panels.

Kennedy's Country Gardens of Scituate designed English gardens for the courtyard.

Tomasi Nurseries of Hingham created a small garden at the front entrance to the 48-room mansion.

Clara Hayes Barrett Designs of Hingham did the morning room.

The guest room was done by Smith and Dalton, that's Philip Smith and Verna Dalton of Designer Creations of Cohasset.

The Irish Gannett of Hingham did the cedar closet.

The house is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday it is also open 6 to 8:30 p.m. and Sundays it is open 1 to 4 p.m.

No children under eight or cameras are allowed. Tickets are $6.

Rec. Commission seeks beach parking at Wadleigh Park

The Recreation Commission wants the acre of fallow ground at Wadleigh Park turned into a town parking lot for Black Rock Beach.

Dick Barrow, recreation commissioner, said the plan is stalled because of the need for a court ruling on the matter. Town Counsel has said the plan can't go ahead because the land was willed to the town with the restriction it be used for park land.

Dick said last week he would like to see another legal opinion on the use.

"Any definition I've ever seen says a park can be open space or a place to park cars," Dick explained.

"What better use could there be as a park than to let the townspeople have access to the only town owned beach?"

Sandy Beach is actually owned by the Sandy Beach Association. Black Rock Beach is owned by the town.

Dick has a plan for the land, drawn up by the late Ed Young, which provides parking for 44 cars on the land at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue. Opposition to the plan would certainly come from the neighborhood since calls constantly go in to the police station whenever anyone parks at Wadleigh Park. Parking there is illegal at this time and cars are tagged.

About a month ago Bob Salvador, one of the neighbors, went to selectmen with a plan to shut off the present roadway at Wadleigh Park at his own expense.

Dick points out one of the pieces of property at Wadleigh Park calls for a right of way to the pond for a boat launch.

Right now someone would have to park about a mile away from Black Rock Beach to park legally, Dick said. The legal parking would be on one of the side streets up Forest Avenue.

"It was given to the town but only the neighbors use it," Dick added. "What we need is some free legal help."

no snow days are needed.

He noted that other South Shore towns are opting for this same schedule. "Many young people work at camps or parks in the summer," he said, "and Labor Day weekend seems to be a popular family holiday."

"Opening school early just didn't seem to be a popular idea," the superintendent added.

Crowell emphasized he planned to use snow days sparingly, and advised parents that if they felt it was not safe for their children to come to school, they should keep them home.

"It would not penalize students under those circumstances," he said.

The committee had originally considered combining the winter-spring vacation weeks in an energy saving effort, but Crowell determined the move would not save any appreciable energy or money.

In the energy conservation department, the superintendent said the committee should concentrate its efforts in financing known energy conservation measures such as the back-up hot water system now being installed at the high school.

Selectmen plan to douse the lights

Soon one-third of the street lights in town will be shut off.

Selectmen plan a public hearing for 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 21, at town hall to listen to complaints and ideas.

A representative of Eastern Edison is expected at the meeting.

The budget approved by town meeting is about 15 percent less than last year. At the same time Eastern Edison rates are increasing by 16 percent, leaving the budget 30 percent under the amount necessary to keep all the lights burning.

Selectmen developed a list of lights to be dropped last week after having toured the town as a group. Selectman Mary Jane MacArthur pointed out that residents who want to keep their street light may take it on as a private light.

One third of all street lights to go...see page 19

All lights on private streets will be extinguished by the board's decision.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the board worked to keep on the lights at corners, the tops of hills, main roads and other places they considered a danger.

"I hate the thought of one of them going out," said Rocky.

A list of the lights the selectmen are ready to turn out is published on page 19. The actual numbers can be found in metal on the pole. Interested residents are asked to check the numbers of the poles near their homes against the numbers on the list.

Rocky said he is already getting calls on the board's plan to turn off the lights.

Former selectman Arthur Clark, who is working as a volunteer in the selectmen's office these days, said he already has listened to a complaint about the cutback from someone who compared the street lights with spending in the school department.

"We can't touch the school money," Arthur pointed out.

"Until this year the school department has been able to spend what it wanted because of fiscal autonomy. The advisory committee hasn't been able to touch them.

"I can't remember a year that they didn't say was a tough year. And so they've been cutting the rest of general government."

The street light near Arthur's home is one of the ones which will go out.

The cocktail hour at Cohasset Knoll

By Patricia Desmond

Outside the window a cherry tree blossomed in the spring shine.

Inside the window, one wheelchair after another lined the large room. White-haired men and women sang to the sound of a piano, sipped their drinks and socialized.

Margaret O'Connor requested something Irish and Kay Mulcahy played the "Rose of Tralee." Kay comes to Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home every Friday afternoon to play her bouncing music and sing with the gathering at the weekly cocktail party.

This week the plan is to entertain patients from the Ripley Road Nursing Home at the event as a way to celebrate National Nursing Home Week.

But last week the special part of the afternoon was a large bowl of strawberries, served with cool whip, and donated by the aides on the North Wing.

Claudia Bennett, the activities director, kept wheeling patients into the room as the volunteers walked about offering gingerale or wine or beer to the group.

Of course many of the patients refused. Medications or physical problems might slow down their drinking. But they still came to enjoy the chance to get together with their fellow patients.

Much of the activity at the nursing home is put together through gifts and volunteers. Like the strawberries.

"I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" the piano played.

"Louder," Kay said in between verses. Scattered applause followed the number.

One or two women in the room were reading while the afternoon moved forward. More had books in their laps.

"If I had another hand I'd clap," one woman smiled, just a small smile, holding her paper cup with wine punch.

Marguerita Burns, who still has her home in Hingham, told me it was too chilly in her room right then.

"But that's all right because my roommate's not feeling well. She has the window open a crack. She wants the air.

"It's warm here," she added with satisfaction.

Miss Burns, who taught school in Boston before she retired, wasn't drinking even gingerale.

"I don't often eat between meals," she explained.

But the fresh strawberries were an exception. One that seemed to keep everyone in the room looking straight toward the center serving table. As soon as Claudia had everyone willing to come in the room, she started serving up the fruit. Alice Sokolowski helped distribute the dishes with their plastic spoons.

The volunteers do many things. There's a man from Marshfield, Bob Maffeo, who bakes cookies in the center of the social room. There's Jan Bacon who talks about poetry.

Parking tickets add up at the beach

Parking tickets at the beach may be enough to cover the salaries of overtime police officers.

Last Sunday night Sgt. John Rhodes gave out $130 in parking tickets by himself which requires a resident sticker.

The sergeant said he checked out where the car's occupants were from before passing out the tickets.

Parking violations at the beach cost $20.

Other places to be careful about parking include the lot at Government Island, where selectmen are initiating a crack down, the Village where time limits apply and other posted places.

There are no more $3 parking tickets in town. The cheapest ticket is now $5.

Water Department planning shutoffs

In ten days' time the town water department will shut off service to a group of delinquent customers.

Ben Curley, acting water superintendent, said there are 20 to 25 customers who were sent the notifications this week. They all owe more than $500.

The water commissioners, who are worried about the $100,000 owed the department, decided to take the action last week.

Ben said there are no hardship cases in the bunch slated for shut off. He did say there may be a few hardship cases in the groups who are delinquent by smaller amounts.

If the back money isn't paid by the end of the fiscal year, June 30, the water department will not be able to use it to pay its accumulated expenses. The operation will go into deficit.

The first threat of a water shut-off came up about three months ago when the commissioners began to deal with the increasing problem of non-payment. The water department used to have a surplus to tide it over when collections lagged, and in the past they always lagged.

Ben said after the letter went out quite a bit of many came into the water office.

"But now it's come to a screeching halt," he said.

The majority of the large debtors happen to be homeowners. There are a few businesses on the list.

One water customer owes $3,000 in back bills.

Once this list is dealt with, the water commissioners plan to take action against the next group, the people who owe more than $400. Ben said the number of those is larger.

"But we're hoping this will have an effect. Word will get around."

He said it isn't until the $200 level that real

Cohasset's week

CCC membership drive

This week, the board of directors of the Community Center of Cohasset will begin a town-wide membership and fund raising campaign.

Every resident of the town should receive a letter from the board.

They stress the importance of community support in the continued growth of the center which now includes close to 1,500 members.

"Many people do not realize that the center is not subsidized by the town government, the United Way or any public source," points out Kathy Stevens, President of the Board of Directors. She also notes proudly that the center has never increased its membership fees since it was founded, 37 years ago. The center belongs to its members and its success is a reflection of their interest and involvement, she concluded.

Early release day

Thursday, May 14, will be an early release day in the public schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow the staff at the Junior/Senior High School to continue work on their self-evaluation program; and to allow the staff at the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood School to discuss student placement for the 1981/1982 school year.

Fix thy mailbox

Each year the Postal Service reminds its customers to take a look at their receptacles to see if they need any repair or painting, according to Postmaster Gerard Keating.

Since May 18 to 23 is Mailbox Improvement Week, you are asked to check the condition of your mailbox to make certain it affords sufficient protection from adverse weather conditions. Your cooperation would be appreciated.

Search for dog killer

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is working with Richard Yokum, the town's new dog officer, to find the killer of a dog from Elm Court.

The dog, described as four or five years old, was shot to death.

Yokum began working for the town May 1. He expects experts from the MSPCA will determine the exact cause of death soon.

The person who killed the dog would face criminal charges if discovered. Another dog from Elm Court was shot last week but the dog officer says that animal was killed while attacking pigs kept in Hingham as livestock.

"That one was shot legally," he explained.

New police code

This week the local police will be in training for a new code system for their communications program.

Training for the new program runs Tuesday through Thursday.

Soon the numbers system will send the officers on their way to trouble calls. Soon the log will contain coded tabulations.

Correction

The town's disposal area study committee includes: John Ridge, Neil Murphy, Eleanor Cooney, Arthur Pompeo and Stephen Wigmore.

They were listed incorrectly in the Mariner as the town report committee.

Chittim leads Pratt trustees

David Chittim is the new chairman of the board of trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

He was elected recently, succeeding Sheila Evans. Mrs. Evans served as chairman for many years.

Patrolman Laugelle injured

Patrolman Paul Laugelle is the sort of sportsman who would give his arm to win the game.

Well, he put his arm in hock for awhile, at least. But his softball team, Strawberry Parfait, demolished the Sluggers by 20 to 5.

At the station, the talk is the sportsmanlike officer will be out of work for at least a month.

Patrolman David Pomarico, coach of Strawberry Parfait, recounted the game while Paul remained immobile in a body cast after the weekend softball game.

It seems Paul was at first base, the other team was up, someone hit a ball. Paul fielded it, catching the ball and reaching for the on-coming batter. The two collided. Paul's upper arm was broken.

If the arm doesn't heal properly with the use of the body cast, an operation may be needed.

In the meantime, Paul will have to miss the policemen's ball, scheduled for Friday at Cohasset Country Club. Tickets are still available.

The patients are getting ready for their spring fair, scheduled for May 29 and 30 from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Arts and crafts are being revived at the nursing home to produce items for sale at the fair.

"We're always in search of volunteers," Claudia said. She wants the patients to have a garden on the grounds. She's been looking for a volunteer to do the rototilling.

She also runs a small newspaper on the premises. The reporters include a dozen of the patients: Hazel Peterson, Bunny Warren, Gert Fish, Margaret Glennon, Elizabeth MacGregor, Helen Jackimowicz, Delia Swanson, Arlene Reddy, Ruth Ottina, Margaret O'Connor, Ann Bowden and Helen Kenney.

The nursing home's activities budget is $25 a month for the 80 patients. That leaves a lot of space for volunteers.

Claudia moved on. She had to feed one woman who wanted the strawberries but couldn't quite manage to handle the spoons.

And Kay and Alice sang louder than any of the patients.

"The Wild Colonial Boy," "And the Band Played On," "Yankee Doodle," "Three O'Clock in the Morning..."

From the other side of the room a woman asked where Margaret was.

"Did she come today?" Margaret was pointed out and the more near-sighted woman reached over and took her hand.

Marguerita said her brother used to grow strawberries. But he's dead now. She was one of 13 children, all brought up in a large house in Hingham Center.

Her sister used to come to Cohasset to sing when they were younger.

"Not here of course. If she was alive today, why I'd ask her to come here. She had a beautiful voice.

"We had loads of fun then."

Marguerita, who stopped teaching before the trains stopped running to Hingham, talks about the day when she can go home.

"I'd be outside now if I could go home," she said putting her book down on her wheelchair.

NEW OFFICERS — The Community Garden Club of Cohasset installed its new slate last week. From left they are: Mrs. John Riley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Haynes, who is in charge of annual meetings; Mrs. William Smart, recording secretary; Mrs. John Halloran, president; Mrs. Philip Shockman, vice president, and Mrs. George Sechen, treasurer. Move the moorings

An interested citizen dropped in to the selectmen's meeting this week and asked why they didn't redesign the lay-out of harbor moorings to increase tax revenue.

Well, why don't they?

Most of the expensive and taxable boats in Cohasset Harbor are actually moored in Scituate and with the change in state law on assessment rights, Scituate now collects the personal property taxes on those boats.

The old way of handling the tax had the boats owned by Cohasset people taxed here since the matter at hand then was where the boat sat on Jan.

Robert Sturdy, who owns one of the boats on the Scituate side and thus farther out into the water, pointed out that the non-taxable fishing boats are all moored in Cohasset waters.

His idea is to put the smaller boats and non-taxable fishing boats on the Scituate side.

Now the Harbor Development Committee has done an incredibly good job negotiating with Scituate for a share of the tax money since Cohasset does all the work. Selectmen Rocco Laugelle pointed out that while those negotiations were going on it wouldn't have been wise to talk about moving the channel and moorings.

So now's the time.

The way the harbor is laid out, it would not require extensive work to make the changes, Sturdy contends, and no one has disagreed.

Understandably the fishermen will be slightly inconvenienced by the change. They go out in their boats often and want them close by the shore.

Let's hope some brilliant harbor development engineer can think up a solution to that one. But shouldn't something be done to rearrange the revenue?

Harbor costs

The days of Proposition 2½ bring new concern for record keeping.

Surely something like the harbor should be made self-supporting. It is used by quite a few people, some who pay no taxes to the town. It is paid for overall by people who live in Beechwood as well as along Jerusalem Road.

Selectman Mary Jane MacArthur pointed out last week that there is no complete break down of costs for the harbor.

She said she would like to see what is spent for the operation and what revenue comes into the town.

That seems like something the town could figure out in a matter of weeks, if officials were willing to calculate the costs.

It seems like a necessary study.

A toast to one fine fence viewer

Letters

An open letter to the Citizens of Cohasset:

In this season of tossing bouquets to retiring public servants, I believe the townspeople have been remiss in not recognizing the contributions of Burtram J. Pratt, Fence Viewer extraordinaire. B.J. has served the town long and well in what is best described as an important and sensitive post (no pun intended). One needs only to perambulate our town and purview our fences to recognize the fine job he has done.

If you find it difficult to evaluate the contribution a Fence Viewer makes, reflect for a moment on the following quotations: "fences make good neighbors," "don't fence me in" and "DE-FENCE... DE-FENCE..." (a favorite chant at athletic events).

As a former neighbor of Mr. Pratt, I can personally testify to the execution of his duties. He spent many an hour inspecting our property and ensuring our compliance with the letter of the law. The fact that our property was totally unfenced deterred him not at all.

While we can never really replace Burtram, we must attempt to find a substitute. I favor the establishment of a selection committee and I believe that the following criteria are critical:

HEIGHT: Six feet or taller. Generally, fences in Cohasset may not exceed six feet. Consequently, the candidate must be tall enough to confirm compliance with this ordinance. A shorter candidate may supply his/her own helicopter.

EDUCATION: Master's Degree in Civil Engineering from M.I.T. Most of us have learned that education is the best teacher; seldom is experience an adequate substitute for solid, abstract theoretical grounding. In the absence of a master's degree from M.I.T., we could consider a candidate with a B.S. from M.I.T. or Cal Tech in combination with 50 years of experience in a town of similar size.

SEX: Uni. Any female who is six feet tall (or who owns a helicopter) and has a Master's Degree in Civil Engineering from M.I.T. (or a B.S. from M.I.T. or Cal Tech with 50 years experience in a town of similar size) should be equally considered.

I propose a spontaneous testimonial for Burtram's long tenure...time and place to follow!

England raps School Board non-disclosure

To the Editor:

After a year of complete disclosure to the public on all aspects of the School Committee activities, and in particular the monetary expenditures, I was sorry to see the present School Committee adopt a posture of non-public disclosure of the school system's expenditures, especially on the flimsy excuse to "facilitate bill payment." I never knew that we had a problem with paying our bills or that any vendor denied Cohasset credit because of slow payment.

The idea that the whole School Committee does not see and approve the warrant (list of each school expenditure by vendor and amount) is very poor fiscal management for the following reasons:

1. It takes the actual expenditures away from the public spotlight of the open School Committee meeting.

2. Anyone familiar with any public body (large or small) knows the most critical time to watch expenditures is at the close of the fiscal year.

3. Furthermore, I think the delegation of this power to one person is not legal.

4. If such a move is legal, which I doubt, why would the School Committee give this important task to the newest member of the School Committee who is the least familiar with school budgetary matters.

I hope that at the next School Committee meeting this new policy of non-public disclosure of school expenditures is corrected.

Chief DeBassio preps for summer

May 5, 1981

Henry Ainslie, Chairman
Board of Selectmen
Town Hall
Cohasset, Massachusetts

Dear Sir:

Witnin recent weeks the Board of Selectmen and various community residents have been showing increased interest in anticipated police coverage of traditionally impacted areas of the town brought on by seasonal conditions. Notably, Sandy Beach, Government Island and Mill/Cunningham Bridges.

These traditional concerns have been reflected through a series of staff meetings within the police department and resulted in a number of recommendations being forwarded to the Selectmen for their review and subsequent adoption. They include, but are not limited to: increases in traffic violation fees; posting of appropriate signs; publication of department policy and intent, with respect to enforcement.

In preparing the fiscal 1981-1982 police budget, provisions were made for funding special police coverage at Sandy Beach and (16) hours per week have been designated for that purpose during the summer months. Schedules are now being prepared which will ensure special police presence during evening hours on a variety of nights with optional coverage on bridges during the day. The schedule will, as much as possible, reflect periods of high tide or weather conditions which encourage or serve to entice youths to jump from the bridges or otherwise violate Black Rock or Sandy Beach parking regulations or public drinking laws. Special police will also be supplemented by regular shift personnel to assure consistent enforcement efforts.

The schedule is designed to provide an ever increasing police presence in the hope that it will deter traditional conduct and avoid the necessity of prosecution and its negative implications. Parking and sticker enforcement is also intended to reduce non-resident infringement and complaints associated with such by-law violations.

By-laws notwithstanding, there appears to be concern on the part of bridge abutters since they are subjected directly to the unnecessary noise and trespassing swimmers. The desire on the part of these residents to be reassured of effective police coverage during the coming months have prompted them to appear at the police station, and I have taken that opportunity to outline the department's policies. I have also offered to explain my position to those having common concerns should they decide that such a meeting is desirable.

Additional police coverage will require the appointment of special police officers, and a number of permanent intermittent and auxiliary officers, appropriate to the task, will be recommended for appointment under that category. Those officers selected should be paid at the permanent intermittent rate which is currently $5.33 per hour. The nature of the assignment and the duties to be performed warrant such consideration, as do those services provided by the matron.

Since a minimum of four (4) hours is essential to accomplish the desired effect at Sandy Beach, I intend to schedule officers from 6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. where appropriate. Entry to the beach will be supervised and only properly stickered vehicles will be allowed. Parking violations will be cited, public drinking laws will be enforced and noise will be controlled and closely monitored. The officer will secure the parking lot upon completion of the assignment and maintain radio communications should it become necessary to request assistance at any time during his tour of duty.

Manpower deployment will, therefore, be flexible and assignments will be made on the basis of need as determined by weather conditions, size of crowds, or demands for service.

Respectfully,
John DeBassio, Chief
Cohasset Police Department

Anti casino group to open Cohasset office

Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., will open an office soon in Cohasset.

Carol Oteri, of Hull, president of C.A.C.G., said that the group's many committees have "outgrown member's living rooms" and that the permanent location will provide needed work, storage and meeting areas.

Carol issued an appeal for donations of office furniture and equipment with which to furnish the new work space.

"In our fight against casino gambling we are up against Big Money with highly paid lobbyists and PR people. We are counting on the support of the average citizen who is unwilling to have Hull, Adams or the state of Massachusetts sold to the highest bidder. Since MGM washed ashore our group has done much to prevent the destruction of this area by people who want to 'take the money and run'," she said.

"Our local state legislators, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, and Sen. Allan R. McKinnon, D-Weymouth, have done an outstanding job opposing the legalization of casinos, but they would be the first to admit that a strong grassroots movement is a necessity in effectively opposing glittery promises that come out of the West with a thundering roar but with no real substance.

"We are now providing residents with an opportunity to say 'thank you and keep up the good work' by helping us fund the expansion of our efforts. Good intentions alone will not win the battle."

Contact Jackie Dowd, 749-3139, with offers of office furnishings. Cash donations may be sent to C.A.C.G., P.O. Box 2754, Boston, MA 02208.

Rte. 3A construction will continue

Route 3A is being torn up for road reconstruction by state workers.

Traffic as you already know moves slow along the construction stretch.

The bad news of the week is that the condition will continue for three to four weeks. Of course it isn't bad news if you are one of the police officers on extra detail.

While the road is narrowed to one lane and traffic alternates from either direction, anyone trying to go straight through town along Route 3A will be delayed during the working day.

Police officers suggest alternative routes where possible.

Douse the lights

The town budget was accepted by town meeting with little discussion.

The budget is $41,500 for street lights for the coming fiscal year; with cost increases and the built-in deficiency the town would need $22,000 more to keep all the lights on.

The meeting on shutting off the lights comes just four days after the chief of police holds his public meeting beginning the town's new crime prevention program.

Mary Jane said the board would listen to residents who think there are safety reasons why another light should be shut off rather than one on the list.

But the final number of lights must show a one-third reduction.

Four lights by town hall are on the list to be dimmed.

Arthur said once the incandescent lights are turned off they cannot be put back on. If the town were to decide to turn them back, the more expensive sodium vapor lights would have to be used. He said Eastern Edison has been trying to get the town to phase out the old incandescent lights for several years now.

"You can't get the parts," he explained.

The Recreation report

CO-ED SOCCER CLINIC

The Recreation Dept. will accept registration for an Outdoor Soccer Clinic to be held at Deer Hill School beginning Friday, May 15.

Children between ages 6 to 8 will meet from 3 to 4 p.m. and those from age 13 from 4 to 5 p.m. The fee is $6 per child with a 50 percent discount for two or more children registering from the same family.

Immediate registration is advised as classes will be limited. The program will run for six weeks.

GUITAR LESSONS

The Recreation Department will offer guitar lessons for children from 8 to 16, taught by professional musician, Mark Mincolla.

Classes will run for six weeks and will be offered for beginners only beginning Wednesday, June 3, at 7 p.m., Town Hall Auditorium. The fee is $8 per child and students must have their own guitar.

GOLF LESSONS

Registration for golf lessons for beginner, intermediate and advanced classes are now being accepted. Classes will be held on Monday evenings at the Town Hall.

They will be taught by Brian Kelly, assistant golf pro at Cohasset Country Club. The lessons will meet for an hour each week for a six weeks.

Call the Recreation Department at 383-6791 for further information.

Water shutoffs

hardship cases are included.

"We're not after them. What bothers us is that these people have the money to pay."

Until this year water customers were given 90 days to pay their bills. Now interest payments begin after 30 days.

The water commissioners are also looking into other ways of increasing water revenue. Last week the board met with a representative of Scituate to discuss the possible sale of water to that community. Scituate is having problems meeting its peak demand needs in summer months. Cohasset with its new reservoir has a water surplus.

The negotiations are preliminary at this point. Ben said Scituate officials want to study the situation.

☐Local artists Margaret Dillon and Rosalind Farbush have paintings hanging in the main gallery at Boston City Hall, part of the Copley Society Exhibit.

☐Katherine Dillon had two designs entered in New York competition, an evening ensemble, Oscar d' La Renta as critic in that category, and a shearling coat with Calvin Klein as critic.

They were chosen for the senior fashion show given by Parsons School of Design at the Hilton Hotel in New York City, April 28. She will be graduating from Parsons May 26. Katherine designed both costumes and sets for the original Cohasset production of 'Godspell.'

☐Taylor Devin turned two years old last week. In celebration Sheila and Robert Devin, his parents, invited seven of his best friends, Austin and Brian Lewis, Martha McLaughlin, Tory Androski, Ben Laney, Keith Jackson and David Marr to a party. They were served a four-course luncheon — hors d'oeuvres were potato sticks, the entre was a mouth watering peanut butter and marshmallow sandwich, then the domestic ginger-ale, followed by the creme de la creme, Carmen, of "Strawberry Parfait," an ice cream baseball.

☐Chris and Millard Mac Neill, of Jerusalem Road, and their Siberian Husky "Flicker" spent most weekends of this past year on Nantucket Island. Chris said Flicker loved the boat ride.

☐Roger Leonard is still researching his book on Portugal. It's tentatively named "The Step Children of Europe."

☐In 1891 the graduating class of Cohasset consisted of seven people, with only two males. Their names were Russell Towers and Manuel Leonard.

☐Alice McCarthy had a surprise birthday party Saturday night. The hosts were Joe and Kathy Becker.

☐Scot Ketchum has had a busy winter in the local theaters. He started with "Sly Fox" in the fall appearing in the production and helping his father, Burk, who designed the set. Scot did all the fine work. He has a beautiful voice and used it well in "Hello Dolly," as Cornelius Hackel and in "My Fair Lady."

Now he's designed the set for the Hingham Elizabethan Company's "As You Like It." Also he's playing the part of Silvrus, a shepherd. The show will be running May 15, 16 and a matinee on Sunday the 17th in Hingham at the New North Church.

☐Happy birthday to Amy Russell.

☐Emily Summers has made her dramatic debut with a speaking part in "Arrow to the Sun." She also sang in the chorus. Songs included were "Tomorrow," and "Puff the Magic Dragon." These were presented during the Montessori Community School of Scituate's Spring Show.

☐Happy birthday to Megan Staunton who turned five on May 7.

☐Three other Cohasset residents are appearing in the production of "As You Like It." Peter Tobin, David Barrett and Jonathan deLima.

☐Consuelo Halloran has been accepted to North Adams College in the Berkshires. She'd like to major in either art or psychology. She had a number of art entries in the Art Center recently. She has worked at the Greenhouse as a waitress for the last two years and was involved with the Art Fair last summer. Her parents are John and Linda Halloran.

☐Gail Wescatt is moving back to the area. She was an editor of the South Shore Mirror. For the last three years she has directed the day care center "Network" in Canaan, New Hampshire. She also has been chief editor of "Opportunity Knocks," a child care magazine. We're looking forward to having her back. She'll be staying with Sally and Danny Sullivan on Summer St.

☐Lee and Peter Androski have a free above ground swimming pool. All you have to do is take it out yourself. Call first.

☐Rich and Marsha Silvia are looking forward to another outrageous time at this year's Policemen's Ball, May 15 at Hugo's. Rich would like whoever is parking in the woods off Riverside Drive late at night to please turn your engine off. You're ruining his TV reception and he can't watch the Celtics games.

☐Joanne and Toby Horn have a new Sheltie puppy "Pippi" named after Pippi Longstocking.

☐Taffy Northnagle and Louise Smullen's Girl Scout groups went camping last weekend to Camp Dorothy.

☐Carolyn and Dick Horn, of Pippi fame, met with their gourmet group Saturday night at the home of Joanne and Denis Rossi and enjoyed an evening of Indian cuisine.

Others included in the group are Gerry and Regina Schultz, Joyce and Peter Conway and Carol and Jack Martin.

The menu was Chicken Tandoori, Lamb Korma, Alu Gobi, Dal, Saffron Vegetable Medley, Raita, Rarathas Chapatis, Meat Chutney, Hot Pepper Chutney, Pineapple Papaya Chutney, Kneer, and Lassi. This menu appeared in the May, 1980 issue of Bon Appetit.

☐Steve Keating has been elected captain of next fall's University of Maine at Orono football squad by his teammates.

The 6-2, 230-pound marketing major is the brother of two former Black Bear football standouts, Tom Keating, who graduated in 1972, and Chris Keating, a 1979 graduate who is a linebacker in the NFL with the Buffalo Bills. Chris captained the 1978 Maine team.

"I feel very good about our team's choice," said first-year coach Ron Rogerson. "Steve Keating is one of the finest natural leaders that I have ever been associated with as a football coach. His hustle and dedication to the game should be a constant inspiration to our players and coaches."

The 21-year-old lineman, a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity at UMO, played football for Coach Dennis Walsh at Cohasset High School, where he also wrestled.

Selectmen briefs...

The selectmen last week decided to send Police Lt. Charles Stockbridge a letter in recognition of his honor as Quincy Court's police officer of the year.

Selectman Mary Jane MacArthur brought up the matter, pointing out that it was a credit to the lieutenant to receive the vote of the Quincy Bar and Court.

The Crime Watch program should have been open to more immediate donations from other town businesses, according to the selectmen.

The initial printing of brochures was paid for by Jack Conway, with a credit on all the fliers.

Board members think the program should have been open to contributions in general from the start.

However more money is needed for the program and other materials may be donated. The kick-off is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, May 18, at the High School.

Selectmen are in the process of making their annual appointments and are looking for volunteers to serve as: constable, fence viewer, member of the board of appeals and associate member of the board of appeals.

COMMUNICATION COUNCIL

The Jr.-Sr. High Communications Council met Thursday, May 7 in Mr. Streeter's office. This was a work session collating flyers to be mailed to all parents seeking volunteers to serve on the 1981-82 Communication Councils at Osgood, Deerhill and the Jr. or Sr. High. It was voted to separate the Jr. and Sr. High Councils next year, although some combined meetings will be held. If you are interested in serving, please contact the steering committee at the office of the superintendent. It's a great way to keep informed.

DAVID TOMA FUND DANCE

A fund-raising dance will be held at Hugo's Lighthouse on Friday, May 22 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

"The Fox" band is donating their time and Hugo's their facility to this benefit, so all proceeds will go to the David Toma fund. The prise is $10 per couple.

David Toma has been engaged to speak to our students and parents in early June about drug and alcohol abuse. For tickets to the dance call: Carol Sandblom, 383-1812; Nancy Clapp, 383-0987; Mary O'Brien, 383-6987; Dick Conley, 383-1039.

MUSIC

There will be a Jr. High band concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 19 at the Pollard School in Needham.

May 21-22 — Heritage Musical Festival at Clark University in Worcester.

SOCCER

The Jr. High "B" team romped to a 4-1 victory over Wellesley last Saturday under the guidance of stand-in coach, Jim Leonard. Bobby Schultz scored two goals, Mark Crough and David MacDonald one each, all with an assist from center half Michael DeSantis. Billy McKenna, replacing injured Greg Igo, played a fine game in net. The "B" team hosts Dedham at Milliken Field next Saturday, May 16 at 4 p.m. Come on out and root!

Lush lawns start with Lofts WEED & FEED

To look its best, a lawn must be fed even during a drought. And it must be free of weeds. Lofts WEED & FEED does both for your lawn... use it during April and May and again in September or October.

It gives your lawn two important treatments in one easy step. It's the convenient, economical way to a healthy lawn.

Arnold Palmer relies on Lofts products. You can too.

Kathy Stevens new president of Community Center

In the recent election of officers for the Board of Directors of the Community Center of Cohasset, Kathy Stevens was unanimously elected president.

Mrs. Stevens replaces John Doherty who has completed his three-year term as president and member of the board.

Other newly elected executive officers include: Judy Volungis, first vice president; Jim Drysdale, second vice president; John Roy, clerk; and Raymond Kasperowicz, treasurer.

Seven new board members have also been elected to the board to replace those board members who have completed their three-year terms of office. They are: John Lennon, building committee; Dick Ainslie, building committee; Joanne Sheppard, special events; Rosemary Mercurio, membership; Dee DeSantis, publicity; Bob Ripley, bowling; and Paula Almeida, nursery school.

Board members in addition to the officers who are continuing their terms of office are: Marge Ritter, special events; Janet Ditmar, membership and Dick Farwell, building committee. Retiring members include: John Kuhn, Rocco Laugelle, John Conroy, Jerry Schultz, Martha Gjesteby, and Jean Salvador.

Certificates of appreciation were given to retiring board members, at the center's annual meeting. An engraved plaque and gavel were given to former president, John Doherty.

Mrs. Stevens has been a member of the board of directors for two years and has served as chairman of the nursery school committee. Many of the new board members say that they first became involved with the center as a result of the participation of their families in its many programs.

"I want to do my part," says Director John Lennon. Bob Ripley notes that he spent much of his time at the center as a teenager, especially at the bowling alleys.

One of the first projects facing the board is a town-wide mailing as a part of its membership and fund raising drive which is scheduled to begin this week. Board members underline that the center is not subsidized by town government, the United Way or any other public source. They also are proud that the center has been able to maintain its membership rate without an increase since its founding 37 years ago.

Always but always Look A Gift Horse in the mouth

Anytime someone offers you something "free" for shopping at their store, beware. Somehow, sometime, you'll have to pay for it. Probably in the form of higher prices for the items you buy at that store. So, always compare prices before you accept those so-called "free" gifts.

Compare these prices before you buy again!

Track girls continue to win

By Rob Tis

It was an unlucky week for the Cohasset softball squad. On Tuesday Hanover broke a 10-10 tie in the fifth inning and went on to take the game 15-11. Gia Barresi played remarkable ball for the Skippers going four for four with four RBI's.

On Wednesday the Skippers faced Hull. The Skippers were ripping the ball and took a quick 6-2 lead. Unfortunately the Pirates began to make a comeback. It was tied in the sixth inning with two outs when a craft Pirate stole home when a missed strike got by the Skipper catcher. The Pirates capitalized on this break and clinched the 7-6 decision.

On Friday the Skippers got their act together and demolished Middleboro 17-2. Laurie Sandblom and Gia Barresi were both three for three. Everyone contributed, however, especially in the 10-run bonanza in the fifth inning.

GIRLS TRACK

The girls track team maintained its winning ways with one big victory. On Tuesday the Skippers walked over East Bridgewater 67-51. Patty Walsh achieved a first in the discus as did MaryJo Mahoney in the 880, Hannah Clinton in the two mile, Michelle Shea in the 440 and Katie Clinton in the mile.

On Thursday, however, the Skippers fell to a big track power, Duxbury, 74-44. Tina Birman did manage to grab first in the 100 and the shot-put as did Karen Eckberg in the 220.

BOYS TRACK

The boys track team suffered a frustrating loss to Duxbury this week 114-31. Keith Ross was the only Skipper able to win an individual event. Cohasset's other points came from the mile relay team and Pat Duffy, who got second in the shot-put, high hurdles and low hurdles. Keith Ross also got a third in the long jump.

BASEBALL

The Skipper baseball team came inches from attaining their first South Shore League win this season. The Skippers tied the score with Hanover 4-4 in the seventh. During the next five innings the Skippers had many chances but nothing was to become of them. In the bottom of the twelfth inning, probably minutes before the game would have been called for darkness, Hanover's Chris McFagden slammed a two-run double, handing the Skippers the loss.

Mentally drained from the Hanover game, the Skippers were no match for Hull on Wednesday. After Hull got a quick 5-0 lead, the game seemed anti-climactic. Hull got seven more runs to clinch the 12-2 decision.

The Skipper luck stayed the same on Thursday as they lost to Middleboro 11-1. Cohasset's only two hits came from Kevin Dooley and Rich Evans.

'Night Must Fall' was 'Terror-ific'

By Jennifer Grisdale

It was an evening of sheer terror greater than any movie could produce because it actually happened in Our Town.

In fact, some theatre goers attending the Cohasset Dramatic Club's spring production of "Night Must Fall" last weekend are still suffering from a palpitating heart and a bad case of The Jitters, all due to the outstanding performances by all members of the cast.

Special recognition, however, must go to Carl Slotnick who played the multi-faceted role of Dan. He quite literally made his acting debut on the worn floor boards of Cohasset Town Hall, yet he behaved like an old pro.

He knew just how to build up the suspense in his audience — how to make them gasp and move to the edge of their seats with a beautifully timed entrance.

The other performers deserve just as many accolades.

Bob MacKay as Inspector Belsize had exactly the proper demeanor for a Scotland Yard man — right down to the quizzically raised eyebrow.

NIGHT MUST FALL and so did the curtain but Joanna Stockman and Wayne Miesner and other cast members got quite a bit of applause over the weekend for Cohasset Dramatic Club's presenta-

Joanna Stockman, who played Olivia, perfectly conveyed that feeling of repressed vitality: she behaved like a smoldering fire just waiting to break out.

Diane Gallagher of Scituate as Mrs. Bramson: if she had not played her role magnificently the whole performance would have flopped — and Dan wouldn't have earned his money.

No production, however good the actors, can succeed without a good director. Wayne Miessner of Scituate did a fine job directing "Night Must Fall." He made Hubert a perfect bore, too.

Pull down the shades and turn on all the lights!!

Baton classes at CCC

The Community Center of Cohasset will offer a course in baton for four weeks beginning on Thursday, May 21, and ending on Thursday, June 18 from 3 p.m. until 4 p.m.

Helen Phinney will again teach the art of baton twirling and the class will be divided according to age and ability. Cost of the four-week course is $12.

Miss Phinney is a winner of the Eastern State Championship and over 800 other awards. Many of her students have also won championships including the much esteemed Miss Majorette Championship.

Do you need a new roof?
How old is your roof? If it's more than ten years old, it's high time to give it a close inspection. Because 15 years is about as long as most roofs can be expected to function and not look shabby.
The concentrated heat of the sun, rain, snow, sleet, gusty winds and just time alone can make shingles dry and brittle, rob a roof of its protective qualities. Let us give your roof a thorough check-up, inspect all potential trouble spots. It could save you a bundle — because a faulty roof soon leaks, and leaks can be expensive. If you roof just needs repair, we'll tell you. If you need a new roof, we'll be happy to advise you and give you a free estimate.
There's no obligation whatsoever, just call Vining & Fletcher Roofing for a free estimate.

Project SAFE seminar, May 18

The Police Department and the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Realtor will hold a Project SAFE (Stop Allowing Forced Entry) seminar from 7 to 9 p.m. May 18 in the Cohasset High School auditorium, Pond St.

The program is designed to get residents in the town's 3,000 homes to participate in Neighborhood Watch and Operation Identification campaigns.

These programs are two key aspects of the state-wide Massachusetts Crime Watch effort developed in cooperation with the Municipal Police Institute and the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council.

This local version of the Crime Watch campaign was developed by Police Chief John DeBassio and Crime Prevention Officer Gerald Doyle and is being co-sponsored by the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, managed by Muriel Desmond.

Panelists, who will answer residents' questions during the seminar include Chief DeBassio; Officer Doyle; Thomas Chuda, a training coordinator with the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council; and Jack Conway, who is also a resident of the town.

The evening will feature a half-hour film concerning Operation Identification which is aimed at making it more difficult for burglars to sell marked goods and easier for victims to recover stolen valuables.

Residents attending the session will be asked to sign up for Neighborhood Watch programs and indicate if they would like to have their valuables marked with an engraving tool as a part of Operation Identification.

A special lock display will be exhibited and an explanation of how effective each one is will be offered by Chuda and Martin Corry, Jr., also a training coordinator with the state Criminal Justice Training Council.

Also participating to help residents sign up for the programs will be Muriel Desmond and brokers Zoe Bongarzone, Eunice Coady, Deborah Deal, Henry Desmond, Catherine Ernst, Cloria Ellis, Julie Gailinas, Shifi Jorden, Andrea Merill, Mary Ellen Neagle, Mary Pecce, Bill Poland, and Carol Watt, all from the Jack Conway office.

There is no cost to the town for the SAFE seminar as all costs will be borne by Jack Conway, Realtor.

PROJECT SAFE, a seminar designed to show Cohasset residents how they can prevent burglaries of their homes, is planned by Muriel Desmond (L), manager of the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Cohasset Crime Prevention Officer Gerald Doyle, and Conway broker Andrea Merill.

China expert to speak at Unitarian Church

In Peking, some city planners have quietly talked about moving the late Chairman Mao's mausoleum away from the center of Tienanmen Square. Conservative economist Milton Friedman was invited over to lecture to China's ostensibly Communist economic planners. Reporters for China's leading newspaper have been investigating government corruption as if they were Woodward and Bernstein.

But Peking's leaders have also recently cancelled or stretched out billions of dollars of Western Industrial contracts.

Which way is China moving?

Earl Foell, editor of The Christian Science Monitor, will tackle this world power question in a talk at the annual meeting of the Friends of the Cohasset Library on Friday, May 15. Slides of China taken by Cordelia Foell will illustrate his talk. The Foells visited China at the end of last year and were granted a rare two hour meeting with China's boss, Deng Xiaoping. They also talked to leaders of many professions.

Foell sees Peking at a historic turning point where it is deciding whether to move into a freer economy or to lapse back into rigid central control.

This first-hand report on China today will follow the Friends' brief annual meeting beginning at 8 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 N. Main St. Admission is free.

Let Us Spend A Day In Your Attic.
Good Insulation Pays For Itself. Good insulation is the best way to save heat in winter and keep it out in summer and the better the application, the more you'll save in heating/cooling costs. To protect yourself against rapidly rising fuel costs, be sure you have a minimum of R19 insulation in your attic.

Obituary

John Leonard

John Joseph Leonard, 67, a lifelong resident of Cohasset and the town's first letter carrier, died May 3 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

He was a retired manager of North Cohasset Post Office, where he had worked for 33 years.

He was the first carrier appointed when delivery service was begun May 1, 1940 in Cohasset. Prior to then he had been a clerk. Appointed acting superintendent Feb. 2, 1962 in North Cohasset, he was appointed station superintendent at that office in 1964 when North Cohasset office was converted to a sub-station of the Cohasset office.

Following retirement he had managed the Metropolitan District Commission's McConnell pool in Weymouth for five years.

He was a World War II Navy veteran and also served during the Korean Conflict. He was a member of George H. Mealy American Legion Post and St. Anthony's Church.

He leaves his wife, Ann E. (Reid) Leonard; three daughters, Ann E. Westfield of Plymouth, Patricia M. Litz of Scituate and Susan J. Leonard of Springfield, Va.; a sister, Laura A. Leonard of Cohasset; and four grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated May 6 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Remembrances in his name may be made to American Cancer Society, 47 West Elm St., Brockton, 02401.

Bates is water chairman

At the regular meeting of the Board of Commissioners held last week the board was reorganized. Lot E. Bates was elected Chairman, and Robert Jackson was elected Clerk.

They played for Pope John Paul

AT THE VATICAN — Two Cohasset musicians are in the group from the 50 member wind ensemble playing in Vatican City for Pope John Paul II.

Catherine O'Brien & Edward Durant at the Vatican

Two young musicians went to Rome over April vacation with the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble, an organization sponsored by New England Conservatory.

Catherine O'Brien and Edward Durant were among the 50 students who played for Pope John Paul II at the Vatican.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard O'Brien of Cohasset and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley Durant of Cohasset.

The ensemble gave a concert in St. Peter's Square with a crowd of over 5,000 looking on. During the performance, Pope John Paul II walked across the square and joined Music Director and Conductor Daniel J. Riley on the podium. He listened to the performance from the conductor's vantage point, expressing his surprise at the expertise of such young performers, and his delight in the beautiful gift of music.

The Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble is one of the outstanding organizations of its kind in the United States. It was founded in 1971 by Frank L. Battisti with the basic objective being to provide opportunities for selected wind, brass, and percussion players from high schools to perform music from the quality literature of the wind ensemble and the wind band. The group is under the sponsorship of New England Conservatory of Music, answering the need to serve the most talented from various high schools in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The ensemble is one of the performing organizations of the Extension Division at the Conservatory, Mark Churchill, Director. During the past 10 years, the ensemble has performed numerous concerts in Jordan Hall at New England Conservatory, and throughout the state. There have been several appearances at the State House in Boston, on Channel 5 Boston Television, and a series of European Concert Tours, including: Scotland and England, German, Czechslovakia, Austria, Canada, Finland, the Soviet Union, Greece and France.

The performance included the premiere of the "Golden Dome March," an original composition by Jeffrey Ashur, a senior this year at Boston College High School. Jeffrey conducted this piece, which was written especially for his colleagues and this tour.

Fire Facts

The fastest, safest way to get out of your house is to use the normal exits. However, if a fire has broken out, if heavy smoke and flames are blocking hallways and stairs, you may have to use a window or other emergency exit.

The time to plan for a fire emergency is before it happens, when everyone is calm and rational. That's when decisions about escape routes can be made carefully and safe evacuation can be rehearsed. Have a family conference as soon as possible. Don't delay. Planning won't help after the fire. Your conference doesn't have to be long or complicated. Just emphasize the most important fact: Life Safety Comes First!

Here are some suggestions for formulating an escape plan:

1. Draw a floor plan of your home showing all rooms, entry ways, windows, and garage.

2. Show an emergency escape route from each area with red arrows marking egress route.

3. With a broken arrow, show an alternate direction if normal exit is blocked by heat and smoke.

4. Make sure exit doors and windows can be opened easily, especially by children. Teach family members how to safely break a window to escape, if this becomes necessary, using a chair or other object.

5. Have a defined area where your family will meet outside and away from the fire.

6. Give family members special duty assignments, such as:

*Notify the fire department (know procedure).

*Have special help for infants, elderly, handicapped, and upper story occupants.

7. Make a copy of your escape plan for each family member, to be used for reference.

'Snappy Sneakers' at Osgood jogathon

"Snapper Sneakers" meets a new friend this year at the Osgood School annual jogathon on Thursday, May 14 beginning at 9 a.m. "Snapper," who represents the tortoise who slowly and steadily finishes what he starts, will meet a kind, thoughtful and caring friend this year — the Unicorn.

Teachers have hinted that there might be a surprise visit by Snapper's new pink friend...who is someone who runs a race, but stops to help a runner who falls, or someone who needs their shoelaces tied.

First, second and third grade students will go through warm-ups, walk-jog the school's outdoor jogging track and cool down at the end. Each grade level will jog according to the fitness of the class with the goal of finishing what they start.

Helen Pratt, physical education instructor and coordinator of the event, has worked towards de-emphasizing the competition of "winning" and finds the approach of students finishing what they set out to do bolsters their sense of self-achievement.

Parents, siblings and friends are warmly invited to come cheer the participants on and meet Unicorn.

Cohasset 'B' team registers soccer win

By Charlie DeSantis

Recently the Cohasset B Soccer team traveled to Newton and won 3-1.

The Cohasset team's persistent defense led by the strong goal tending of Greg Igo made a complete turnaround from the 0-3 defeat at Westwood a week earlier.

Cohasset was able to capitalize on a well executed fast break capped by David MacDonald's goal; a quick double change of direction and a long hard shot by Mike DeSantis, and finally a penalty shot sticking in the net.

To date this has been the team's best all around display and Coach DeSantis can only praise the effort and performance of all and hope that it can continue.

Saturday the B's played the traditionally powerful Wellesleysquad at 4 p.m. on Milliken Field.

Crime Watch program draws 100 plus

By Patricia Desmond

Cohasset is a crime conscious town. There are already hundreds of homes equipped with elaborate and expensive burglar alarm systems.

So it was no surprise when more than 100 residents turned out for a talk on the new Crime Watch program this week.

The surprise was that there are cheaper and sometimes more effective ways than alarms to reduce the likelihood of burglaries.

Patrolman Gerald Doyle, crime prevention officer, told a not so funny story about one of his fellow officers who talked with him about locks just last week at the station.

The officer said he had a lousy lock on his front door. It was a key in the knob lock, similar to the sort used by most builders. The officer wanted advice on what types of lock to replace it with.

Calls to the station ended the discussion without a chance for that advice.

Several days later the officer's home was burglarized. Entry was gained through the front door.

Police Chief John DeBassio pointed out that his department needs the help of the citizens to stop crime since there are shifts with only three or four men working.

Patrolman Doyle will be available to do home surveys — checking security measures and making suggestions on ways to deter criminals in the most cost effective manner about two weeks from now.

Thomas Chuda, a state lock expert, suggested anyone interested in making his home more safe should get the information Jerry can provide before going out and buying new locks or alarms or other gadgets.

"One of the most important things we can do here tonight is to pledge our support to the program," Jack Conway, local realtor, program master of ceremonies and the prime project sponsor to date, told the gathering.

Conway said that the real estate professionals of town will be working together in the future to make it a safer town.

Programs like Crime Watch cut the burglary rate in Sharon by one-third.

Quite a bit of technical information was disseminated on home safety measures.

Pratt Library to close Wednesdays

But weekend hours to remain unchanged

With the onset of the new fiscal year, July 1, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library will be closed Wednesdays.

The library trustees decided last week to go along with the suggestion of Richard Hayes, library director, and authorize the new and reduced hours.

Dick said the reduction — long discussed as a possibility — is due to the budget cuts voted by town meeting.

The new schedule will provide for a closing at 5 p.m. on Saturday, one hour earlier then usual.

Wednesday is a day of low library usage, according to the library staff.

"Thanks to the dedication of the staff, who are willing to work weekends, we won't have to cut out our Saturday or Sunday hours," Dick said.

Now the worry is: what will happen the following year?

Dick said he doesn't know whether the library will be forced to close down one more day. This year's book budget has been reduced 17 per cent despite inflationary increases in the cost of books, staff has been reduced 20 percent, when raises are considered along with the overall 11 per cent decrease in funds.

While discussion of a reduced library schedule has gone on amongst town officials, few residents have entered the discussion.

Dick said there's been no complaints so far from the public about the plan.

"People seem willing to accept it," he said.

The library has been open on a 12 hour day on Wednesdays.

Laughingly the library director suggested one way to increase library funds would be to install a video game.

"I hear they make a lot of money," Dick said. "And people seem willing to put their money into that even if they aren't willing to put their money into libraries."

More seriously he suggested a new state tax might be imposed on the video games with funds designated for libraries.

Dick said that since libraries are not considered essential services he isn't sure whether state aid will trickle down to them under Proposition 2½.

"We're probably going to have to hurt for a year or two," he said.

Light plan draws residents' ire

Some residents are truly alarmed at the planned one-third reduction of town street lights.

"I think it's terrible," said Olga Dellorfano of Rust Way. "The Crime rate will go up, and what if you get a flat tire or don't see a teen on his bike?"

In all the 24 years I've lived here I've never voiced my opinion before, but now I've written to the Police Chief and the selectmen."

Homer Severne of Nichols Road sponsored a petition against the reduction, which 33 residents signed. He called the move a "penny wise and pound foolish" proposal which he thinks will raise insurance rates.

His wife, Grace, felt the reduction of lights on her street alone will increase the town's accident rate as well. "There are going to be some real accidents on this street," she predicted.

Selectmen are having to reduce the number of street lights because the budget appropriation of $35,000 passed at the recent town meeting, is only enough to pay for two-thirds of the street lights in the town. Last year's appropriation of $41,000 was reduced 15 percent as the board worked to comply with Proposition 2½.

Arthur Clark, former chairman of that board who has been volunteering his time in the selectmen's office recently, said he didn't know what could be done to increase the street light budget now that town meeting is over. "It's too bad people didn't take an interest in it before," he commented.

One of the lights scheduled to be cut off sits at the edge of Clark's driveway.

Selectmen explained any resident wishing to keep his street light can do so — as long as he picks up the cost. An Eastern Edison representative said the cost of a single street light would average about $6.25 each month.

Police Chief John DeBassio explained one reason he proposed his crime watch program was to offset a possible increase in the crime rate due to the reduction of street lights.

"Adequate street lighting does prevent crimes," he said. "The loss of lights is not to my liking, but there is not much we can do. I hope to pick up the slack with the new crime watch program.

Town's other dump is on the block

The town's other dump is up for sale and at least one private trash contractor is willing to pay the $5 million asking price.

The private dump is at Cohasset Heights. It is a state approved landfill of 50 acres.

Town officials from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell are interested in working out a regional proposal for purchase of the dump. A public meeting on the topic is scheduled early in June.

The regional use of the land is something the owner, Jim Tyeryar, would like to see.

He isn't in any rush to sell off his property since he plans to just about retire after it's done. Jim is only 48.

Officials of the towns questioned about the regionalization say the idea has merits.

Cohasset has another seven years at its present dump, providing state officials don't change the operation. The other towns considering a regional approach are also feeling the crunch of more expensive dump operations and limited time.

Still Jim says the people from Browning Ferris would meet his asking price tomorrow morning. The towns, of course, will go slowly in whatever they decided.

He said he would rather not sell to Browning Ferris since their purchase of his landfill would give them a monopoly on all the private landfills in the area.

"I've got a good clientele at the landfill. I don't feel I'd be doing them justice to sell off to a monopoly."

Cohasset's week

Bobby Beale improves

Bobby Beale is out of his coma and about to begin a program of rehabilitative therapy.

He moved from Massachusetts General Hospital to Braintree Hospital this week.

The young man was brought back to the area from Florida through the goodwill of people who responded to a drive two months ago to fly the coma-stricken accident victim back from Florida.

Bobby was hit by a car back in January as he walked along the side of a road. Since returning to Boston he lost the lower part of his left leg to a bone infection.

King taps Knight

Gov. Edward King recently reappointed Captain Arthur M. Knight, of Cohasset, as Pilot Commissioner for District One.

"Captain Knight's proficiency in marine shipping is outstanding," Gov. King said. "I am sure that he will continue his good work on the commission," the Governor added.

Knight is currently president of the Boston Tow Boat Company for the Mystic Steamship Corporation.

Knight studied business at the Harvard Business School in the advanced management program, from 1964 to 1965. He also attended various maritime and naval schools from 1941 to 1946 receiving his Naval Master Mariner degree.

Capt. Knight has been the president of the Propeller Club and the Boston Marine Society. He has also been vice chairman of the National Cargo Bureau, a member of Lloyds Register of Shipping and past chairman of the National Safety Council.

Capt. Knight lives at 491 Jerusalem Road.

Kudos for Stockbridge

Lieutenant Charles E. Stockbridge
Police Department
Cohasset, Mass. 02025

Dear Charlie:

The Board of Selectmen wishes to congratulate you for being selected as the outstanding police officer of the year by the members of the Quincy Court.

The recognition of your ability as a prosecutor and your dedication to your police work serves to bring distinction to you and to the Cohasset Police Department.

We wish to express our appreciation to you for your years of contribution to the work of the department and our best wishes for the future.

Very truly yours,
Henry W. Ainslie, Jr.
Rocco F. Laugelle
Mary Jane E. McArthur

Sen. McKinnon hours

State Sen. Allan McKinnon or a member of his staff will be available to speak to constituents Tuesday, May 26, from 3:30 to 4:30 at Town Hall. If this is inconvenient, please call the office at 727-8820, and they will arrange another time for an appointment.

Flower girls wanted

The George H. Mealy Post, American Legion Auxiliary is looking for flower girls to march in the Memorial Day parade from the Cohasset Common Memorial to the American Legion. Flower girls must be between 5 and 12 years old and be daughters or granddaughters of a veteran.

Anyone interested should call Lisa Cogill at 383-6955 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. or Bill Sullivan at 383-1255. Close out date is this Friday.

Float fee meeting

Selectmen will be meeting with the harbor study committee soon to discuss those proposed float fees. That committee had suggested to the board earlier that fees be charged for floats in an effort to make the harbor more self-supporting.

Cohasset Sailing Club Commodore Edward Atkinson registered his opposition to the plan with the board, explaining that his organization is a non-profit one which serves over 3,000 people each season.

Clark won't take temporary post

By Jennifer Grisdale

Arthur Clark won't be taking that temporary assistant to the board of selectmen job after all.

Arthur explained in a letter to selectmen he had to take care of some "personal affairs" and for that reason would not be able to accept the position, originally scheduled to run from May 11 through June 30.

The former chairman of that board told the Mariner, "I have some personal business to get done, and I felt that a job would tie me down, but I still plan to go in (voluntarily to the town hall) as my time allows me."

In the letter he added, "Henry (Ainslie, now chairman of the board) and Rocky (Laugelle), it has been a pleasure to have served on the board with you, and I am deeply appreciative of the wise counsel and support you have given me."

Arthur decided not to run for re-election this spring after 13 years on the board. Henry and Rocky had proposed that Arthur be hired through the end of the fiscal year to continue work he had done as chairman of the board.

The proposal had opposition, though, from Selectman Mary Jane McArthur and resident Bruce Edmonds, who felt the board should first get approval for the position from the personnel board.

Mary Jane maintained the board did not need Clark as a salaried employee for the seven weeks. "Arthur has been volunteering his services (since the town election) and I commend him for it; it clearly demonstrates his dedication to the town. There are a lot of tasks that need to be completed...but I think if we all work hard we can get them done," she said.

The board did receive funds at the recent town meeting to hire an executive secretary. The position is being advertised now, and selectmen hope to have someone selected by July 1.

Light plan draws residents' ire

"It's too bad Proposition 2½ seems to be affecting all the things we've grown accustomed to having," he added.

Selectmen, who said they have tried to keep lights at corners, tops of hills, main roads, and other places they considered dangerous, plan a public hearing for 7:30 p.m. tomorrow to hear complaints and ideas. An Eastern Edison representative is expected to attend.

At least one resident plans to fight to keep all the street lights on in this town: "I'll never stop fighting this," Olga Dellorfano vowed.

The irony is that Police Sgt. John Rhodes maintains many street lights are not working in the town now, and said Edison has been very slow to repair them.

"On any given night you will find 25 to 30 percent of the street lights out," he said.

securely locked. But also making sure whatever methods are used are safe in the event of fire.

A film on the topic was clear in condemning iron bars, installed permanently on windows. Or double cylinder locks (the kind that need a key from the inside) in places where small children may be left.

But one of the main pieces of important information is that there are ways to make many unsafe doors, locks and windows safe.

The ideal for safety's sake would be a solid core wooden door with a fish eye and a single cylinder, one inch, bolt lock.

But there are ways to make doors with many lights of glass safe. Call for an appointment with Officer Doyle for more information.

After the meeting Conway talked about the fears of Cohasset residents. He said there were more people who were interested but frightened to attend a meeting of that kind.

There will be other meetings. Many held in local neighborhoods.

Some of the information — on how burglars get into homes — is not appropriate for newspaper publication.

What should be known is that the average age for a burglar in this state is 15. Most burglars get into homes either through unlocked doors or windows or through easily unlocked ones.

Chuda said when people take action with the idea of preventing burglaries, they often react and take inappropriate measures.

"These are very, very simple things that we're talking about," he said, advising the audience to use headless screws in some locks and to replace the usual short screws in doors with ones two-and-a-half inches long.

The list goes on.

Muriel Desmond, manager of Conway's Cohasset office, said almost everyone at the meeting signed the volunteer cards for the program.

Chief John DeBassio said the town's Boy Scouts have volunteered to help with the inscribing of identification numbers on valuables.

The numbers make it less likely a burglar will want a television set or other pieces of property. They also make it possible the item could be returned, if it is stolen anyway.

Chuda cited a case of a youth being arrested recently in Newton with stolen property. It turned out the property, which had been etched, was taken from someone in California.

"Without the numbers that property would have just sat in the Newton Police station," Chuda said.

The Black Rock House

The Black Rock House, no longer standing, was first built in 1757 on the ledges of the oceanside of Jerusalem Road, near Black Rock Beach.

The house was torn down in 1903 to improve the view from across the roadway and the more recently demolished Black Rock House went up in 1904.

For a time the hotel catered to hunters who would come to town in the fall of the year. The migratory coot was their favorite target.

Light hearing

The hearing on street lights is Thursday, May 21, at town hall.

Without a large protest, one-third of the lights will go.

The street light budget was cut by 15 percent, in keeping with Proposition 2½. Concurrently Eastern Edison decided to raise the electric rates by 16 percent.

So one-third of the lights will be put out.

This is not the answer.

Proposition 2½ was never meant to be an arbitrary across the board cut. Now some street lights may not be needed. And in some communities, studies have shown the electric bills sent to local communities are not tabulated correctly.

Maybe there is room to cut.

For instance, the kids in town continually extinguish lights on the Cohasset Common. It could be the solution is to leave them off.

But the way to make the decision on funds for street lighting is to determine what lights are necessary instead of this arbitrary slash.

But without a massive turnout this week, that is what will happen.

Water shutoff

The board of health isn't happy with the possible water shut-off to come.

At least one board member thinks a tax lien on the property is the way the water commissioners should handle the problem.

But you can't pay salaries with a tax lien.

Ben Curley, acting director of the department, says there are no hardship cases in the group of water customers who owe more than $500 to the department.

If there are some hardship cases, still unknown, those people should appeal to the water department for some relief.

Otherwise, we think it only fair that they pay their bill if they expect the water to continue flowing.

Why should the rest of the town face the possibility of higher water rates to make up for the deadbeats?

The money has to come from somewhere.

A resource: people who care

[The Rev. John Benbow delivered the following address to the Cohasset Social Service League last week. Ed.]

When I looked at the invitation to this meeting in order to learn what I was talking about, I discovered the title "The League is on the Move. What's Next." Now my only problem with that title is the terminal punctuation mark. It is a period. That would imply that I am going to state "What's next." I am not. Therefore, for the sake of accuracy, please change your title by turning that period into a question mark:

THE LEAGUE IS ON THE MOVE. WHAT'S NEXT?

One of your members, who shall remain anonymous, suggested that another change might be appropriate: "The League is on the run..." She was referring, I'm sure, to the League's departure from its cozy purple home of so many years. Moving from "the purple house" is one of a number of unsettling changes the Social Service League has had to confront. Undoubtedly for many of you that kind of move feels like being "on the run," or losing some of the League's identity. For that reason, the question "What's next?" is an unsettling one, reminding us not only of the changes in the past, but also of those which may face us in the future. Change is uncomfortable and unwelcome to nearly everyone.

One of my favorite stories is about a church which tried to put a quotation from the Bible in each of its rooms. In a hallway with a water fountain they put a line from Isaiah: 'Everyone who thirsts, come to the waters." In the sanctuary, it was "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." But there was one room for which they could find no suitable Scripture verse. It was the nursery, usually filled with half a dozen vociferous infants. Finally someone discovered I Corinthians 15:51, which says: "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed."

We too shall "all be changed," for change is part of the reality of our times. For the Social Service League, the inevitability of change has meant not only finding new quarters; it has also meant responding (I think appropriately) to the changes in Federal and state requirements relating to Medicaid and Medicare — changes which made it impractical to maintain services which were important to the organization and the community. Leaving Medicare, especially, was an unwelcome change for most members of the League. Yet there seemed to be no other way to deal with the insatiable need of bureaucracies for multiplying paperwork. (Just last week the national commission for the reduction of unnecessary paperwork released its report. It runs to a thousand pages, so we can feel sure the problem is finally being addressed. Or can we?)

In the midst of all the changes thrust upon us by the times, we might prefer the Van Winkle option — sleeping through it. Rip Van Winkle's problem, you know, was not that he slept for twenty years, but that a revolution took place while he was taking his nap. The changes with which we and our organizations must cope may be more evolutionary than revolutionary; yet sleeping through them is scarcely appropriate.

So let's take a look at change. What I want to do this afternoon is to consider two levels of change which confront us in 1981, and to ask two questions about them. What does change do to us? And, What does it do to our organizations?

The first level of change I want to consider is the change in governmental programs and priorities. I don't mean just the Medicare paperwork, but the entire picture of extensive change in what government does and tries to do. It doesn't matter after the fact whether you voted for or against President Reagan, for or against Governor King, for or against Proposition 2½. The reality is that those two persons and that one program (and all that they represent, of course, in other programs and other persons following their lead) are the symbols of the most massive change in governmental programs and priorities we have seen since the end of World War II. Beyond the slogans and the jargon which have arisen on both sides of the issue, this President, this Governor, and this Proposition reflect the consensus of voters who want less government and lower taxes — and consequently fewer government services of various kinds. (What the voters wanted, of course, was the removal of the "fat" of unneeded programs and unwanted services; but the first rule of bureaucracy is that programs come and programs go, but the fat goes on forever.) Programs will go; services will be lost; human services, including some for those least able to cope without them, will be sacrificed.

I'm certainly not here to talk about politics. Right now it's not even a political question. Forces have been set in motion, for better or for worse, on local, state, and national levels, which will reduce or eliminate not only secondary but some primary services to the elderly, the poor, and the mentally and physically ill. No amount of political rhetoric, either defending or attacking those changes, is going to alter the fact.

What do these governmental changes (which are only symbolized by a President, a Governor, and a Proposition) mean to us? They will affect us disproportionately. Those who live in poverty or not far from its edge will feel more drastically the nicks of Stockman's razor; those who are the recipients (or relatives of the recipients) of home care for the elderly, or public housing subsidy, or Medicare, will need to find some other way to make ends meet; users of food stamps and reduced-cost meals in schools and for the elderly may need to water down the soup a bit; those employed by cities and towns and schools will feel what one young teacher called the "brunt instrument" of Prop. 2½. To the extent that neither you nor anyone you know fits into any of those categories, you may feel nothing from all these changes except relief. Or that wonderful feeling of helpless compassion, when we're persuaded there's not a thing we can do about the needs we can see!

The other question is, What do these changes mean to our organizations? Specifically, to such voluntary human service organizations as the Social Service League, the churches, and so on: what do these changes mean to us? I'm not sure how to answer that question. It may be that we will shrug our shoulders and ignore what is happening. We may even focus all our attention on the desirable cuts in services, and be able to forget that there will be those in genuine need for whom no services are available. It was easy enough to identify needs when "government money" was available for meeting them. Will we find it so easy when there's nowhere to turn for grants, subsidies and assistance? Let me give you a personal example. Last year I worked as a volunteer with the local Office for Children, heading a committee concerned with Child Abuse and Neglect. We identified one means of addressing the problem — not through screaming headlines and sordid stories, but through parenting education and support groups. We applied for and received a grant to train leaders for those groups. For $1000, we can

Fifi nips at dog discrimination

1 May 1981

Dear Selectman Laugelle,

I would like to lodge a complaint concerning the discriminatory practices of the Town of Cohasset in regards to the equal rights of women.

I find the double standards of the town that I observed in the dog licensing application abominable. It seems quite unfair that unspade female dogs and the owners thereof should be charged double in obtaining a license. It is the responsibility of male dogs and their owners that should be taken into consideration. Why should those roving rogues be allowed to run loose impregnating innocent females and suffer none of the consequences. In order to be fair, it seems only reasonable that both female and male dogs should be charged the same fee with perhaps a lower fee for those of us who have been sterilized, male and female alike. Why should only the female dogs suffer the injustice of discrepancy in rates? There must be a committee of some sort in this fine town that could look into this problem and reach a just solution in rectifying the inequity of the present fee system.

Thank you for your time in this matter.

Sincerely,

FiFi La Pooch

A copy of this letter has been sent to the ERA to inform them of the town's blatant discrimination.

People who care

train 12 people, who in turn will lead parenting groups of 10 to 12 people. Great! But what about next year? The Office for Children may well have disappeared; the grant program will certainly be dead. I have to ask myself: Wouldn't it be easier not to pour a lot of energy into that area next year? Will the lack of resources and staff support mean that my committee will leave child abuse in the overworked hands of the Department of Social Services rather than pick up loose ends like parenting education or training for public school teachers? Will we, and other volunteers like us, either fail to identify human needs or fail to do anything about them precisely because of the general cutbacks we all know are ahead of us? Or to transfer my questions to the Social Service League: will you as volunteers find in the changing times a welcome excuse for apathy? Or will you respond to the new levels of need with a new level of commitment? With new imagination and redoubled energy? With ingenious ways to make $1 and one volunteer do what five were doing before?

II

The second level of change is not as massive or historic as the first. Indeed, it is almost invisible in many ways, though none the less real for its invisibility. It is the change — no, the many and multiple changes — in our community.

A few years ago my brother came here to visit us. After the $2 tour of Cohasset, which I put on his bill along with room rent and breakfast for four, he made the classic comment: "It must be fun, living in a theme park!" What he meant was that Cohasset gives at least the initial impression of having been created by Disney World to illustrate Olde New England, the changeless character of a quaint village reflected in the white clapboard houses around the Common — etc., etc. You can write your own tourist literature; on the $2 tour all you get is my rapid rejoinder, "Yeah, come into Town Hall and you can meet Mickey Mouse."

Sometimes we appear to be changeless. Sometimes we pretend to be. But we know we are not. We know that the more things seem the same the more they change beneath the surface. And we know that for all our stability and charm we are a community in the midst of significant change.

What is Cohasset? Ask a dozen people, and you'll get a dozen answers. To some it is several hundred boats surrounded by salt water and a few houses. To some it is a rural village. Some see it as a convenient extension of Boston — close enough to get to the job or the theatre, far enough away to ignore Kevin White and Pixie Palladino. Some of my Cohasset acquaintances seem to be adding a new meaning to the phrase "bedroom community." And some are apparently trying to get back to the old Indian name, which could be translated "On the Rocks."

When some members of the Social Service League did an informal survey of Cohasset residents last year, they found the following ranking of needs perceived by citizens. First was the problem of drug and alcohol abuse, seen as affecting all age levels. Second was the need for lower cost housing, not only for the aged. Third was a concern for Cohasset's adolescents and their lack of a place to socialize acceptably (whatever that means). Fourth was the need for genuine day care programs, including programs for preschool children of working mothers, and after school programs for children up to early adolescence (when presumably they can go forth and socialize acceptably). Fifth were the needs of single parents and their families. Other needs ranged from sex education to hospice care, and included the needs of the elderly (which may be increasing), and of the ill, and of the victims of domestic violence.

The survey was delightfully unscientific, but I think it can tell us several things. Look at the concerns at the head of the list and you will see the needs of a changing community, not a stable or stagnant one. We can see even in this informal list the reality and the painfulness of change. We can also see that the identified needs are interlocking, intergenerational, pervasive ones. No single agency, public or private, and no single organization, can meet those needs. If they are to be met, it will be by a concerted and cooperative effort to confront our community and its multiple (though often invisible) changes.

Again, the questions are: How do these changes affect us? And, how do they affect our organizations? On the personal level, there is not a single person present in this room who is not affected in some way by one or more of the top-priority needs revealed in the survey. Those needs are our needs, and the needs of our children or our parents or our friends. We are affected by them. What will our organizations do about them? What will the Social Service League do in response to the human service needs of a changing community?

Having raised altogether too many questions, I want to close with a few comments. These are not answers. I don't have any ready answers, because I don't think any of us know "what's next" for the nation, the state, or our community.

It does seem to me, though, that in the midst of a sea-change of unpredictable extent, the Social Service League in Cohasset is lucky enough to have a crisis on its hands. You heard me: lucky enough to have a crisis. I read somewhere that the Chinese word for "crisis" is made up of two other symbols. One of them means "danger" and the other means "opportunity." A crisis is a dangerous opportunity, or an opportune danger — or perhaps a little of each.

As for the danger side of things, for any voluntary organization from a church to a volunteer fire department, the only real and threatening danger is apathy. For the voluntary organization as for us as persons, when we cease to care we cease to live. The life of a voluntary organization is defined by, informed by, and motivated by its level of caring.

And as for the opportunity: In your institutional base, in the work of your staff people, and in the invaluable support of your scores of volunteers, the Social Service League can respond to massive internal and external changes with some valuable resources. Through the liaison you have developed with other agencies, with the schools, and with the churches of Cohasset, you can invite and coordinate community concerns and community efforts. You can build and celebrate the kind of voluntary human service effort which founded the League years ago. You can face a new age, a new set of problems, new dangers and new opportunities with the greatest of resources, perhaps the only resource that really matters: people who care.

A light complaint

[A copy of the following letter was sent to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. Ed.]

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Mariner had an article on Wednesday, May 13, 1981 that one-third of our lights will go in our town.

Another article read that a new position is being created for an executive secretary for the Selectmen of Cohasset, at the cost of our taxes, for $25,000 a year. I feel that the $6,225 that is spent for our street lights is far more important, for the safety of our residents, than paying $25,000 for a position that we have done without all these years.

I have been a resident of Cohasset for twenty-four years. I live on Rust Way, a dead end street. I pay about $4,500 real estate tax yearly. I never had children attend Cohasset schools, we don't have sidewalks, we don't have sewerage and we pay to have our garbage collected. We have less police protection, less fire protection, and now we are going to be deprived of a street light. Darkness only encourages crime. Would one housebreak, or murder, be worth a few dollars to the town?

I am certain that we can find other means of economizing — perhaps by changing to vapor lights — they are less expensive and give better lighting.

This is my first and only request that I have ever asked from my yearly tax money. I enjoy living in the Town of Cohasset and I would appreciate your consideration.

Sincerely,
Olga Dellorfano

P.S. The residents of Rust Way are planning to attend the hearing at Town Hall on Thursday, May 21, as they all feel the same about this matter as I do.

Dressage competition

The Cohasset Riding Club and the Heritage Dressage Association are sponsoring a competition from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, May 24, at the Marshfield Fair Grounds.

There will be 98 riders participating including a member of the U.S. Equestrian Dressage Team and an Olympic bronze medal winner from a former team.

The $1 admission benefits the Olympic team.

Her name is Katlin Augusta, she weighs 5 lbs., 15 ounces, and was born at South Shore Hospital to Diane and Robert Jackson. Grandparents are Vivian and Earl Higgins of Cohasset and Robert and Charlene Jackson of Hingham. Can't leave out Katlin's two year old brother, Keith, who'll be a big help with the diaper brigade.

☐Agnas McCall, Bob Skorupa and their five week old son, Segei are planning a moped party in the near future, their own welcome to Cohasset party. They moved here from Beacon Hill recently and are now considering opening a general law office. Both are attorneys.

☐Sunday afternoon the Cadet's put on a "Carnaval" at the Cohasset Community Center. It was a fund raiser for their trip, June 19, to the Amish Pennsylvania Dutch Country.

Jean Bailey said the "Cadets" have held two bake sales, one at the town meeting and another at town elections. They also had an Italian dinner at the Parish House. Jean said they're thinking of having a car wash sometime soon. They've been planning the trip since September and hope this year's trip will be as successful as their Washington D.C. trip last year.

☐Peter and Rose Collins put their potato patch in Sunday, their fight against inflation. They didn't say whether Emily and Peter helped or not.

FISHERMEN AT WORK — Jeff Lane and Greg Fortuna, 14, clean the pollock they caught last week off the pier at Government Island.

☐Karen Bartow is taking it easy for awhile. She and her husband Steven took a trip to Bermuda just before the general strike on the island. She's looking forward to getting her house in order. Actually she's not looking forward to it at all, but doesn't feel she has an excuse any more. She found one of her husband's suits in the cleaners after a year. Now all she needs to find is the pants. You'll see her around since she still plans on writing articles for the Mariner. (Good, Ed.)

☐Hope to see you all at the Memorial Day Parade next Monday.

Gambling foe raps Hull Selectmen

Carol Oteri, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., issued a statement in which she comments on the casino gambling bill prepared by Hull's Board of Selectmen.

"Hull has been screaming 'Home Rule' in an effort to silence opposition from its impacted neighbors in Hingham and Cohasset, yet, Hull has the audacity to file a bill specifying not only Hull but the town of Adams at the other end of the state. Hull Town Meeting, attended by only 10 percent of the town's registered voters, approved action on a bill pertaining to Hull, not Adams. It makes me wonder just who our elected officials are working for. The home rule issue has been forfeited by their failure to file a simple home rule petition," she said.

Referring to the bill's requirement for a $25,000 application fee (payable to the Local Licensing Authority) to cover the cost of investigating a casino applicant, "Investigations conducted on potential casino operators elsewhere have required sums many times that figure. Where are all the 'safeguards' we heard so much about? Are they only for the casino owners?"

Oteri also touched on MGM's plans to run a Jetfoil between Boston and Hull.

"The 20 minute ride time being quoted pertains to a run between Boston and Pemberton Pier. People have been deluded into thinking that the Jetfoil would dock at the Hall Estate. Instead, buses between Pemberton Pier and the casino would flow along the length of the peninsula all day and into the night. The planned operating hours for the casino included in the bill are from 10 a.m. until 4 a.m. the following morning, with the option to apply for a two hour extension. We will all "miss the boat" having to cope with the inevitable problems that result from the type of loitering we can expect at all transportation connection points."

She expressed surprise that anyone could "take seriously MGM's promise of 'European style' gambling."

She pointed to the fact that local residents are excluded from the gaming rooms in such areas, limiting participation to tourists registered as casino-hotel guests. She said, "The same promise was made to Atlantic City. Instead of bluenosed high rollers their bread and butter consists of blue collar low rollers — day trippers who spend little money away from the gaming tables."

"Can history repeat itself? According to the history books, the last time Hull had gaming rooms we had machine politics, payoffs to shield thriving prostitution and pickpocket operations, mysterious fires and flim flam schemes of every variety."

Cohasset Girl Scouts sell mucho cookies

Deborah Haase, local Girl Scount Service Unit Cookie Chairman for Patriots' Trail announced that the "inflation cookie monster" didn't take a big bite out of the 1981 Cookie Sale.

According to Mrs. Haase, 82 local Girl Scouts sold a total of 4660 boxes of cookies.

Record sales were made by Brownie Troop #4615 headed by Mrs. Velma Begley, selling 987 boxes of cookies, and Junior Troop #4320, headed by Mrs. Taffy Nothnagle, selling 905 boxes.

Individual girls who sold 100 or more boxes are: Brownie Troop #4615, Susie Hughes and Kristin Jackson; Brownie Troop #4319, Rebecca Jordan and Kristin Martin; Brownie Troop #4625, Pamela Haase; Junior Troop #4339, Kristin Gleason and Amy Sheppard; Junior Troop #4320, Diana Kornet and Jennifer Martin; Cadette Troop #4300, Jean Bailey.

Girls selling 150 or more boses are: Brownie Troop #4615, Laureen Wood; Brownie Troop #4616, Briar LaCroix and Junior Troop #4339, Alix Ash and Kathy Haase.

Proceeds from the cookie sale help to fund traditional and contemporary programs. These programs deepen self-awareness and foster growth and maturity in the girls.

Toma fund hits halfway mark

The fund to bring Dave Toma to Cohasset has about half of the $5,000 needed and the date is drawing near.

Toma, a nationally known drug education specialist and the prototype for the Barretta T.V. series, is coming to Cohasset June 8 and 9 to talk with the parents and teens in town.

Thus far $3,000 has been raised.

"If people buy tickets to the dance, we can raise the money we need," Dick Conley of the drug education committee said this week.

The dance begins at 9 p.m. Friday, May 22, at Hugo's. Tickets at $10 a couple are available at the door.

A raffle involving more than $700 in goods will be held during the evening.

Dick, who is also a school committee member, pointed out that the Toma program is just the beginning of the efforts to deal with drug education in town.

"This is the first of many projects," he said. "What effect he will have, we don't know. He's had good results in other communities.

"I'd say Cohasset's drug problem — and we include alcohol and drugs — is no greater or no worse than any other small community.

"Still it's a real problem."

He said his group didn't get involved in estimating the number of kids in town who need the program.

"What we want to do is prove to the kids that alcohol and drugs are harmful."

Back on the subject of the dance, Dick wanted to make it clear that the band, The Fox, is a good group.

"People will have a good time."

And $2,000 more is needed for the project.

Register for quilting class at CCC

Registrations for two upcoming workshops taught by well-known quilting expert, Mary Struzziero, are now being accepted at the Community Center of Cohasset.

Participants in her Textured Star Workshop will fold, tack and baste their favorite calico prints which can be made into an unusual wall hanging or pillow. The program is scheduled for Wednesday, May 27, from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. The cost is $6.

By popular demand, another Trapunto workshop will be offered on Wednesday, June 3, from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. Beginner or more complicated intermediate patterns will be available. The $8 cost includes materials.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the center, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Massport Executive Director David Davis [L], congratulates John Hegarty, President of Cohasset Colonials of Cohasset after receiving the "E" Award pin in recognition of his participation in the Massport Small Business Export program. Massport's recent selection for the coveted Presidential "E" Award for excellence in Export represents the first time since the establishment of the award that a New England public authority has been the recipient. This company, and its product, like the other participants, represents the best in entrepreneurial spirit among small businesses in New England.

Cohasset people: Joanne Sheppard will get you in shape

By Laura Doherty

Exercise specialist Joanne Sheppard has an air of vitality about her that's evident not only in her physical appearance but also in her attitude and personality.

"Exercise," Joanne says, "should be more than just body movements, it should be combined with a positive mental attitude about oneself." When people become involved in an exercise program, she explains, they begin to feel better about themselves. In her ten years of experience with various exercise programs, Joanne says that she has found it very rewarding to watch people progress.

"They not only gain physical strength but they also come to feel a new sense of vitality as they begin to realize their own self worth," she points out. "I always stress positive thinking and try to give the class this attitude," she adds.

Joanne first joined an exercise class to get back into shape after the birth of her first child. Eventually, the director of her program recommended her as his replacement and she ran what she feels was a very successful program. She says that she felt very confident in dealing with mothers.

"I could relate to them and tell them what exercises to do," she recalls. Eventually, she was sent to Maryland to get certified in aerobic exercises which, she explains, is any activity done for a prolonged period of time without undue fatigue. Many people are not ready for aerobic dance, Joanne continues as she explains her preference for a self designed fitness program. "People should get into themselves and realize their own needs and strengths," she says strongly.

Joanne believes firmly that people can do almost anything if they put their minds to it. Although, she also feels that a program such as hers should be stressless and without competition. "Who cares how high Mary can raise her foot?" she emphasizes. "I tell my students to imagine there are shades on either side of them, to pull them down and to believe that their minds and bodies are one," she says.

Currently, Joanne is completing two out of three years in a training program run by Maggie Lettvin, who is well known for her popular program, Maggie and the Beautiful Machine, on Channel 2. She agrees with Maggie that the "body really is a beautiful machine and it's never too late to start getting it in condition. People take care of their cars and other possessions, why not their bodies?" she asks.

In addition to her morning classes at the Cohasset Community Center, Joanne also teaches exercise at area colleges. Not everyone needs an organized exercise class, but many people are motivated through group participation, she says. "When any group gets together and is interested in achieving a common goal, there's a noticeable sharing of energy," she adds.

As a result of her participation in Lettvin's program, Joanne is now certified as an exercise specialist. According to Joanne, the program has the support of Dr. Lyle Micheli, an orthopedic specialist at the Children's Hospital, who sees Joanne and others like her as a means of setting up exercise programs for minor physical problems.

The importance of exercising in the right way is emphasized by Joanne who concentrates first on proper body alignment. Although the benefits of exercise are endless, Joanne notes that attaining them is a gradual process. She advises her students to "take each day as it comes" and promises them that "one day you'll wake up and feel fantastic." The person who thinks that results are immediate will be disillusioned and disappointed, she says.

Joanne is a wealth of information and suggestions. She highly recommends other forms of exercise such as running (on a soft surface), bike riding and swimming — all of which she does. She believes strongly that through exercise people can retain a youthful attitude.

"The whole world opens up," she concludes with excitement.

Dump sale

He said there are several other private concerns interested in purchase of the operation, which includes all the normal landfill equipment, plus enough cover material to service three dumps its size.

Jim says he would like to sell off by the time he's 50.

"I'm not in any rush," he explains. "I'd rather see it used as a regional dump."

So far the communities involved haven't gotten to the point of approaching the owner. Their discussions are still in preliminary stages.

At least some people in Cohasset are worried about what could happen to the landfill if they don't decide to purchase it.

Jim, who bought the property back in 1975, says there isn't much traffic generated by his operation.

"And what traffic there is comes in different directions. That would stay the same."

CCC Nature program

Registrations are now underway for an exciting new nature program which will be available to elementary school children, this summer, at the Community Center of Cohasset.

Nature walks, special talks, demonstrations and projects are some of the special activities planned for the six week program scheduled to begin on Wednesday, June 24.

Program instructor will be Dorothy Marshall, a member of the staff from the South Shore Natural Science Center. Ms. Marshall has a M.A. in teaching science to children from Teachers College Columbia University. Her experience includes teaching science in public and private schools, outdoor education and museum science programs.

Different areas of interest which will be covered each week are; amphibians and reptiles, birds, rocks and minerals, the pond, the ocean and natural wildlife.

SOCCER

On Saturday the Cohasset "B" soccer team defeated the Dedham Destroyers 5-3 at home.

The Cohasset boys controlled the game for the most part, but were severely tested by the Dedham team at the mid-point of the second half.

The win keeps Cohasset in second place in the league, with a 5 and 1 record. The next game is against Needham, a strong and well-coached team with a 4-1-1 record.

Kids Festival at S.S. Science Center

One of the features of the Kids Festival to be held at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell on Saturday, June 20 is a raffle for a 16' West Branch fiberglass canoe. Bright yellow in color, the paddles and cartop carrier are included. The canoe may be seen at the Hanover Mall on Friday and Saturday, June 5 and 6.

Features of the upcoming Kids Festival are three types of games; skill, competitive and inventive. There will be demonstrations, live animals, professional acts, hay, ponycart and tractor rides, as well as a variety of "kid-tested" foods. The Kids Festival is a great place to be on Saturday, June 20. This is a major fund raiser for the Science Center.

The Kids Festival runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Bring the whole family to the South Shore Natural Science Center on Jacobs Lane in Norwell on Saturday, June 20. Phone 659-2559 for further information.

Selectmen briefs...

Selectmen deferred a request by the board of health to transfer to them jurisdiction over the disposal area study committee.

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie explained the disposal area study committee is supposed to study possible sites for a new landfill as well as research a regional approach to waste disposal. He said he felt these were not board of health issues.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur pointed out, however, that the health board is still responsible for public health, and how waste is disposed of is all part of that concept. She said she felt the board wanted a kind of ad hoc committee to help them.

Ainslie proposed selectmen invite the disposal area study committee in to report on what they have been doing and to see how many members want to continue to serve.

APPOINTMENT POSTPONED

Selectmen also postponed appointment of special summer police officers until they are certain that the permanent intermittent officers will have first refusal of the positions before the auxiliary officers, as their contract dictates.

Applicants for special officer must first pass a qualifying exam, which will be given again in mid-June.

GAMBLING STUDY

Selectmen have agreed to support an in-depth impact study of gambling in this area. The study will be conducted by the MAPC and was requested by the group opposed to instituting casino gambling in Hull.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

The board reappointed Jack Hubbard and Janet Ditmar to the conservation commission, Bob Julian to the school facilities committee, and Henry Ainslie to the Massachusetts Transportation Commission.

RECYCLING MEETING

Selectmen will sponsor a meeting on recycling for all interested citizens at 8 p.m. June 4 in the town hall. The board wants to rejuvenate the recycling effort in the town to help prolong the life of the present town landfill.

MAGEE PETITION

The board received notice from the zoning board of appeals that it has supported Building Inspector James Litchfield in his recent decision not to allow Chester Magee to build an addition onto his lawn mower repair shop on Beechwood Street.

The shop is in a residential area, and the zoning board said Magee could conduct his business there as long as there is no readily visible evidence of it.

MORRISSEY REQUEST

Patrick Morrissey of Beach Street has asked selectmen to consider allowing him to purchase about a half acre of town land which abuts his property. Morrissey explained that by using the now town-owned land, he could install a driveway directly into his 20-acre lot instead of using a right-of-way as he now does. Morrissey also asked the board to consider swapping land with him, if the town does not want him to sell him a piece. A request of this kind will have to be decided by townspeople at a town meeting, Henry Ainslie explained.

TOMA DANCE

Just a reminder that the Dave Toma dance sponsored by the concerned citizens for drug education will be held Friday at Hugo's Lighthouse. Tickets are $10.

A raffle with over 50 prizes donated by local merchants will be held during the dance and prizes include a watch, Red Sox tickets, $10 of gas, and a leather cassette case. All items have been donated by local merchants.

Tickets may be purchased from Carol Sandblom at 383-1812; Nancy Clapp at 383-0987; Dick Conley at 383-1039; or Mary O'Brien at 383-6987.

The Navy is coming

The Navy representative for Cohasset will be available Tuesday mornings at the Rotary Hall, 43 Elm St., starting June 2. If you want more information or another time, call 837-1270.

An honor for Murray

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, has become the first woman to be elected to high office in the Massachusetts Legislative Association.

"I am pleased to serve as second vice president of the Massachusetts Legislative Association. It is a very esteemed honor to which the membership of this august group has elected me," said Rep. Murray.

The Association of over 700 members is comprised of past, present, and future Massachusetts Legislators. The group was originally formed to discuss mutual concerns and friendship.

SCHOLARS!!!
H.E.L.P.
(Higher Education Loan Program) has arrived at
COHASSET SAVINGS

If money is a problem on the road to higher education, let Cohasset Savings help through its NEW STUDENT AND PARENT LOAN PROGRAM. We're committing substantial funds to make higher education possible for many young people in our area. It's just another way we try to serve community needs.

Students can borrow up to $2,500 in cash each academic year (up to $3,000 in some cases) with no interest charge and no repayment required until after you leave school or until six months after graduation. Even large amounts can be borrowed for graduate study.

Parents can borrow up to $3,000 per student for each academic year with convenient repayments and interest installments beginning two months after the loan.

So we say, if money is a problem on the road to higher education, stop in at either office of Cohasset Savings, pick up an application and learn about our NEW STUDENT AND PARENT LOAN PROGRAM . . . Better do it as soon as possible . . . government rules may change!

Contact John Kelly at 545-6100 or Bill Brothers at 383-1882 for further information.

Fathers visit nursery school kids at Dutton

The children of Dutton Nursery School (formerly St. Luke's) on Rte. 3A in Scituate recently had their fathers as special visitors. Children and the fathers came on a Saturday morning so that fathers would have the chance to see their children in the program.

Boys and girls made chocolate chip cookies for their dads to have with coffee.

The children enjoyed having their fathers help with puzzles, play with playdough, build with blocks and paint. The youngsters sang and did several finger plays for their visitors.

There was a large turnout of fathers. It was such a success, it's hoped Father's Day at Dutton Nursery School will become an annual event.

Public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk, ss.
No. 76F 1326-T1
NOTICE OF FIDICIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of HUGH CAMPBELL WARD late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the 1st to 3rd accounts of THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF BOSTON as Trustee (the fiduciary) under the will of said deceased for the benefit of FRANCES E. WARD et al have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the seventeenth day of June, 1981, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this thirtieth day of April 1981.

Obituaries

Prescott Cumner

Prescott Thayer Cumner, 81, of Cohasset, a retired investment counselor, died May 9 at home after a long illness.

He was born in Brookline and had lived in Cohasset since 1932.

He attended Noble and Greenough School, Dedham, and was a 1921 graduate of Harvard University.

He had worked in the cotton business in New Bedford and New York before joining Scudder, Stevens and Clark, Boston, in 1929. He retired in 1962.

For many years he enjoyed playing tennis and skiing in Canada.

He was a past member of the Cohasset town advisory committee; a member of the advisory committee of South Shore National Bank; a member of Cohasset Yacht Club; treasurer of the Cohasset Bicentennial Committee, and a past president of the Cohasset Golf Club and Cohasset Historical Society. He served in the Naval Reserve in World War I.

He leaves his wife, Ruth (Smith) Cumner; a daughter, May Hartshorne of Broxville, N.Y.; and two grandchildren.

A memorial service was conducted in Frist Parish Church, Unitarian and burial was private.

Donations may be made in his memory to the above-named church, North Main Street.

Ellen Tear

Ellen Maud (Kruse) Tear, 84, of Cohasset, died May 8 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a long illness.

Born in Brighton, England, she had lived in Connecticut before moving to Cohasset eight years ago.

She had been a saleswoman in card shops in Connecticut.

Wife of the late Frank Stuart Tear, she leaves a son, Frank E. Tear of Gerona, Spain; a daughter, Edna Finnegan of Cohasset; five grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

A Mass of Christian burial was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church and burial was private.

Donations may be made in her memory to a charity of one's choice.

Lorenzo Longo

Lorenzo Longo, 85, a resident of Cohasset and a U.S. Army veteran of World War I, died at South Shore Hospital May 14 after a brief illness.

A native of Italy, he was educated there. He had lived in Hingham before moving to Cohasset in 1928.

He worked for more than 25 years for the Hingham Water Co. and was a member of George H. Healy 118 Post American Legion in Cohasset.

He leaves a son, Louis L. Longo of Cohasset; two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Conte of Hingham and Mrs. Constance Mancini of Stoneham; a sister, Carmella Grasso of East Boston, seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Monday in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Service League elects new Directors

Cohasset couples plan bowling banquet

The annual banquet for the Cohasset Couples League will be held on Friday, May 22, at the Bridgewaye, Marshfield. The league bowls every Tuesday night at 8 p.m. at the Community Center of Cohasset. There may be a couple of openings on the league in September.

Anyone interested in joining this league may contact the center which in turn will contact the league secretary.

The following is a list of prize winners for this past season: George Eaton, Dick Farwell, Bill O'Connel, Mac McCracken, Eddie Figueiredo, A.J. Antoine, Donald Clark, Bill O'Connell, Gerry Farwell, Roberta Figueiredo, Margaret Bates, Diana O'Laughlin, Pat Litchfield, Marge Antoine, Julie Eaton, Marcia Clark.

Other members will also receive prizes. They are Mike Farwell, Lot Bates, Peter O'Laughlin, Steve Ward, Harold Litchfield, Jen Carroll, Lil O'Connell, Judy Ward and Suzanne McCracken.

The center can be reached weekdays from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Fire Facts

The prime concern of firefighters as they respond to a report of a fire in a dwelling is the possibility of persons being trapped. In many cases, fire victims are unable to escape on their own and must wait for help to arrive.

A small child, an elderly person, a blind person, or a person handicapped in some other way will need extra assistance in escaping from a fire.

The "TOT FINDER" Fire Rescue decal is an important aid in assisting a firefighter to save the life of someone you love. The fire rescue decal is oval in shape and depicts the profile of a firefighter, with a rescued child, against an irridescent red background.

The decal can be placed on the window of a room occupied by a person needing assistance, as well as on bedroom doors. Arriving firefighters will be alerted, by the "TOT FINDER," to the areas of the building where first rescue efforts should be concentrated.

The Cohasset Fire Department is participating in the "TOT FINDER" Fire Rescue Program with the Insurance Company of North America. The "TOT FINDER" Fire Rescue decals are now available at the Cohasset Fire Department Headquarters, 44 Elm Street.

There's no such thing as a "free lunch"

When someone offers you free food or other merchandise to shop in their store, look out. You'll end up paying for it somewhere -- probably in higher prices for the things you buy there. Before you accept something that's "free", compare the prices you actually pay.

See what you save when you shop here!

TIPS ON WRITING
by John Cutler and Monroe Stearns

Here's the guide to good writing habits for all ages and levels of work. Written by two professional editors and publishers, covers all the basics of clear writing and proper use of English. Recommended by English teachers and professional writers. $2.95 buys this practical, informative and witty guide.

The Critics Speak

"I wish Tips on Writing had been available when I was teaching a writing course at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Do you happen to know Donald Hall, whose book I was using -- along with, of course, Strunk's Elements of Style? Since I think that examples are more instructive to students than explicit rules, I was delighted with your well-chosen illustrations, especially your revisions of poor sentences to good ones." -- Dorothy Lucker, PhD.

"We are very pleased with this publication." -- Dr. Seldon Whitaker, superintendent of schools, Duxbury.

"Tips on Writing is written for everyone. It is amusing and easy to read and is the answer to all the puzzling questions about writing." -- Alison Arnold (former society editor of the Boston Herald and now writes for The Boston Globe).

"A most enlightening and engaging little book. Every young writer learning his trade should have it on his shelf next to Strunk, Fowler, Webster's Collegiate and the Concise Oxford." --Francis Russell (author of Tragedy in Dedham and Shadow of Blooming Grove).

"The consensus of all who reviewed Tips on Writing was that it was an extremely enjoyable book. In fact, it was a fun book to read; that individuals who enjoyed writing as a hobby or as a vocation would greatly profit from this handbook; that students in upper division senior high courses such as a course we have in 'Creative Writing,' would greatly benefit from the handbook. Likewise, with our Vocational Technical Institute we have a program on 'Writing for Profit.' This particular instructor said this would be an extremely valuable book for her students. She is interested in using the handbook in class." --Dr. James Hager, deputy superintendent of the Lake Washington School District, Kirkland, Wash.

"What Strunk and White did for adults in their Elements of Style, Tips on Writing does for high school and college students -- as well as adults. Authoritative, practical, yet engagingly informal and witty." --Doris Kearns Goodwin (authorized biographer of President Lyndon Johnson).

Murray petitions for help in the Harbor

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray sent the following letter to the Coast Guard seeking help to improve conditions in Cohasset Habor.

Dear Admiral Wood:

We have a very hazardous safety problem at the entrance to Cohasset Harbor.

Various range lights, etc. are out of service which render a hazard not only to our fishermen, but also other boaters entering the harbor by night.

As I understand it, the lights are placed so that incoming boats can line them up to take a visual bearing on the harbor; but with only one light in service, the system is useless.

Any help or advice you can give me regarding this situation would be deeply appreciated.

Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative

Drought ends...winless Skippers down unbeaten Clippers 6-4

By Rob Tis

BASEBALL

The Cohasset Skipper baseball team pulled the most miraculous and unexplainable upset since the U.S.A. Olympic hockey team Thursday.

The Skippers, 0-12, faced the undefeated Norwell Clippers. Pitching for Norwell was a 7-0 freshman who will probably go straight to the pros when he turns fifteen. Kevin Dooley was making his second varsity start after pitching 12 innings the week before.

But at the end of the game when the points were tallied up the Skippers held on to a 6-4 victory.

Kevin Dooley pitched a very smart game allowing only seven hits and mixing his pitches with the guile of a pro. A big factor in this win was outstanding defense by Andy Songer at second base, Paul Buckley at first, Joe Becker at short and Rich Evans at the hot corner.

Norwell came out quick with two runs in the first inning but the Skippers rallied in the third inning to grab three runs and two more in the fourth. Norwell surged for two more runs in the fifth, closing the gap to one, 5 to 4. But the Skippers were good for one more to widen the gap to 6 to 4 and finalize the amazing victory.

The offense on this team came mainly from Joe Becker who, although he only got one hit, scored three times, stole four bases and brought in a run on a fielder's choice. Paul Buckley also went one for three, but it was in a clutch situation, as it scored two runs.

Bob Donahue also came through when the times were hard, scoring Joe Becker in the sixth on a solid single when it was a one-run ball game. Dana Infusino was another star for the Skippers, smashing two big singles, bringing home three of the Skippers' six runs. Rich Evans also deserves kudos as he netted the only extra base hit for the Skippers, a screaming triple.

The Skippers are now 1-12 and operating without the services of three of their five seniors. The Skippers are now turning this season around and will be THE team to look out for next season.

GIRLS' TRACK

Tina Birmann set a South Shore League record in the 100-yard dash on Thursday against Hull, breaking the tape in 11.4 seconds and sparked the girls' track team to a 69-49 victory.

It was the Tina Birmann show all the way as she also won the long jump and competed in the winning 4 x 110 relay team.

Karen Eckberg also had a very impressive showing, netting a first in the 200-yard dash, the high jump and participating in the 4 x 110 relay. Mary O'Brien left the field in her wake, winning the 880 as did Hannah Clinton in the two-mile.

The mile relay team of Michelle Shea, Holly Grant, Sarah Trask and Mary Jo Mahoney zipped to a victory. Patty Walsh also achieved first place honors, hurling her javelin a good five feet further than anyone else.

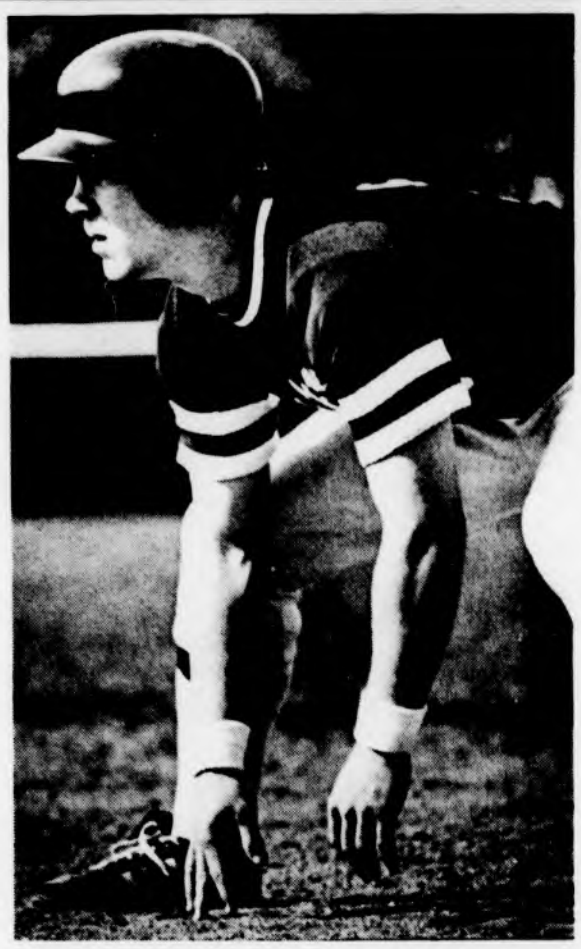
BOYS' TRACK

Pat Duffy won an incredible four events to lead the Skippers to a 84-61 victory over Hull on Thursday.

Duffy grabbed first place honors in the triple jump, the shot put, and the high and low hurdles. Andrew Spalt put on a javelin throwing clinic with some monster hurls, netting him a first in that event. Speedman Greg Raffa sprinted to victory in the 100 and 220.

Gutsy Chris McNabb, running with a charlie horse, showed what he was made of and turned in a lightning fast 10:24 for the two-mile to take first place. Mark Wilkin leaped to victory in the long jump. Mike Glasfeld netted a second in the pole vault, traditionally a weak event for the Skippers.

Cohasset should have some strong showings in the individual events in the upcoming league and state meets for both the boys and the girls.



READY FOR A STEAL — Joe Becker, a senior at Cohasset High School, gets ready to steal second base during last week's game with Norwell. Cohasset blew the other team away.

Joy at Barnes Field

By Jennifer Grisdale

"They're off to a terrible start...walked two... bases loaded, now...RUN!!"

The spectators — eyes glued to the baseball triangle — held their breath: "He's safe!!"

"Luc-kee!"

The Dodgers retained their first place spot, although the Yankees fought a hard battle. The players looked good enough to be drafted into the Major Leagues, but the coaches would probably think they're still a little young. Actually, these baseball enthusiasts are only 10 to 12 years old, and members of Cohasset's little league team.

But the camaraderie of the kids, their parents, coaches, and other adults who volunteer their time so youngsters can have a chance to "play ball" is enough to make a baseball fan out of almost anyone.

The league is run by a board of directors, led this year by Peter Whitman. Each season kids interested in joining the little league can try out for a spot.

Tryouts test each child's batting and throwing ability, Whitman explained. The six little league coaches observe the tryouts, then choose the players they want. Others from 9 to 12 can play in the minor league.

Players receive more instruction in the minor league. "We try to teach them the basic fundamentals of baseball in the minor and farm (for 7 and 8 year olds) leagues," Whitman explained, "so by the time they reach little league we can show them the finer points of baseball."

The farm league meets for two hours on Saturday morning at the high school where participants receive one hour of instruction before they begin playing.

Whitman said these two leagues now use a "tee ball" where the baseball is hit from a tee-like stand. He said this device, which the kids like, teaches them to keep their eye on the ball while allowing fielders to make plays." He thinks it keeps the game more interesting too, because fewer players have to be "walked" to first base.

The little league itself has six teams, with 14 kids on each. Each team plays twice a week with practice sessions in between. During the games, each team member must come up for bat at least once and play in the field for at least two innings. The league schedules competitions Monday through Saturday at 6:10 p.m. on the Barnes Field on North Main St.

Play off games between the two top teams mark the end of the season which runs through June. Coaches then pick an all-star team which compete with similar teams from surrounding towns all during the summer.

Once players reach age 13 they can join the pony league which also plays on Saturdays. The pony league is not restricted to former little league players either, Whitman stressed.

Whitman figured the total cost at about $8,000: $5,000 for equipment and $2,500 for the umpire. The league runs a concession stand which usually brings in enough money to cover the cost of the umpire.

The following coaches donate their time to the league:

Little league: Paul St. John, Tom Myers, Jim Gallagher, Dave Bernstein, Jeff Ladd and Dick Ainslie.

Farm league: Bill Baird, Pat McCarthy, John Kennedy and John Convery.

Minor league: (plays each evening at the Deer Hill School) Sean Donnelly, Ray Kasperowicz, Arthur O'Leary, John Staunton, Joe Andrade and Jack MacDonald.

Pony league: Dave Campbell, Uve Hublitz, John Kuhn, Peter Chapman, John Roy, Jim Brown, Frank Drago and Gary Stevens.

Bob Lobell, eat your heart out!!

Crazy quilt on display

A crazy quilt, made by the members of the Beechwood Church will be on display at the Quincy Co-Op Bank, Tedeschi Plaza, Cohasset from May 25 through June 3.

This quilt is first prize in the raffle at the Fifth Annual Antique Show and Sale sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church which will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Friday, June 5 from 12 noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday, June 6 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Second prize will be dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn and third prize is a large crocheted elephant. Raffle tickets are available from members of the Beechwood Congregational Church.

Cohasset golfers win state WGAM cup

The Cohasset Golf Club team of Jean Topper, Mary Hartwell, Janet Malloy, Doris Dickson and Elizabeth Ellis captured the WGAM State Cup at Foxboro on Thursday, May 14.

The teams competing in this League were: Foxboro, Hatherly, Wenham, Old Newbury and Saddle Hill.

The Cohasset team has won a cup for two years and with a "little bit of luck and longevity" could be the state champs in the #1 cup in a few years.

Youth track program

The Jolly Tinker Athletic Club of Scituate this week announced the formation of a youth track program.

The youth program will encompass all aspects of track and field and is open to all athletes ages 8-18 in the south shore area. Competitions will be held weekly.

The youth program will run from June 9 to Aug. 16. Registration will be held May 30 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Scituate High School and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Runnery, Rte. 53, Hanover.

The art of basement buying

By Lois Martin

It's not an amazing feat for people who know how to do it.

But for someone who hasn't been to Filene's Basement more than twice in 20 years, it's an accomplishment to get "Intown" and home with purse, gold chain and nerves intact.

Living on the South Shore, amongst verdant greenery, glittery ocean and landmark rivers, the consumer doesn't hanker much for city shopping. But I had this urge to go out of town, try my sense of direction toward Boston.

You gotta know how to play MBTA. They don't tell you if you just look confused. But I made it to Braintree and got the state's money's worth from an employe who told me what I could do with my tokens. I caught him in a patient mood, a Saturday. And it was a pleasant ride to Washington Street.

PATCHES

It was 9:20 a.m., 10 minutes before the Basement opened. I got in line with the day's herd of determined shoppers at the entrance from the subway. My, I bet they wish they could do something about an effective air freshner for the stations. Barry Locke's got a little time on his hands now...wouldn't hurt to hose down that place with a disinfectant.

No matter. We women didn't care about the subway. It was only a vehicle by which we'd get to the Basement. We all wore sensible shoes. You need those there. It would be a disadvantage to have to clatter in heels. I checked out the crowd of shoppers, and decided to be scientific. I could see I was faced with tough competition getting to the good stuff. Those women knew how to find the bargains, fast. I didn't. So I scanned till I found the woman I deigned to be a really nifty dresser. She'd know where the Uptown deals would be. I'd follow her.

A young man unlocked the door and moved out of the way quickly. I followed my lavender and white suited woman and sure enough, I ended up with her in marked down designer dresses. Good.

But that's where I went wrong. While I was meandering around finding my size, (42 petite) holding out a garment for lingering investigation, the others were whipping the hangers off the rack and throwing dresses over their arms. Their timing was incredible. Within one and a half minutes they had possession of anything they thought remotely desirable, split second decisions.

I politely waited for a woman to move along from the rack that looked good as two others plowed through and swished off dresses like a hawk seizes its prey. Incredible.

I was left with a swirling circle of garments that still seemed to steam with the speed of the disappearing shoppers. They went to a mirror. There they homesteaded a portion of it on which to hand their potential choices. I could only imagine what would happen to a person who had the temerity to touch one of those dresses.

With speed that defies description, they had off their own clothing and on with the store goods. There wasn't a moment to record between being fully dressed and being indecently exposed. But as the morning wore on, fatigue caused women to loiter a bit in underpinnings. It's murder in these cornfields. If they'd been the Celtics squad, they'd have been benched for a rest.

But there's no such mercy in Filene's Basement. You gotta keep moving. I did...over to the bathing suits, having gleaned nothing but envy for successful shoppers in your better dresses.

The bathing suits looked good. So I, a fast learner, started hurling them over my right arm. With 10 in my grip, I asked the man in back where the fitting rooms were. His right nostril rose in a sneer. There are none, he said, disdainfully. And I knew, I just knew I couldn't try on those suits there, though obviously not everyone shared that philosophy.

I went to the shoe section. There one woman rose from a chair to test the shoe on her right foot and another browser stole the chair. The word 'competition' was devised for Filene's Basement, never mind 'survival.'

Suddenly I wanted to go home, back where when someone sneezes, some one else says "God Bless You." I took with me two bathing suits, untried but worth a little risk. I'd try them on in an empty room.

They were still at it when I left the basement, perspiration forming as noon approached, bringing with it a rapid depletion of the best marked down stock.

But it was an intriguing experience, gaining savvy with transportation means, and the how-tos of survival in Filene's Basement. Sometime I might do that again. But first I've got to find someone with an unusually short torso who'd like a bright blue bathing suit.

WELL-WISHERS — Blanche Whitman studies the race during Snappy Sneakers Day at Osgood School. Her twins, Mark and Chad, two-and-a-half, seem less interested in the progress of the runners.

THE RACE WENT TO THE SWIFT but the fun was for everyone at the Osgood School last week. Our photographer couldn't get the runners to stand still and be identified in the midst of the contest.

Tickets going for Clark testimonial

Cohasset townspeople and his many friends in neighboring towns will honor recently retired Cohasset Selectman Arthur L. Clark at a gala testimonial dinner to be held at Hugo's Lighthouse Thursday evening, May 28.

Clark had served over 40 years in a succession of town positions in Cohasset most recently as Chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

Philip G. Murray, Sr., is general chairman of the committee arranging the event, and T. Gerard Keating, Cohasset postmaster, will be toastmaster, introducing those who will pay tribute to Arthur Clark's long service to the town of Cohasset.

Francis J. Mitchell, ticket chairman, reports that the limited supply of tickets has been going fast and urges that all interested get there promptly.

They are available from the following committee members in addition to those above: Henry W. Ainslie, A.J. Antoine, Jr., Osborne F. Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meallo, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pape, William Signorelli, and Mrs. John H. Winters, III.

Gypsy moths & 2½

While there are those who curse Proposition 2½ as the law that brought you the gypsy moth, the Mass. Audubon Society says it isn't so.

The gypsy moth, with its annoying habit of eating away leaves and its creepy caterpillar, is in season now.

And this year the numbers are higher than recent past. Normally the town would be spraying for gypsy moths long before now.

This year tight budgets have forced the town to confine its spraying to public roadways.

But the Audubon people say the spraying actually prolongs the buildup of the gypsy moth population and does greater harm to the forest in the long run.

They predict defoliation, caused by the caterpillar, will hit its peak in the week of June 7 to 13. New leaves will return within six weeks after that.

The numbers of gypsy moths are controlled by disease or starvation. Those numbers run in similar patterns.

Evelyn Wood to leave the Pratt

At their meeting Wednesday, the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library received notice from Evelyn Wood that she will resign effective July 31.

Mrs. Wood, of Beach Street, has been a member of the staff since 1949.

In her letter to board chairman David Chittim, Mrs. Wood said: "My health seems to have determined that the time has come for me to resign. It is with the deepest regret and after much thought that I submit this resignation. The library has been a happy and satisfying part of my life for many years. I am grateful to the trustees for their consideration and kindness, to Dick for his understanding and helpfulness and to the staff for making my working years a pleasure."

Sheila Evans, acting chairman in Chittim's absence, read the letter. The trustees expressed their appreciation for Mrs. Wood's years of fine service to the town, and their best wishes for her retirement.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the trustees:

—Directed chief librarian Richard Hayes to obtain estimates on painting exterior doors and repairing carpet.

—Approved summer hours beginning June 21: closed Sundays, open Monday 9-9, Tuesday through Friday 9-6, Saturday 9-5.

—Adopted a staff recommendation to close Wednesdays rather than Tuesdays as originally planned, beginning July 1. The reduced hours are due to staff reductions under Proposition 2½.

—Considered a report by Hayes on overdue book procedures and agreed to reveiw a list of del..quent borrowers at a future open meeting prior to forwarding the names to district court;

—Appointed Hayes as representative to the Eastern Massachusetts Regional Library System Advisory Council.

—Discussed priorities for library staff activity in the coming year.

Crowell seeks 'Booster' help for athletic programs

By Patricia Desmond

Eugene Crowell, superintendent of schools, is attacking the budget constraints of Proposition 2½ with creativity and hope.

Last week he held a press conference to explain the plan to overcome budget cuts at the junior high level as well as other — more minor — programs.

His answer is a fundraiser, supported by every Boosters Club in town.

Seated around the superintendent's conference table, as he made the announcement, were representatives of the Gridiron Club, Cohasset Boosters Club, the Court-side Club, Cohasset Ice Hockey Boosters Club and the Communications Council.

Irene Brown, school committee chairman, praised the spirit of cooperation between the groups.

The fund-raiser has been in the planning stages since budget decisions contained the sports pending reductions.

But Gene said he waited until the Toma dance to begin the drive. He said he didn't want to interfere with their efforts.

The details are that the combined groups are selling tickets to the performance of SAMMY DAVIS JR. at the South Shore Music Circus on Aug. 25.

Clark Chatterton, athletic director, has already reserved 1,000 tickets for the show. The special sale price to benefit the school children is $20, $25 and $30, depending on the seating section.

The idea is to raise $5,000, more if possible. The school system's athletic budget went from $87,000 to $75,000 due to Proposition 2½, Clark said.

The drive began with a check for $67.50 from the Court-side Club handed over by Rosee Duffey.

"The base budget is down five percent due to the cutbacks," Gene explained. "Athletics is down 15 percent."

Part of the impact of the cutback will be reduced by the revolving account for athletics.

"Sports is the biggest anti-drop-out program we have," Gene said.

Outside his office, on the field of the high school, a group of students wearing gym uniforms were yelling as they played soccer.

"If we don't service these kids here," Gene went on, "the need will fall to others, the police, the recreation department."

He pointed out that the skills training for sports in the later years of elementary school or the early secondary years is important to developing athletes.

There will be at least two other school systems available for junior high interscholastic competition.

McKinnon files new casino bill

There's another new casino gambling bill brought to you by the people of Hull.

Sen. Allan McKinnon filed the bill, which he opposes, on the petition of his constituents.

"I'm treating it as if it were a home rule petition, even though it's not, because the Hull town meeting voted four to one for it.

Allan said he isn't sure whether the legislature will accept the late filed bill that he is placing on the docket this week.

The bill would allow selectmen in Hull and Adams to license one casino a piece. The state lottery commission would be the state gaming control board, overseeing the gaming operation. An executive secretary for gaming would be appointed within the agency.

To operate a casino in either community a 400 room hotel would be required, plus various other convention-type facilities.

A non-returnable fee of $25,000 would be required with every licensing application given to a town clerk. The money would finance the licensing process.

If the license were issued a fee of $50,000 would be charged for the original license by the town.

State fees would be $25,000, non-refundable for the application, and $100,000 for the original license.

The casino must be in operation within two years after picking up the license or forfeit it.

Renewing a license would cost $50,000 a year to the town and $100,000 a year to the state.

The gaming operation would be subject to a seven percent state tax of the gross amount of income. And 40 percent of that would be allocated to local aid. The remaining 60 percent would go back to the town.

In addition the casino would be taxed one-half of one percent of the gross income for a municipal impact fund, to be spent by the state gaming board on other communities impacted by casino operations.

Anyone caught allowing a minor to bet would be subject to a fine of $5,000 to $20,000 or two months in jail.

Casino hours would be 10 a.m. to 4 a.m. seven days a week.

St. light controversy wages hot

Howie Matthews, who handles Cohasset's billing for Eastern Edison, was introduced as the man who could answer questions on the decrease in Cohasset's street lighting.

In introducing him, Selectman Rocco Laugelle pointed out he works for Eastern Edison.

For the next half hour, anger, accusations and unanswered questions filled the auditorium at town hall. By the time Selectman Henry Ainslie arrived to take over chairmanship of the meeting, the tone had reached the shouting stage.

Last Thursday at the public hearing on street lighting, roughly 50 people listed their complaints and opposition to the plans to turn out a third of the lights.

Rocco said the town will be $1,100 short for this year's light bill. Faced with a cut in the street lighting budget of 15 percent and an increase of about the same amount in the price of electricity, the selectmen toured the town and selected the lights that would go.

Citizens may keep the street lights on by signing a three-year contract with the power company adding $6.25 a month to their bill.

All lights on private ways have been turned off by the decision. Most of the people at the meeting happened to live on private ways.

One woman asked why lights on North Main Street were among those going (14 lights were listed in the published group of lights to be extinguished on North Main St.). Her argument against the turn-off was that cars travel so fast along that road.

Rocco said speeding and lights have nothing to do with each other.

"The experts say lights fight crime," Rocco volunteered. "But we have Proposition 2½ and lots of people say we should cut spending."

By the end of the evening Henry promised a review of the street lighting decision.

"Why is only Cohasset shutting off the street

Cohasset's week

The gypsy moth fight

Selectman Rocco Laugelle wants to "keep Cohasset green" and the rest of the board agreed. They have asked tree and park superintendent Peter Laugelle to do everything to keep down the Gypsy Moth population, reported to be very large in town this year. At this stage in their development, the moths are small, black caterpillars about a quarter of an inch long, selectmen explained.

The board agreed to ask Laugelle to gather all the information he needs about the pests, including the cost of extensive spraying to get rid of them. Selectmen said if necessary they will ask the advisory board for a transfer to pay for spraying.

"I hate the thought of Cohasset not being green," Laugelle commented.

Ripley is clock keeper

The selectmen made several appointments at their last meeting. They named Noel Ripley of South Main Street the official Keeper of the Town Clock, located in the Unitarian Church on the common. Ripley was instrumental in repairing the town clock. With the help of some South Shore Vocational students, he repaired the working parts of the clock, then replaced the wooden numbers around it. To replace the numbers, Ripley climbed the fire department's ladder truck.

Since then, he has wound the clock every week.

Ripley was also noted for ringing the Unitarian Church's bell every day at noon while the American hostages were kept in Iran.

Early release June 4

Thursday, June 4, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior High School, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School, 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at the Junior/Senior High School to continue work on their 10 year Evaluation/Self-Evaluation program, and to allow the staff at the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools to work on program revision and ordering.

Exec. secretary applications

The selectmen's secretary, Peg Ramsay, told the board it has received about 35 applications for the executive secretary's job, scheduled to begin July 1. Deadlines for applications is June 12.

Crowell seeks 'Booster' help

Gene said the number may increase as budget decisions are finalized. Duxbury and Middleboro have said they will be available for competition.

"We didn't want to nickel and dime Cohasset parents to death. So we decided on just one adult function."

Checks for the fund-raiser should be made out to the Cohasset High School Athletic Fund. The money will be held by the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank.

Clark pointed out that the sports program is not limited to a few students.

At the high school level, 35 to 40 percent of the students participate. Considering all secondary level students, the numbers are in the 65 percent range.

"In a series of meetings over the last few months, the combined athletic boosters throughout the town discussed and decided to back an August fund-raising drive designed to restore junior high interscholastic sports and other areas of athletic programs for all grades which were necessary victims of Proposition 2½," Gene said in a prepared statement.

"We have been most fortunate, through the efforts of Clark Chatterton, our Athletic Director, to obtain 1,000 tickets for the Sammy Davis, Jr. Music Circus performance on August 25. This is a Tuesday night and is the second night of Davis' performance.

"According to people close to the Circus, tickets are already at a premium and people interested in obtaining tickets are urged to contact these sources in order to reserve seats. All tickets are tax deductible since they will be donated to a nonprofit organization for use exclusively from defraying the costs of school programs for the student athletes of the community. If ticket sales go well, school officials believe that most of the programs, especially at the junior high level, will be restored.

"Equipment items and services which were either eliminated or to be purchased by the students would be restored after programs. The project has brought all of the Town's athletic fraternities together in an effort to maintain the level of athletic support to all phases of the school athletic program.

"I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank all of those organizations for their support at this initial stage of the drive, and during the coming months. The following list of people and their organizations have been involved in the planning stages:

"Bob Donahue, Bob Walls, and Bob Devin, Gridiron Club; Rosee Duffy and Beth Goff, Cohasset Boosters' Club; Jim Brown, Jim McNeill, and Don O'Neill, Cohasset Ice Hockey Boosters' Club.

"Also, Carol Sandblom, Deanna Mulligan and Jane Bishop, Communication Council; Dick Conley, School Committee; Dick Streeter, Cohasset High School Principal and Clark Chatterton, Athletic Director."

Tickets are available through one of the club members or by calling the superintendent's office at 383-6111, Clark at 383-6103; the principal's office at 383-6100 or Rosee at 383-0292.

Toma fundraising nears the top

The hardworking members of the parents' group who are working on establishment of a drug education program have almost reached their goal for the Dave Toma Fund.

Dick Conley, a school committee member and member of the citizens group, said this week the actual numbers aren't available yet; funds are still trickling in.

But he thinks the dance and raffle brought the committee close to the amount needed.

"We expect other contributions will be coming too," he said.

Toma, who was the real life model for the Baretta television series, is coming to talk about drug use in town June 9 and 10.

Dick emphasizes that is just the start of their program.

Check the bill

A small group of residents of private ways — small, when compared to the population of the town — turned out at the street lighting hearing last week to protest the loss of their lights.

The small amount of money that will be saved by shutting off the lights on their streets is worrying them quite a bit.

One person asked why their lights were being shut off. He wanted to know what criteria was used as the basis of the decision to cut services to private ways.

The selectmen had no answer.

But the most serious question raised had to do with the cost the town is paying for these lights. People were told they could take over a 100 watt sodium vapor light as a private light by paying $6.25 a month, the regular charge.

But to pay that amount for electricity would mean the light would be on 24 hours a day, according to the figures of Frank Massa.

Maybe there is a cheaper, more cost effective way for the town to get its street lighting done. Maybe if they had more involvement in checking on Brockton Edison, checking the bills against the actual lights in operation, the town would find it needn't shut off so many street lights.

Worthy causes

GIVE.

There are two worthwhile causes in town that need our donations to make life better for our children.

Making life better for our children makes life better for the whole town.

The Toma Fund still needs more money to put the drive at its $5,000 goal. The Toma fund is the first step in a new program of drug and alcohol education for the public school students in town.

Dave Toma, a nationally known expert in the field, has been invited to speak to the students and parents June 9 and 10 at the high school.

And the school sports fund-raiser is just beginning. Tickets are available for the Aug. 25 performance of Sammy Davis Jr. at the South Shore Music Circus at prices designed to keep the school sports programs in good shape.

Tickets can be had from members of the various boosters clubs or school officials. They range in price from $20 to $30.

Commentary

Grandma, I want to know if fairy tales are really, truly true. Some of my friends in play-school say they aren't. My daddy says if you read something in the Mariner you'll know it must be true. I know you write for the Mariner, so will you please tell me if there really is an Old Mother Hubbard?

Yes, Honey, there is an Old Mother Hubbard. Your little friends are wrong. They say there is no fairy land? No make believe? No land of Oz? Haven't they ever been to the State House? Don't they read their papers? Every day Old Mother Hubbard goes to her cupboard and finds it bare.

But Grandma, if her cupboard is bare, why doesn't Old Mother Hubbard go to the store and buy some food?

Well, Honey, she would, only an important man in the far away land of Washington D.C. has decided that Old Mother Hubbard's food stamps should be cut in half. She ate last week, so it would be greedy of her to want to eat again this week, wouldn't it? She used to get money from the Kingdom of the State, but you see, the King is in his counting house, counting out his money, and until he finishes and decides where it should go, nobody can have any.

But Grandma, if Old Mother Hubbard is hungry, and if the King has money that he's counting, why doesn't he give her some so she can buy food?

Silly child! Remember, she isn't just Mother Hubbard. She's Old Mother Hubbard. If you have to count your money, and who doesn't these days, it's always safer to take it away from people who are old, or poor, or weak. If you start messing around with people who are youthful, or rich, or powerful, they're apt to rise up and clobber you. Understand?

I guess so. Grandma, if the King is in the counting house, where is the Queen?

Well, Honey, actually, the Queen doesn't belong to the King. She belongs to the White Knight, and she's stuck with bread and honey to eat because she couldn't have a birthday party, but that's another fairy tale.

Oh. Grandma, if the King is counting all the money so old people, and poor people, and weak people can't have any, is he happy?

He would be, Honey, only some bad knights, like Sir Allan and Sir Phil say they don't like the way he counts it. They say that the King should take some money from the fat in his budget and send it throughout the Kingdom, and that some of the Business Barons and the Corporation Counts ought to pay some of their money so that people in the Kingdom can put out fires, and teach their children, and have policemen. Aren't they silly? They want to spoil all the King's fun. And, of course, he always has to worry about the Evil Duke.

Who's the Evil Duke, Grandma?

You must have heard of him, Honey. At one time the Duke was the ruler of the Kingdom. But he had the funniest ideas about money. He didn't believe that people in the State House should play with it. Isn't that a riot? Everybody knows tha: the best part of being King is that you get to count out the money. The King knows that the Evil Duke wants to come back to the State House again, and some people are just silly enough to want him to.

Oh, Grandma! I love the way you explain fairy tales.

Thank you, Honey. If you really believe, clap your hands.

See, Grandma? I'm clapping just as hard as I can.

Great, Honey. Come back tomorrow and I'll tell you one about a cow that jumped over the moon.

Selectmen briefs ...

JURORS NAMED

James Sandell of Stevens Lane will be the grand juror from Cohasset beginning the first Monday in July. Selectmen also selected at random Helen M. Kelly of Windy Hill Road and James W. McLaurin of Jerusalem Road as traverse jurors.

LICENSED APPROVED

Selectmen granted Harry and Marge Ritter a common victualer license and a Sunday license for their new store: "Margie's Seafoods" which will be located at 95 Elm Street. Margie's will sell fresh fish and will have take-out orders of fish 'n chips and soup.

HIGHLAND AVENUE

John Kirby, assistant town counsel, wrote selectmen answering their request for the legal procedure to permanently close the portion of Highland Avenue which runs between Stephen's Church and Elm Street. Residents requested the board about two years ago to close that narrow part of the road at least temporarily, because it had become a speed way for cars and motorcycles.

The board complied with the request at the time, blocking the roadway with several large boulders. Now selectmen want to close the road permanently.

Kirby explained permanent closure would have to be approved by a town meeting vote. The board will also have to notify abutters seven days before the road is actually permanently closed and file a notive of road alteration at the town clerk's office.

HEALTH INSURANCE

The board received a sole bid for the town's health insurance from Blue Cross-Blue Shield, which currently supplies the town's insurance needs. Cathy Byrne, district representative of Blue Cross explained the bid showed about a 20 percent increase because the town's health expenses were greater than what her company had anticipated. She said rates are based on the usage insurance use for the past 24 months. The new rate for employees and their dependents will be $151.20 per month. The town will pay half that amount.

Selectmen referred the bid to town accountant William Signorelli and the town insurance committee.

DOG RESTRAINED

The board voted to restrain a German Shephard owned by Paul Coletti of Church Street after the animal apparently bit a child, Brien Donovan, in the lights," one woman asked. "Boston is broke but they're not shutting off the lights. I don't know any other town that's doing this."

Howie said he only has connections with four towns in his work, including Cohasset. Pembroke and Norwell are both planning to shut the lights off by a third, he said.

Howie said the light company would not allow private customers to take over the incandescent lights in town, which he described as obsolete. The cost of operating an incandescent street light is $45 a year.

"We couldn't maintain them so we wouldn't go along with it," he said. If a pole had to be installed it would cost $218.

The town was asked to get rid of all of its incandescent lights several years ago by the utility company. The newer sodium vapor lights generate more light and are more expensive. The town refused and has been replacing the incandescent lights with sodium vapor only as they burn out.

A resident of Rust Way pointed out that the street lights there cost only $25 a month to operate.

"You ought to have your heads examined," he told the selectmen.

Frank Massa figured out the numbers being discussed and calculated that the town was being at least 50 percent overcharged for the electricity.

"The town is being cheated," Frank said.

"We aren't here to discuss the rates," Rocco replied.

"Aren't you interested? I'm telling you you're being over charged. Let him (Howie) speak up," Frank continued, the decibel level rising.

About then Henry took over the chairmanship going through the background once again. For a while calm was restored.

Richard Fallon of Rust Way said that private ways were being singled out for reduction in town services.

"You are basically decreasing the value of the property. I think you'll find most owners of property on private ways will file for a tax abatement."

"You're reducing the services we have had, devaluing the property, and then we have to pay Edison for the lights, you can't have both ends.

"A reduction in services calls for a reduction in taxes."

And then there was applause.

Edna Severin of Ingalls Road asked if the lights would be turned back on if someone is killed.

In reply to questioning Henry said he didn't know why private streets were singled out.

Olga Dellaforno repeated a point she made earlier in a letter that she didn't understand how the town could afford $25,000 for an executive secretary if the light budget has to be cut. The deficit in the light budget is estimated at $22,000.

One resident pointed out that the new valuation figures may be far higher than the ones used to tabulate the budget.

Henry said the selectmen would consider restoring street lights if more money is available.

Frank Massa said many town workers received raises this year.

"Proposition 2½ carries the responsibility of using the money wisely. What's being done by the town is being used to scare the people. They are saying now you voted this, so this is what we're doing."

He said the cut in street lights is to punish the people who voted for 2½.

Henry said he didn't think he had blamed anything on 2½.

"Personally, in my opinion, it was too much too fast," Henry said.

Mary O'Brien of Pond Street said there are 10 street lights now on Pond Street, the road to the high school. Six will be eliminated in the plan. She pointed out that 800 students travel that road and may be at hazard because of the decrease in lights.

Someone asked if lights had been left on at school bus stops since in winter months the children are there in the dark. Henry said it hadn't been done but it was a good idea.

Paul Carroll of Ledgewood Drive said his road, which is private, connects with other streets and is highly travelled.

A few people wanted information on how to make their private roads public. It would take a year and it begins with planning board approval. Town meeting action is necessary.

Maria Plante of Jerusalem Road said she opposed 2½ because she felt Cohasset had little or no fat in the budget.

Still she argued for keeping on the street light near her home. The plan calls for 21 lights to go off on Jerusalem Road.

A woman from Beechwood who was there with her two small children, argued that the lights near the new dam shouldn't be taken out or someone will drive into it.

Others argued similar public safety cases for specific lights.

Chief DeBassio wants summer help

By Jennifer Grisdale

Police Chief John DeBassio, facing his first summer here in town, feels he may need more police officers to patrol certain trouble spots, including Sandy Beach and the two bridges.

His solution? Hire some "special" officers to help his regular staff. DeBassio explained these special police officers will be permanent intermittent and auxiliary officers who have passed the Chief's qualifications for the job.

Those qualifications are first, the officer must be trained as a "first" responder, meaning he must have first aid and CPR training; must be able to accurately use and maintain fire arms; and must pass an exam on general criminal law.

The Chief hopes to be able to form a nucleus of six to eight special officers whom he can count on to help out on these details. He wants all his men, regular and special, to be fully qualified to protect the town from any liability suits filed because of a police officer's incompetance in a situation.

He added, "I'm responsible for our police department's reputation."

Selectmen agreed with DeBassio's basic plan, but did question a few points. The Board wants to be certain that the permanent intermittents get first crack at any details, either those requested by the town or a private individual, before the auxiliary officers. This stipulation is part of the permanent intermittents contract with the department.

Selectmen also felt that while the permanent intermittents should be compensated for any details, they work for the town, the board did not think the auxiliary officers should be paid for their work. "They are supposed to be a voluntary force," Board Chairman Henry Ainslie said.

Auxiliary officers appointed as special police who perform a detail for a private individual, however, would be compensated.

Chief DeBassio, who was not present at the meeting, said later he did not think it fair if the auxiliary officers were not paid for doing work the regular and permanent intermittent officers were compensated for.

The chief also wants Pat Sargent of Mill Lane, who now unofficially acts as the department's matron, to be given the status of special police officer even though she does not have the same qualifications as the rest of the officers. DeBassio explained Mrs. Sargent is always under the supervision of a regular officer and felt she should be extended this status as a courtesy.

Although selectmen took no firm vote, all three expressed concern over this request. The board did vote, however, not to allow a retired police officer to be named an auxiliary officer. Selectmen unanimously felt the permanent intermittent and auxiliary officer positions should be reserved for younger men or women who potentially may want to become regular officers.

left leg as he was helping a friend deliver newspapers in the area. Dog Officer Richard Yocum handled the complaint and recommended to the board the dog be restrained. Chairman of the board Henry Ainslie asked that Coletti be notified of his right to have a hearing on the matter.

MURRAY CONGRATULATIONS

Selectmen agreed to write former selectman and now State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray for being elected the first woman vice president of the Massachusetts Legislative Association.

WADLEIGH RULING

The board received an answer from town counsel who explained that Wadleigh Park could not be used as a public parking facility for Rocky Beach as selectmen had hoped. Counsel Blake Thaxter explained that Horace Wadleigh willed the property at the corner of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue Extension to the town back in 1914 as part of a public charitable trust. The property can only be used as a park under the conditions of the will.

Rocky Beach is a town-owned beach, which has little use because there is no legal parking area near it.

APPOINTMENTS

Selectmen will begin their summer schedule July 1 and continue it through September 9. When the board is on its summer schedule, it meets every other week only.

☐Virginia and Emmett Wood have arrived from Florida and will be spending the summer here. Virginia worked as a general assignment reporter for the Patriot Ledger for twelve years.

She started her career as a reporter with the Cohasset Cottager where she worked from 1962-1966.

The family is gathering for their son Bruce's marriage to Betty Ann Hanlon in June. Major Brad Wood and his wife Barbara have been stationed in Germany for the past three years, but will now also have a chance to visit with old friends. They also will be saying goodbye to Andy, who was mentioned in an earlier column. She'll be leaving for Thailand for two years in July.

☐Joyce Williams is getting married June 21 somewhere in Northern California.

☐Ellen Morrissey's "Tides In" is moving to the old "David Sharpe Gallery" on Main Street.

☐Chris Colocusis, who is a second year student at Stonehill College, has received a full two year Army ROTC Scholarship. He graduated from Cohasset High School. He'll be leaving soon for his six weeks training at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

☐Happy birthday to Emily Henderson who turned two recently.

☐John Morgan has been in serious training for the Yoplait Bicycle Challenge in Boston on Memorial Drive, June 14 at 8 a.m. The course is 31 miles, 50 kilometers. They expect 2,000 racers; 1,500 competed last year with John coming in a respectable 28th. He hopes to improve his position this year.

John's also joined a new softball league in town, "The Alligator's." Only preppies, or those who consider themselves preppies, can play.

☐Welcome home to Betty Maree, who's feeling fine after successful surgery at South Shore Hospital.

☐Kathy Davis and Don Trisler have bought the Josiah Oakes house which was built in 1770. It was originally located on Stage Coach Way and was moved to its present site at 35 Smith Place in 1850, sometime after which the house was turned into a hotel. Kathy and Don plan on renovating the house themselves. They'd appreciate any history anyone might know about the house.

☐Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy has a new cosmetician, Elizabeth Silvia of Norwell.

☐Pip Gilmour is planning a trip this summer to Leon and Luarca, Spain. She's lived in this country for six years after moving here from Hartfordshire, England, which is 20 miles north of London. Pip is a freshman at Cohasset High School.

☐Sally Young and David Hill were in town last weekend working on Sally's boat.

☐Kathy Davis and Don Trisler have bought the Josiah Oakes house which was built c. 1770, originally located on Stagecoach Way. It was moved to its present site at 35 Smith Place in 1850, sometime after which the house was turned into a hotel. Kathy and Don plan on renovating the house themselves. They'd appreciate any history anyone might know.

☐Five year old Alison Killilea was under the spell of the greasepaint after she had performed in The Center School of Dance's recital last week. There must be something magical about a tutu, because she and everyone who had one on couldn't stop pirouetting even after their numbers were over. Up and down the aisles they went. It certainly was a sight to behold. For Alison it didn't end even after the stage lights had been shut off and the audience had left. There she sat, I think waiting for the final applause. They all certainly deserved it.

New casino legislation filed

The passage of the bill would need further approval by voters in the towns within 60 days for a binding referendum on casinos. Every two years the question would go on the ballot.

MGM Grand Hotels has already purchased the Hall Estate in Hull at the town lines of Cohasset and Hingham. Community groups have been working against the passage of the bill in both Cohasset and Hull.

Allan said he had been working on the wording of the legislation with Hull Selectman Nancy Burns ever since the town meeting voted to ask the selectmen to ask him to sponsor the bill.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, the other legislator for Hull, was left out of the petition.

Mary Jeanette said even though she opposes the casino bill she would have joined Allan in filing it, had she been asked.

"It's our duty," she said.

Allan said most late filed bills are accepted by a four-fifths vote of the legislature, which is required.

"Whether this bill will attract more opposition because of the attention it has received, I don't know," Allan said.

The opening wording of the document says:

"It is hereby declared that legalized gambling, when introduced as part of major entertainment complexes, is capable of providing a substantial contribution to the welfare and prosperity of the inhabitants of the Commonwealth and the towns where such facilities are located, that legalized casino gambling will significantly increase the revenue paid to the Commonwealth; that the towns of Adams and Hull represent the diversity and geographical interests of the Commonwealth from ocean beaches to Berkshire mountains, that the majority of voters of Adams and Hull have, by non-binding referenda, approved of casino gambling, that the development of tourist and convention facilities, and the encouragement of new construction of convention, tourist and entertainment centers will offer a unique opportunity for the inhabitants of the Commonwealth to make maximum use of the exclusive regions for the introduction and development of legalized casino gambling."

The earlier bills, all left in study, would have sent more money to the elderly and less to the towns allowing gaming.

Allan plans to fight his own bill if it comes to a vote. He didn't draft the measure, it was written by VOICE, a Hull-based casino group led by Nancy and other Hull officials.

The Hall Estate with its 60 acres was rezoned by town meeting this year, to allow a convention hotel complex. It had been zoned for single family housing in the past.

MGM went through with the sale in late spring, paying over $300,000 for the land. In the meantime land values went up in town.

Estimates are that Hull would receive about $1 million a year under the bill's formula.

Carol Oteri who runs Citizens Against Casino Gambling was unavailable for comment early this week.

Baton lessons coming to Community Center

Registrations are now being accepted at the Cohasset Community Center for baton lessons to be taught by champion twirler, Helen Phinney, Thursdays from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. beginning Thursday, May 28.

The cost of the four week session is $12.

The center will also offer two upcoming workshops with well-known quilter Mary Struzziero. A Textured Star Workshop will be offered Wednesday, May 27 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. The cost will be $6.

A Trapunto workshop is scheduled for Wednesday, June 3 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. The $8 cost for this workshop also includes materials.

Further information is available weekdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Barn sale at Art Center

The South Shore Art Center is cleaning out its barn in the "Big Barn Sale" Saturday, May 30 at the Center Barn, 103 Ripley Road.

The sale will benefit the Center and will take place from 10 to 1 with low prices on picture glass, frames, stretchers, a few art supplies and various barn-type etcetereas.

This is a good opportunity for artists, homemakers and decorators to find a bargain while helping underwrite the center's educational and exhibition programs.

Teen conference on making choices

One June 3 young people will have a special opportunity to participate in a one-day conference, entitled Making Choices.

The conference, which is co-sponsored by the Coastline Council for Children, Cohasset Social Service League, and Family Planning Services of the South Shore will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 3, at St. Stephen's, the 2nd Congregational and Unitarian Churches of Cohasset.

The conference is open to any teen from grades 9-12. The aim of the conference is to provide students with accurate information and an opportunity for discussion about sexuality and other important health and social issues such as alcohol abuse, personel health care, family relations, mental health, smoking and nutrition. Representatives of health agencies will be present to discuss their services with students.

The catalyst for these discussions will be a morning performance by the Youth Expression Theatre, a group of Boston area young people who have improvised and perform short skits on many aspects of adolescent life.

The conference is free and includes a free lunch. Since it is happening on a school day, participants will need parental permission to be excused from classes to attend Making Choices.

Similar conferences have been held in other parts of the state and have been well received.

Area teens are encouraged to make the choice to participate in the conference and to bring their friends along.

For more information, or to receive a registration form, call Family Planning at 471-7126 or 471-5615 before May 29.

Scrimshaw, calligraphy, sculpture classes

Classes will be offered this summer in scrimshaw, calligraphy, and soft sculpture for young people ages 7-17.

Each class meets once a week for two hours in four-week sessions. Due to individual needs of students in these subject areas, classes will have limited enrollment.

Scrimshaw classes will explore the old whaling craft from the beginning steps. Each student will create their own personal pieces of jewelry ready to wear.

Calligraphy classes will start with the basics of Italic and Old English. Students will learn the art of handwriting to fit the needs of their age level. Final pieces of calligraphic beauty will be achieved.

Soft sculpture classes will adapt the use of nylon stockings and muslin to create a world of imaginary people. Students will make the transformation by means of some basic stitching, paint, material, yarn and more.

Classes will begin the week of June 29 and will meet in Cohasset near St. Anthony's Church. The teacher, Stacey Hendrickson, is a certified art teacher with three years teaching experience. Registration will begin immediately by calling 383-0305.

Clothing sale

Polly Doggett announces another unique clothing sale for Saturday, May 30, at the Mormon Church at 379 Gardner St., in South Hingham.

The sale will be held in the new gymnasium, and the doors will open at 9 a.m.

All merchandise is new and comes from a nationally-known sportswear house. Some items are imperfect but repairable. Included in the sale are blouses, skirts, jeans, sweaters, tops, dresses, in Jr. Miss and small Misses sizes only.

For information call Polly at 383-1847.

Conservatory accepting summer reservations

The South Shore Conservatory in Hingham is now taking registrations for the summer term which will run for for nine weeks from June 15 to August 15.

For the first time, the Duxbury branch at the First Parish Unitarian Church, Rte. 3A in Duxbury will offer summer lessons on Mondays. A brochure is available at the office and will be sent on request (749-7565).

Private instrumental and voice lessons will be available as well as classes in ballet, modern dance, drama and chamber music for all ages and levels of ability. The Conservatory offers jazz lessons privately and in workshop improvisation groups for beginning and advanced students.

During the summer, the Conservatory offers a number of special courses for children including: "Fun With Puppets," "Guitar Fun," beginning "Music Theory" and "Creative Dramatics. There will be lessons in both Suzuki violin (the Young Violinist's Program) and, for the first time, Suzuki piano. The popular Joy of Music (Orff) program will introduce children 3-6 years old to the creative process of making music through spontaneous, creative activities. Summer fun for two and four year olds will be the Cedar Hill Play Camp which will be led by our nursery school teacher, Carol Forbes. There will be an opportunity for youngsters to try an instrument in the Brass and Woodwind Sampler program.

Once again, the Conservatory is pleased to announce that the South Shore Art Center is arranging art lessons for teenagers and children on the grounds of the Conservatory...Painting From Nature (teens), Exploring with Paint and Pencil and Art From Nature (8 to 12 yrs.), in which the children will create art works from "found objects" which they will collect around Cedar Hill.

Adults and high school students may enjoy the special Summer String program for beginners to advanced students with emphasis on string chamber groups. The Cedar Hill Concert Band will give those who have a yen to dust off the old instrument and play again, a chance to have an enjoyable gathering once a week. This is not for pros, but ability to read music and some band experience will be helpful. A new course will be the Science of Sound which will explore the basic elements of sound and the characteristics of musical instruments for four weeks.

Although the summer term is for nine weeks, students may register for as few as four lessons. It is a perfect opportunity to try an instrument or a class. Further information may be obtained by stopping by the Conservatory office, Off 19 Fort Hill St. in Hingham or calling 749-7565.

CHS honor roll

Donna Igo's name was somehow left off the honor roll when it was printed recently.

This is her last year at Cohasset High School. The senior has been accepted at Salem State College where she plans to major in nursing.

Donna was captain of the cheerleaders for three years.

Good luck!

St. Anthony's to hold Ecumenical Mass

St. Anthony's Parish of Cohasset invites all senior citizens to an Ecumenical Mass and service Monday, June 1.

Mass at 11 a.m. to be followed by a luncheon at 12 o'clock.

All are welcome.

Art awards announced

The South Shore Art Center this week announced the recipients of the 1981 Marian Hus and MacIvor Reddie awards as: Conrad Bailey from Milton, who will attend Boston University School of Visual Arts and Christine Melchin from Milton, who will attend Massachusetts College of Art.

The Center had 26 scholarship applicants this year and thanks each student for submitting a portfolio.

Dunn named Fence Viewer

Selectmen last week named Kearin Dunn the new fence viewer. He will replace Burtram Pratt who resigned recently.

Edward Figueiredo and Robert James were reappointed to the Government Island Committee and Martha Gjesteby was named the permanent MAPC member from Cohasset.

The board still has no applicants for a position on the zoning board of appeals or for the town constable. The constable serves summonses and posts the town meeting warrant.

Dormitzer National Merit Scholar winner

Philip Dormitzer, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dormitzer of 334 South Main St., has been selected as the winner of a National Merit $1,000 scholarship.

This scholarship is a one-time, nonrenewable award for which every finalist competes. All winners are chosen by a committee of experienced college admissions officers and secondary school counselors, convened for the specific purpose of evaluating all finalists' records and choosing the allocated number of National Merit $1,000 scholarship winners, state by state.

The selection committee evaluated every finalist's academic record, the student's self-description, achievement outside the classroom, qualities of leadership, scores from both the PSAT/NMSQT and the SAT, and the high school' recommendation of the finalist. Winners are the finalists judged by the committee to best combine abilities and personal qualities needed for success during and after college.

Over 1.1 million high school students entered the Merit Scholarship competition by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test in October, 1979.

In September, 1980, about 15,000 students were announced publicly as merit program semifinalists. Over ninety percent of the semifinalists advanced to finalist standing by January, 1981, thereby qualifying for further consideration in the competition for Merit Scholarships awarded this spring.

Every finalist competed for one of the National Merit $1,000 scholarships and 1,200 awards were made and allocated on a state representational basis.

McKinnon to be honored at champagne brunch

The Committee to re-elect state Sen. Allan McKinnon announced this week that the South Shore legislator will be honored at a champagne brunch Sunday, June 14 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Ridder Country Club in Whitman.

The committee urges that all who enjoy good times and support Sen. McKinnon's work in the State Senate plan on attending what promises to be an enjoyable June morning.

Fundraising pleases CCC leadership

Members of the Board of Directors of the Community Center of Cohasset are enthusiastic about the center's combined fundraiser and membership drive which is now in its second week.

"The response, so far, has been very good," says Membership Cochairman Janet Ditmar. "We are greatly encouraged not only by the increase in new memberships but also by the number of donations that have been received."

Since its founding in 1944, the center has truly become a focal point for the town, as was intended. The original bylaws of the center called for "an organization for the civic, social and recreational betterment of the town and to provide a place of meeting where such objectives may be fostered and encouraged." Even today, the center is continually updating and adding to its various programs in order to meet the needs of townspeople.

The role of the center in the community is an important one and since it is not supported by any public funds, its very existence depends solely on the support of its members and donors.

Magner addresses Practical Law class

Robert Magner, vice-president of the Cohasset Savings Bank, addressed the Practical Law class at Cohasset High School recently.

The seniors of the Social Studies elective course, which is taught by Mrs. Dorothy Wondolowski, have been studying consumer law and the uses of credit in our society.

Magner pointed out the availability of special help loans which are guaranteed by the federal government. He also stressed the point that parent loans not based on need and special interest loans are also available presently.

Credit ratings and availability were also discussed in depth during his forty minute presentation. Magner outlined the manner in which a loan officer evaluates an application and interprets the information supplied by the credit bureau. New bankruptcy laws were also reviewed.

Obituaries

Josephine LaRosa

Josephine (Scandone) LaRosa, 88, of Cohasset, died May 18 in Quincy City Hospital after a long illness.

She was born in Italy and had lived in Cohasset for 43 years.

Wife of the late Sebastian LaRosa, she leaves three sons, Anthony LaRosa and Alfred LaRosa, both of Hull, and Joseph LaRosa of Rockland; two daughters, Marie Blante of Cohasset and Madeline Caruso of Avon, and 18 grandchildren. She was also the mother of the late Alphonso LaRosa.

A funeral Mass was celebrated May 21 in St. Mary of the Assumption Church, Hull. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mildred Costello

Mildred L. (Baxter) Costello, 70, a 30-year resident of Cohasset, died May 20 in Bradley Manor Nursing Home after a long illness.

She was born in Boston and had been a homemaker.

She leaves her husband, Francis L. Costello; three children, Paula F. Meallo of Cohasset, Gerard M. Costello of Wilmington, Vt., and Janet M. Gondveer of Hingham; two brothers, Joseph F. Baxter of South Boston and Charles Baxter of North Weymouth; and seven grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated May 22 in St. Mary of the Assumption Church, Hull.

Donations in her memory may be made to Sunset Point House, 132 Edgewater Road, Hull.

Softballers win twice

By Rob Tis

The Skipper softball team had a fantastic week netting two wins. On Wednesday it was the Karen Froio show against Abington as she went six for six on the day and had seven runs batted in to lead the Skippers to an overwhelming 20-7 blowout victory. Gia Barressi had three hits and four R.B.I.'s for Cohasset. Jennifer Carrol received the win.

On Thursday a big third inning was the key to Skipper success against Holbrook. After the Bulldogs kept the Skippers scoreless for the first two innings the fireworks began. The Skippers had six straight hits that produced six runs. Gia Batressi and Lauri Sandblom each doubled in two runs in the big inning. The Skippers never lost the lead after that onslaught. They did however have to scrape together a few more runs to clinch the 9-6 victory.

The boys tennis team walked all over Abington 5-0 on Wednesday to clinch a berth in the state tournament. The Skippers are now 9-2 and have one more match remaining in regular season play, an easy one against Hanover. The Skippers first match in the state tourney will be on June 3rd, the draw is still unknown but it is hoped there will be a large group of faithful fans attending this match. The starting seven for this big match will include Gerry White, Shannon Collins, Mike Brady, Bob Tis, Joe Whelan, Paul Riley and Jason Gill.

It was a very frustrating week for the Skipper baseball team. After humiliating the undefeated Norwell Clippers last week the Skippers seemed to regress once again. On Wednesday the Skippers faced Abington and on Thursday the Skippers faced Holbrook. The Skippers were defeated in both games by the dismal score of 9-1. It is however a rebuilding team. The team now has 1 senior.

Booster banquet tonight

The Cohasset Boosters Club will hold its Spring Sports Award Banquet Wednesday, May 27, at 7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

All students who have participated in spring sports, and their coaches, will be guests of the Boosters.

Parents are invited for the nominal sum of $4 per dinner. Due to limited seating, the club cannot accommodate other family members.

The Boosters expect the usual fine support from the athletes' parents at this final banquet of the year.

Beach stickers not in yet

Don't bother going to the police station to pick up your parking permit for the beach.

They don't have any.

A sign on the door tells residents not to bother going any further if that's what they're after. When the permits are available the police will release the information in the local papers.

But there is no estimate when that will be. The old stickers are good until June 30.

TIPS ON WRITING
by John Cutler and Monroe Stearns

Here's the guide to good writing habits for all ages and levels of work. Written by two professional editors and publishers, covers all the basics of clear writing and proper use of English. Recommended by English teachers and professional writers. $2.95 buys this practical, informative and witty guide.

The Critics Speak

"I wish Tips on Writing had been available when I was teaching a writing course at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Do you happen to know Donald Hall, whose book I was using -- along with, of course, Strunk's Elements of Style? Since I think that examples are more instructive to students than explicit rules, I was delighted with your well-chosen illustrations, especially your revisions of poor sentences to good ones." -- Dorothy Lucker, PhD.

"We are very pleased with this publication." -- Dr. Seldon Whitaker, superintendent of schools, Duxbury.

"Tips on Writing is written for everyone. It is amusing and easy to read and is the answer to all the puzzling questions about writing." -- Alison Arnold (former society editor of the Boston Herald and now writes for The Boston Globe).

"A most enlightening and engaging little book. Every young writer learning his trade should have it on his shelf next to Strunk, Fowler, Webster's Collegiate and the Concise Oxford." --Francis Russell (author of Tragedy in Dedham and Shadow of Blooming Grove).

"The consensus of all who reviewed Tips on Writing was that it was an extremely enjoyable book. In fact, it was a fun book to read; that individuals who enjoyed writing as a hobby or as a vocation would greatly profit from this handbook; that students in upper division senior high courses such as a course we have in 'Creative Writing,' would greatly benefit from the handbook. Likewise, with our Vocational Technical Institute we have a program on 'Writing for Profit.' This particular instructor said this would be an extremely valuable book for her students. She is interested in using the handbook in class." --Dr. James Hager, deputy superintendent of the Lake Washington School District, Kirkland, Wash.

"What Strunk and White did for adults in their Elements of Style, Tips on Writing does for high school and college students -- as well as adults. Authoritative, practical, yet engagingly informal and witty." --Doris Kearns Goodwin (authorized biographer of President Lyndon Johnson).

Cohasset Mariner

vol. III, no. 35 | wednesday, june 3, 1981 | 25 cents

Ceremonies begin at 3 p.m.

CHS graduation this Sunday

The Cohasset High School Class of 1981 graduates Sunday at 3 p.m. on stage at the South Shore Music Circus.

That simple statement represents the finale of 12 years of schooling, shared by students and parents. It's been a long way from the first day of school back in 1969 when the kids were dressed in brand new clothes and already scuffed shoes to the cap and gown of the spring of 1981.

The list of seniors was slow to come. A few need credits here or there to pick up that important piece of paper. Lots of important people have had to make up courses in the past. The list now includes names.

For the seniors on the list, memories of the commencement ceremonies Sunday will be a permanent part of their lives. Parents, brothers, sisters, grandparents, other relatives and friends will fill the audience in the Music Circus, making the theater in the round very local and very special indeed.

This week is a busy one for the class. Tuesday was the prom at the Lantana in Randolph. Thursday is Class Night at the high school. In between many class members have been hanging out at the beach and/or searching for summer employment.

This is the last class to graduate without feeling the effects of Proposition 2½. It's also a class graduating without their yearbooks. It is said the books will be ready this summer.

Philip Dormitzer is number one in the class. Because of that he will deliver the valedictory address on a subject still classified as secret.

Over the weekend Phil, who plans to go to Harvard, still hadn't settled on a topic.

Phil thinks Cohasset High School did well by him. He won a National Merit Scholarship. He sees his future as in medicine and while he's thinking he would like to go on to Harvard Medical School he says tersely, "But medical schools are tough to get in."

Phil, who edited the Lamplighter, doesn't have any idea of furthering his work in journalism for now.

He does plan to do more with music, playing the trumpet, a little piano and singing.

"It was a pretty good class," Phil said commenting on the graduates of 1981.

"Not as intensely competitive as some of the other classes." He points out that the graduates have gotten into some good schools — Dartmouth, Duke, Simmons, Stanford, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Amherst, College of the Holy Cross, Swarthmore and more, according to the list provided by Richard Streeter's office.

Brenda Berman is the salutorian for the class, winning the honor over quite a few other bright and energetic students.

When the seniors march into the tent to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" there will be a few gleaming smiles, a few young people with stage fright — it is afterall, a big world out there — and a few tears of pride and bittersweet endings.

The seniors are getting ready to face that world on the other side of Route 3A. Some, in fact, most will continue their education in college, or other more vocationally-oriented school. Some have already signed up for the service or will at summer's end. Some plan to get into the job market immediately.

The seniors are in rehearsal this week for their beginning.

Sunday is a day of celebration.

MR. COHASSET — Arthur Clark

A night for Arthur

By Patricia Desmond

Arthur Clark, the first citizen of Cohasset, stood at the podium at Hugo's last week, visibly shaken by the outpouring of his friends.

The standing-room-only crowd filled the function room and almost filled the outside dining room with people paying tribute to the retiring selectman.

Arthur has long been rumored to be interested in the job as executive secretary to the board of selectmen. It's a job he's been filling anyway for almost 10 years. So far he hasn't submitted an application for the post.

Sen. Allan McKinnon thinks Arthur is sure to stay on as executive secretary. He told the 400 people gathered at Hugo's he looks forward to dealing with Arthur in that slot.

Allan brought a citation from the Senate, honoring Arthur for more than 40 years'service to the town. But that was only one of the speeches praising the former selectman, only one of the presents commemorating his work for the town.

Arthur seemed genuinely surprised by the response of the townspeople. He stood at the front, wearing a bridegrooms's boutonniere, baby's breath and a white carnation, smiling just a bit. Nothing uncharacteristic.

Summer recreation survives 2½

The summer recreation program this year will be similar to the programs of other years, despite Proposition 2½.

There will be playground supervision, youth tennis, wrestling, swimming plus a batch of special activities like cook-out, magic show, zoomobile and more.

Jack Worley, recreation director, said he was able to cut most of the budget reductions from administration.

Registration for the playground program will be from 9 a.m. to noon from Tuesday, June 23, through Friday, June 26. There are programs for children 4 and 5 separate from those for the 6 to 12-year-olds.

The program for the younger children is half day. A child must have been four by April 1 to be eligible. Fee for the program is $8 for one child, $12 for two or more for the older children. For the younger children the fee is $6 for one child and $10 for more.

Registration for youth tennis runs the same week, Tuesday to Friday from 2 to 4 p.m. only. Children 8 to 18 are eligible for $8.

The wrestling program is open to children in Grades 6 through 12 for $8.

The fees for the program are an innovation brought on by the 15 percent cut in the operating budget.

Jack pointed out that although the fee seems small when multiplied by the 400 who normally participate in the playground activities, the revenue will be substantial.

Tennis fight bounces into the town's court

By Patricia Desmond

A while back Lowry and Diana Bell, who live at the end of Gammons Road, decided to build a tennis court in their yard.

Their first plan was to put the court right next to their house which abuts Little Harbor. But that location required a wetlands hearing and their next door neighbors, Peter and Marilyn Mazza, weren't thrilled with the thought.

Anyway that concept was discarded and a new site, one closer to the Mazza home, was chosen.

Now more than a year and many court appearances later, the Bells almost have their tennis court. And the town has a many thousand dollar civil rights suit hanging in the sky.

The Bells are upset because the town has tried to stop them from building their tennis court near their property line while allowing the construction of other tennis courts elsewhere in town.

Commentary

Now the town is unsure of the next step. One selectman has taken himself out of discussion of the court. The other two can't agree on whether to appeal a superior court ruling that says the Bells are justified in building the court where they want to.

Gammons Road is about as wide as most driveways. It twists through thick woodlands over a stone causeway and out onto Rice Island, which sits in Little Harbor.

Driving down the road, it is easy to understand that the Mazzas would want to preserve the trees and setting for their home.

But they don't own the land they are arguing over and nothing in town law can keep a property owner from cutting down his trees if he wants to.

Diana explains that within two or three years, people on the road won't even know there's a tennis court on her land. The fence — soon to be installed — will be a dark-colored vinyl and vines will be planted to cover the fencing.

What's important though is not whether there should be a tennis court on the Bell's land but whether the Bell family has the legal right to build it there.

A judge listened to two weeks worth of evidence and said the tennis court is a right. The Mazzas still don't accept the decision. Mazza said he would appeal even without the town's help, as often as he has to.

It seems that's only fair. Every citizen has the right to go to court to try to get a hearing whenever the mood strikes. Courts don't always accept appeals or issue restraining orders — but they do have to consider them.

Cohasset's week

Roller skating postponed

Peter Breen, owner of Cohasset Winter Gardens, agreed to the Selectmen's request to postpone for one week, until June 20, the opening of the outdoor roller skating rink he plans to operate this summer in front of his building.

Chairman Henry Ainslie expressed concern about possible problems from increased traffic and new clientele. Peter stated that he plans on a police detail and that the skaters will not be allowed behind the building or to use the video game machines. He said that he's not sure what the amount of the amplification will be, but that the music will be played by a controller and the speakers will point toward Route 3A. The property is not close to residences, and he will have to work with any complaints that arise.

He plans to hold the roller skating from 3 to 6 and 7 to 10 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday of opening weekend, then Monday and Wednesdays from 4 to 7 and 7 to 10 p.m. and on Saturdays from 5 to 8 p.m. until Labor Day.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur requested the delay until after school closes, and Breen agreed.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported last week that the permanent intermittent police officers have a contract with the town. Sgt. Richard Barrows, president of the Cohasset Police Association explained the permanent intermittents don't actually have a contract. His statement was confirmed by town accountant William Signorelli, who said they are paid on a set hourly basis of $5.33.

there.

Quincy District Court will no longer furnish parking violations tags. The cost must be picked up by the Town.

Power leads planners

At its May 20 meeting, the Cohasset Planning Board recently reorganized for the next year. Unanimously elected were Barbara Power, chairman; John O'Toole, vice-chairman; and Patrick Plante, secretary.

Who studies boundaries

In response to a letter from Gilbert Tower to the Coast and Geodetic Survey in Washington to get the boundary line in Cohasset Harbor changed, Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie stated that such a change is not the function of the CGS. If it is done, it would be under the terms of the laws of Massachusetts and the CGS would pick it up from

Mosquito control report

Arthur Clark reported to Selectmen on a meeting of the South Shore Mosquito Control. If all towns aren't members, the organization can't continue, and Hingham, Hull, and Scituate have already joined with Plymouth Mosquito Control. The Board agreed that the best solution would be to do the same.

Night for Arthur

And everyone smiled back. And applauded and wished him well.

Most of the important people in town had a chance to say a few words during the evening. The rest of the important people seemed to be sitting in the audience.

Moderator David Place called Arthur a man for all seasons, a peace-maker. He said Arthur is an outstanding example of brotherhood, peace and understanding.

He said quite a few other nice things about the man who served as chairman of the board of selectmen for the past 12 years.

Arthur hasn't had a chance to enjoy his retirement yet. He still shows up at the selectmen's office every day, volunteering his free time for the town.

Easily the most attractive present given throughout the program came from the merchants of the town. Gene Price of the Village and Harbor Association brought in a gold framed mirror with a picture of Cohasset Common and town hall at the top.

Gene, who's president of the association, lauded Arthur as an accessible and visible politician, helping the local merchants when he could whether it was to block off the street for a fair or provide other support.

Postmaster Gerard Keating, the master of ceremonies, didn't tell many jokes.

The postmaster gave a bit of background about Arthur. At one point he introduced Eunice Clark, Arthur's wife, and the couple's four children, who were there with the rest of the family. There are 12 grandchildren.

The children are: Betty Vapides, Donald, Jimmy and Bobby.

Philip Murray, husband of the state representative, was chairman of the event. Lillian Murray gave Arthur a citation arranged by her mother, Mary Jeanette. The citation from the House of Representatives commended the former selectman.

Master David Jones of the Masonic Lodge sent Arthur a letter praising his example as a beacon we can follow, as living by the tenets of the lodge.

Bertram Pratt said his appointment as fence viewer was one of the first official acts Arthur handled after being elected 14 years ago.

He jokingly said he decided to resign a few months ago when someone at the Log and Line asked, "What's this fence sitting job that you have?"

TESTIMONIAL AWARD — Sen. Allan McKinnon gives former selectman Arthur Clark a senate citation in honor of more than 40 years of town service. (Greg Derr photo)

Mike Equi of Rotary Club said it was a privilege to serve the ex-selectman.

Connie Parker gave Arthur an honorary life membership in the Cohasset Historical Society. She said it took three calls to town hall to find out what Arthur's middle initial stood for — it's L. for Lean.

George McDonald, Norfolk County Commissioner, gave the honored guest a citation from the commissioners in recognition of his exemplary service on the Norfolk County Advisory Board.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board of selectmen, kidded the postmaster about being too busy to attend the planned meetings for the testimonial because he was working on the new 50 digit zip code.

After listening to all the praise and walking off with more symbols of appreciation than space permits mentioning, Arthur faced the group and said he felt like a millionaire.

"It's kind of hard to speak when I'm so overwhelmed and my heart is so full," he said.

Recreation program survives Prop. 2½

There will be 10 playground instructors plus another half dozen volunteers.

That's the same staffing level as always.

How was this town able to continue its program when others are having difficulty?

Jack said his 15 percent budget cut was less than the reductions in many other communities.

"Each town was a different case, for instance in Norwell the town meeting (held this week) was too late to get the program going."

From the stars above

By Claire McDonough

Now that Jupiter is conjunct with Saturn in the sign of Libra, clearly we're all in need of immediate astrological guidance. Particularly with a retrograde Mercury coming up on June 11, right? I mean, as soon as I heard about that I consulted Madam Zolar who runs this chic little ashram on Third Cliff and she gave me the following advice to pass along to you.

ARIES (March 22 to April 20): This is your month! You will have every opportunity to be pushy and obnoxious to your heart's content. Weak and crippled people are particularly vulnerable to your domineering ways.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21): Bad news for you Taureans. Your innate greed will get you nowhere — at least until the middle of August. Avoid Aries natives. They will take away your baseball cards.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 22): As always, you are really two people and both of them are in trouble. You will feel an insane compulsion to play video games, and you will lose your quarter every time.

CANCER (June 23 to July 23): From May 28 at 4:05 p.m. until May 28 at 4:38 p.m. you will be overcome by an inexplicable urge to diet. Move your bed next to your refrigerator and lie down until the urge passes.

LEO (July 24 to August 23): A Capricorn may cause problems on the 8th. Avoid pomeranians on the 12th. Your Cadillac will run out of gas while you are driving the wrong way on a one-way street on the 15th. These are the best things that will happen to you all month.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23): Your friends will avoid you because of your critical nature. On the other hand, some people just plain will not like you. Cheer up. You will get a suspended sentence on the income tax evasion charge.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23): You will attend five weddings this month. Four of them will be yours. You will have trouble deciding whether to go on your honeymoons or take up macrame.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22): You will find that marvelous opportunities for plotting revenge lie in the months ahead. Your natural duplicity and your secretive nature will stand you in good stead in your political career.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 22): Leo is entering your second house. Do not tell your spouse. You are open, truthful, and frank. People cannot stand you. Do not try to sell any used cars.

CAPRICORN (December 23 to January 19): Try to arrange alternate transportation for the week of the 21st, as your camel will be sick. You will receive a promotion mid-month, but all the fun will go out of it when your neighbors are not suitably impressed.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 19): Your zany, fun-loving nature comes into full play as the moon enters its last quarter. The police will not be understanding. Try to get an inspection sticker for your purple van.

PISCES (February 20 to March 21): Rejoice! You will have plenty of opportunities for hurt feelings and tears this month. For a splendid relationship, tune in to an Aries. If you're really lucky, things will get much worse.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Beware. An unscrupulous astrologer will attempt to deceive you. Advice given in newspapers according to sun sign should be considered, in astrological terms, a lot of Taurus.

Gift of hope

An experienced parent could say that hopes are either dashed or formed by high school graduation.

But parenthood, like faith, is founded in part on hope. A nebulous, unfortunately overused word, we intend to use it for its original power here.

For the CHS graduates, Class of 1981, we earnestly hope:

— you have sharpened enough skills to move ahead to sharpen more.

— you have developed the maturity that recognizes your work is made stronger when interspersed with celebration of life.

— that celebration alone refuses to replace the satisfaction of accomplishment.

— that you humbly, joyfully recognize how much you and your family mean to one another...despite knowing the best and worst of each.

— that your years at CHS will furnish fine fodder for your 25th reunion in 2006.

— and that you will be here to relish it.

— you come to realize, without equivocation or apology, that you are able to bring to this world something no one else has delivered in the same way before.

— and that you are charged to do so.

— that you have savored, and will forever, the delicious flavor of friendship.

— that you never lose hope of contributing to a better world.

— that you will have the same pride, the same lump in your throat when your child graduates as your parents do today.

— that you forgive us for placing so much stock in you. It isn't that we've given up hope for or in ourselves. Rather it is that hope is an important graduation gift we must give you.

And finally, we hope you will find the same joy in yourselves and in your existence that we have. Congratulations, you are set free to be as valuable as you are.

The legal bill

How much has the town spent trying to stop Lowry and Diana Bell from putting up a tennis court on the estate at the end of Gammons Road?

No one knows, the bill hasn't come in yet.

There was a bill for less than $2,000 paid to the special attorney hired for the case but that was to write a letter.

Where is the bill for the two week trial the town just lost? Where is the bill for initial work on the civil rights suit the Bell's filed against the town last year?

A letter from the Governor

(Mrs. Maria A. Plante of Grace Drive received the following letter from Gov. Edward King last week. Ed.)

Thank you for your correspondence regarding legislative proposals to establish casino gambling in Massachusetts. I am interested in and certainly understand your viewpoint and concern with respect to casino gambling. However, until all interested parties on both sides have had an opportunity to present their arguments and all the legislative reports are received, a judgment on my part would be premature.

I certainly believe casino gambling approval must come from more than one community. Casino gambling would clearly have an impact on a number of surrounding communities and they all must have a voice in any decision on this matter.

If voters in all of the communities affected by casinos gave their approval, and if both the House and Senate enacted legislation giving their approval, I would sign such a bill.

As I have said in the past, I am not a proponent of casino gambling and I will not work actively in its behalf, but the wishes of the people in the affected communities should have consideration in any decision that might be made.

I have also stated that I am absolutely opposed to betting on college and professional sporting events. That has been and will continue to be a stated position of mine.

Now that the issue of casino gambling has come to the forefront, more public attention and discussion will ensue. You may be assured that this administration is interested in hearing all viewpoints and resolving matters favorably in the best interests of all citizens of the Commonwealth. The integrity of the family is a priority issue for me, and one that is to be given full consideration in this and in all decisions.

Thank you again for writing. I appreciate your expression of interest and concern.

Sincerely,
Edward J. King
Governor

Water receipts up

Water receipts are up this month, with the threat of shut-off hovering for the big time debtors.

Ben Curley, water superintendent, said there will be no shut-offs this week. The water commissioners are to discuss a timetable for turning off water to customers who owe more than $400 at their next meeting.

When the deadline passed for turning off water to customers who owed more than $500, the whole bunch had paid the bills.

"Some people even in the $200 range have been in and paid the bill in full," Ben said.

"If we can just keep the ball rolling, we won't have to shut anybody off."

The pressure on the water department is the June 30 deadline for the fiscal year, plus the end of what once was a surplus in the water revenue that used to carry over the customers who failed to pay.

There are 35 or 40 customers who owe $400 or more. Unless the water commissioners change their recently established policy, the unpaid customers will lose their water next week.

"There's no doubt about it the program is working," Ben said. "But you have to keep right on it."

Tennis court battle

What seems out of whack is the town's involvement.

What the argument came down to in superior court was whether the tennis court fence was subject to a 50 foot setback requirement. A judge said no.

If the town indeed does have a legitimate interest in preventing the Bells from putting the fence near the edge of their property, why haven't other tennis courts in town been stopped?

Town Building Inspector James Litchfield said this week he does not want to comment on the suit, since litigation is still pending.

Richard Henderson, assistant town counsel named in the Bell's civil rights action as intervening in the dispute a year ago, didn't return his call to the Mariner early this week.

Pat Facey, former chairman of the planning board, said no article is proposed currently for town meeting action on the topic. She didn't want to say anymore since the issue is still in court.

Both Mazza and Bell were available to tell their side of the story.

Mazza believes the tennis court is an eyesore and will create a noise problem for him. His home is about 70 feet away from the edge of the court. His home is located close to the narrow roadway which separates his land from the Bells.

Bell believes it is his right to put the court there in the first place. In the second place he believes the setting will be attractive once construction work and landscaping are complete.

One of the more interesting points in the Bell's civil rights suit is a statement that Henderson ordered the building inspector to stop the Bells from constructing their court last spring. Litchfield had given the couple a building permit in March of that year.

What is missing from the terse statement is where Henderson as assistant town counsel got the authority to order the selectmen to do anything.

I'd be happy to print the answer next week if Henderson calls by the Tuesday morning deadline.

Should the Bells win their civil rights action, the town could be forced to pay $300,000 plus attorneys fees for both sides of the case.

She said people could save themselves a lot of costly mistakes consulting with a designer before they redo a room, house or office than after. Why copy a fabric you've seen in someone else's home when you could get a totally new concept from Marie?

☐Don Summers has just had a book published, "Personnel Management and Banking," which he labored on for four years. Saturday night Linda and he had a party to celebrate. The food, baked stuffed shells, salad and Italian bread was delicious and the guests, Missy and Gerry Devaney, Pat and Alice McCarthy, Margarite and Warren Dillon, Barbara and George Gurnis, Jill and Roger Crafts, and Mike and Anna Abbruzzese to name just a few, had an enjoyable evening. The most memorable part of the evening, however, was when their daughter, Emily, came downstairs dressed as a snowdrop.

☐Mrs. Jean Hollingshead was honored by New England Deaconess Hospital recently at a special award breakfast held at Countway Library. Jean has volunteered more than 100 hours in the Gift Shop. Pins were presented by Peter Campisano, Associate Director of the Hospital. Guest speaker was Dr. Jacob Lokich Chief, Medical Oncology, who spoke on "New Advances in Cancer Treatment." Congratulations.

☐Good luck Wentworth graduates Michael Quinlan of Brewster Road, Electrical Engineering Technology, Associate in Engineering Degree; and Paul E. Hurtig, 58 Gammons Road, Manufacturing Processes Technology, Associate in Applied Science Degree. They graduated last weekend at the Boston campus.

☐For a free meal go down to Cunningham Bridge and dig a bucket of mussels, but make sure to get the ones that are always under water, so go at low tide. Clean them thoroughly with a dull knife and be sure to pull off the beards. Cook them with enough wine and water to half cover the mussels and four or five cloves of garlic, steam until they're wide open, about ten minutes, stir a couple of times to bring the ones up from the bottom. Serve with melted butter, a salad, French bread. It makes a fabulous cheap meal.

☐Two birthdays were celebrated on Memorial Day, Debbie Schliecher, who is now 15, and Simeon Ketchum, who is now three.

☐Beth Laney has started her own business, Olympic Photo. She's been into it as a hobby for quite awhile, winning first prize in a Seventeen Magazine photography contest in her last year in high school. Beth said she'll photograph anything that is of special interest to anyone — weddings, parties, family portraits and Christmas cards, just to name a few. Beth is now living in the old North End of Boston.

☐Donna and Jim McGee, Peter and Pat Laugelle, and Polly and Marsh Litchfield have just returned from what sounded like a dream vacation, sailing for a week out of St. Thomas and making a loop around the islands, including Virgin Gorda and Tortilla. The days were very leisurely, getting up early, snorkeling, swimming and eating. From there they flew to Palmas del Mar, Puerto Rico, where they met Baron and Issie Salvador.

☐The Lothrop House had another successful Flea Market Saturday, their sixth one. Sally Marr and Ann Colocusis, who had one of the dealers tables, said they were pleased with the turn out. Jim Paterson, Red Lion bartender extraordinaire, and his wife Elsie, also had a dealer's table. Marylou Slotnick was displaying her gorgeous watercolors. I know, I bought one.

I spoke with David Wadsworth, curator for the Society, who is working on organizing the Cohasset Archives, which is just one of the multiple projects he has planned for the future.

☐Kathleen Howley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Howley of 10 Woodway, was recently elected executive editor of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

The Collegian is the student newspaper of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and has a daily circulation of over 17,000.

Howley graduated from Cohasset High School in 1976, and was a member of the Alternative School.

After graduation she spent a year working and traveling in Europe before returning home to begin college.

☐Judith Brennan, of 22 Bancroft Road, and Marilyn Sweeney, of 73 Elm St., were among the graduates at the 13th Commencement of the University of Massachusetts at Boston, Harbor Campus on Sunday, May 31. Sen. Edward Kennedy was the guest speaker.

☐If anything has happened in your life, a trophy, a job promotion, a birthday, a vacation or anything special to you, please give me a call. What fun is it if no one knows about it!

Selectmen weigh appeal in Bell tennis court case

By Ann Fogg

After meeting in executive session on three successive evenings last week, the selectmen still can't decide whether to appeal the recent decision of Judge Arthur Sherman that Lowry Bell may build a fenced-in tennis court on Gammons Road.

Since first obtaining a permit over a year ago to build the court, Bell has been opposed by Peter Mazza, his next door neighbor, on the grounds that the proposed court is visually and audibly objectionable and will create a traffic hazard on the steep, narrow, winding street.

Both Bell and Mazza, accompanied by their attorneys, appeared before the board last week. The question is the interpretation of a clause in the town bylaws requiring "a 50 foot setback for the following: other permitted community facility, structure or principle use."

Under Judge Sherman's ruling, the word community modifies facility, structure, and principle use; since the tennis court is not public but private, the 50 foot setback need not apply. The bylaw definitions say a community facility is a premises used for religious, education, health, or recreation uses including public housing for the elderly and/or premises operated by a governing body.

Structure is defined as a "combination of materials combined at a fixed location to give support or shelter, such as a bin, bridge, building, dock, fence, framework, flagpole, platform, retaining wall, reviewing stand, sign, stadium, swimming pool, tank, tennis court, tent, tower, trestle, and tunnel."

There is no definition of community structure.

The tennis court issue has been in court four times in the past year, the last time to resolve a split decision by the Board of Zoning Appeals in which the Chairman upheld the permit, one member opposed it, and the third member offered no opinion.

The Selectmen recessed their first executive session until 6 p.m. the following evening in order to look at the site, then recessed and resumed it again.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle disqualified himself from the matter at the Thursday session. He explained his son-in-law does landscaping for the Bells.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board, joked that Rocky was sure to find a way out of voting on the issue.

Henry and the third selectman, Mary Jane McArthur, cannot agree on whether the town should appeal the decision which means no appeal will be filed at this time on the town's behalf.

The Mazza's are already in the process of appealing the decision.

DAVE TOMA TO APPEAR

On Tuesday, June 9 and Wednesday, June 10, Dave Toma will be appearing at the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School.

Dave Toma is a former New Jersey undercover policeman who has had two television series based upon his life, the first of which was called "Toma," and the second is called "Baretta." Presently Toma is touring schools all over the country giving lectures primarily about the horrors of alcohol and drug abuse.

Health Coordinator Mike Gill stresses that this is not a "one-shot" scare tactic, but only the beginning of a total health education program scheduled to begin in the fall of 1981. The philosphy of the new health education program is to start with a preventive health education program which must begin in the elementary schools and continue through high school. The Dave Toma Program is the "kick off" to the program.

Dave Toma will speak to grades 9-12 on Tuesday, June 9. His program will take up most of the school day and will also include counseling on an individual or small group basis with Dave Toma himself.

On Tuesday evening, June 9, 1981 at 7:45 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Auditorium, Dave Toma will make a presentation to the parents which will be open to the community. People wishing to attend should please be prompt.

On Wednesday, June 10, Dave Toma will make a presentation to students in grades 5-8 cautioning those students from getting involved in drug or alcohol abuse.

ATTENTION 10TH & 11TH GRADERS

Would you like to study in another country for a year? Such an opportunity is now available to you through the Cohasset Rotary Club. The Rotary International has sponsored a Youth Exchange Program for a number of years, and the Cohasset Chapter will be participating in that program again this year.

To qualify for consideration, a student must be at least fifteen and one-half (15½) years and less than eighteen and one-half (18½) years, studying in the last two (2) years of pre-college training, and in the upper third of the class scholastically.

If you are interested in considering this opportunity, more specific information and all forms and applications are available in the Guidance Office. The deadline for filing the applications is Friday, June 12.

HOST FAMILIES NEEDED

International Fellowship, Inc., a student exchange program, is in need of local families who will be willing to host a foreign student of high school age. Most of the exchange students will be Spanish-speaking and will be from South America or Mexico. International Fellowship sponsors a summer exchange program as well as one during the school year. Interested families may get more information in the Guidance Office or write to: International Fellowships, Inc., Two-Ten Franklin Bldg., Suite 304, Buffalo, NY 14202.

Steve D'Onofrio was elected Vice President of the Eastern Massachusetts Association of National Honor Societies for 1981-82. Congratulations, Steve.

The last meeting of the Communication Council for the year will be Thursday, June 4 in Mr. Streeter's office. Parents are always encouraged to attend, and if you would like to be a class representative for next year, please contact Carol Sandbloom.

Class Nite for the Seniors will be Thursday, June 4 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium. All scholarships and awards will be presented. Attendance is required for all Seniors.

The winners of this season's Booster Club Sports Awards are: Baseball, Kevin Dooley; Boys' Track, Keith Ross; Girls' Track, Hannah Clinton; Softball, Ellen DiGirolamo; Girls' Tennis, Karen Murphy; Boys' Tennis, Shannon Collins; Golf, Scott Hulburt.

Dr. Mundhenk, the Varsity Soccer Coach, is planning a meeting on June 8, in the new study hall.

The Boosters can cook too

By Bob Tis

Cohasset High School wrapped up the spring athletic season with the Booster Club banquet last Wednesday night.

The highlight of the night was the food, especially a special blend of rice created by the Booster kitchen staff as well as some fabulous Fried Chicken.

Rose Duffy, Booster Club president, then gave everyone the lowdown on the night at the Music Circus to support High School athletics. Next she had the hard working kitchen crew come out and take a bow. Then Mrs. Duffy got down to the real business of passing out the Booster trophies, awarded to one member of each team for outstanding team spirit and enthusiasm as seen by his teammates.

Karen Murphy, who began the season with a broken arm but fought back to have an undefeated season in doubles, won the award for the girls' tennis team. Shannon Collins, the owner of one of the deadliest forehands in the world, won the award for the boys' team.

Hannah Clinton, almost as fast on a track as on water (a well known sailor), won the award for the girls as did the unyielding Keith Ross for the boys' team.

Ellen DiGirolamo, who plays the hot corner for the softball team, received the Booster award as did Kevin Dooley for the baseball team. Kevin, who was not known for his pitching until recently, when he hurled 12 innings of extremely tough ball against Hanover and was the winning pitcher in the upset of the century when the winless Skippers beat the undefeated powerhouse Norwell, 6-4.

Scott Hurlbut, who has been the main man of the golf team since he entered Cohasset High, took home the trophy. Jack McNeill, also a member of the golf team, received a trophy award by Clark Chatterton, Athletic Director, for winning the state sectional tournament shooting an 80 for 18 holes. Torin Sweeney received a trophy for achieving all-league status this past winter.

This was a very successful season as master of ceremonies Clark Chatterton stated that three teams qualified for state tournament play: the golf team, led by Scott Hurlbut, Jack McNeil, John Drago, Troy Chatterton and Steve Taylor; the girls' tennis team, led by Sue Dalrymple, Mia Graham, Joy Pratt, Chrissie Ralph, Karen Murphy, Dianne Mullen and Lauren Alemien; and the boys' tennis team, which attained a 10-2 record this year. All matches will begin this week at a neutral site.

The Recreation report

By John Worley
Director of Recreation

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations Monday, June 8, through Thursday, June 18, from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. daily, for Summer Youth Concert Band.

The program, taught by Kathryn A. Fox, Deer Hill School Music teacher, will be open to children grades 4 and up. The fee for the 6 week program is $8 per person. Participants must have one year experience with instrument.

The program will meet Monday and Wednesday evenings, from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, beginning Monday, July 6, continuing 6 weeks thru Wednesday, August 12. The youth concert will provide extra instruction and continuity of instruction to those students who are involved in the school band programs. Also, the youth concert will perform on the Cohasset Common at some point during the summer.

SUMMER YOUTH WRESTLING CLINIC

The Recreation Department will accept registration from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m., Monday, June 8, thru Thursday, June 18, for a Summer Youth Wrestling Clinic for grades 5 to 12. The fee is $9 per person for the 8 week program that will be taught by Torin Sweeny, at the Cohasset High School Gym.

Grades 5 thru 8 will meet on Monday and Wednesdays beginning Monday, July 6, thru August 27, from 8:30 to 10 a.m.

Grades 9-12 will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays, during the same hours.

Boosters looking for new members

The Cohasset Boosters Club announces the winner of the 1981 Spring sports awards: Kevin Dooley, baseball; Hannah Clinton, girls' track; Keith Ross, boys' track; Karen Murphy, girls' tennis; Shannon Collins, boys' tennis; Ellen DiGirolamo, softball; Scott Hurlburt, golf.

The Boosters Club is an organization which supports and promotes sports in the Cohasset school system. All parents of student-athletes are welcome as members. There are no joining fees, and plans for Fall activities are now underway. Please join us to further enhance school sports.

We wish to thank the high school administration for the use of its cafeteria and kitchen. These facilities help insure the success of the Boosters' banquets. Very gratefully acknowledged is a donation of $100, and the spirit in which it was given. Thank you to all who helped this past year.

Cohasset to host 30 German students

Thirty students from Germany, ranging in age from 15 to 20, will visit Cohasset during the month of August under the sponsorship of the American Institute for Foreign Study (AIFS).

The students, who pay their own expense to travel to this country, will arrive in Cohasset Aug. 1. Their stay on the South Shore will last until August 28 and will include trips to Boston, Plymouth and Newport.

While in Cohasset, the students will be housed individually as guests in homes of town residents. According to Suzanne Smith, who is a coordinator for AIFS in Cohasset and a high school teacher in Hingham, the program serves as a basis for promoting international understanding. The students come to America, most of them for the first time, looking for the opportunity to learn firsthand about the American lifestyle. American families who host them enjoy in exchange a contact with another culture.

The German students all speak English and are eager to practice the language with their new friends. They come from many diverse backgrounds and are oriented towards higher education. The group will be accompanied by an adult advisor.

Host families provide a place to stay with bed and board, offering a home away from home for these young Europeans. There is an extensive program of activities available for the students and members of the host families, including day trips, sports, picnics, cookouts, a welcome party and a farewell dance.

AIFS students are inquisitive and want to learn about this country. They look forward to coming and appreciate American hospitality.

Anyone interested in hosting a German student during their visit to America can call Suzanne Smith at 383-6885.

Hanlon Shows

From 1889 to 1905, a theater company was in town, Hanlon Shows.

The company of 200 or so would rehearse all summer, giving local shows then go on the road in the fall with their production.

Some say the Hanlon Brothers shows were the beginnings of musical comedy in this country.

Anti-gambling group meets with Gov. King

Citizens Against Casino Gambling's meeting with Governor Edward J. King last Tuesday has helped to clarify the chief executive's official position concerning current proposals to legalize casino gambling in Massachusetts.

In response to concerns listed by the group's leaders, King stated that voters in surrounding communities near a proposed casino should play a part in any decision concerning casinos.

C.A.C.G.'s conference with the governor coincided with the delivery of his mailed response to state residents who had expressed opposition to casino gambling.

The letter read, in part, "I certainly believe casino gambling approval must come from more than one community. Casino gambling would clearly have an impact on a number of surrounding communities and they all must have a voice in any decision on this matter. As I have said in the past, I am not a proponent of casino gambling and I will not work actively in its behalf, but the wishes of the people in the affected communities should have consideration in any decision that might be made."

King named Jack McGlynn, his chief secretary, as liason with C.A.C.G. Carol Oteri, of Hull, C.A.C.G. president, said that the appointment of McGlynn "will facilitate the flow of pertinent anti-casino information to the executive office."

C.A.C.G. board chairman, retired Supreme Judicial Court Justice Paul C. Reardon, of Hingham, board member Jack Conway of Cohasset, and vice-president Fred Moran of Adams, emerged from the session satisfied that the governor's views have now been made public and that his stance provides a mechanism through which an entire area can avoid having its fate decided by the actions of a single community.

Moran commented, "When you talk about 'home rule' you must define what you mean by 'home.' Is it just where you hang your hat, or is it the larger community in which we interact? My observation is that we all claim quite an extensive area as our home, if not indeed the whole state."

Rec. Dept. plans water rafting trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department is planning a White Water Rafting Trip on the Penobscot River, Maine, over the weekend of Aug. 15 and 16.

The trip is being conducted by Student Ski Tours, Inc. and registrations will be accepted immediately for young people 12 and over. The Department will provide a trip leader and ski tours will provide a Maine guide and rafting guide.

The package plan of $105 per person includes one night lodging in a condominium on Moose Head Lake, breakfast, lunch and dinner, round trip bus transportation and White Water rafting with guide.

Tennis, swimming and a variety of other recreational activities are also available during the trip.

For further details and registration, call Jack Worley at the Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Immediate registration is advised as the trip will be limited as to number.

Time for hometown views of big city news. We can't let the goings-on in Boston and elsewhere do without rural interpretation.

— Look for the gypsy moth to become the state bird unless we conquer the takeover this summer.

— OPEC must be getting senile. They got through an oil meeting without raising prices again. They're probably just getting ready to go for a non-profit tax status.

— It's really the people in East Boston who are having all the fun. Imagine a shot at single-handedly getting Kevin's goat when he tries to go to Logan.

PATCHES

— Course I've been consumed with the fantasy of taking over my very own police station. Truth is sideshows coming to town for the summer could take lessons from the City Council, too.

— The baseball players are into their 'always almost-striking' season. The Sox can't afford to incite fans this year. Some have been promoting Manchester Red Sox.

— A family in Canton increased dramatically last week with the addition of four baby boys — quads. The father is a teacher in Hull. See? Proposition 2½ didn't cut back everywhere.

— Apparently there's a new media concept on the loose — neighborhood TV. Does that mean we get to see what goes on in neighborhood homes about breakfast time?

— A group of graduates from a Minnesota high school dismantled a Volkswagen, put it atop the school building where they 'mantled' it again. That class may be producing some of the best mechanics in the country.

— Let a little warm air drift in an office window and some people can't get those air conditioners in fast enough. Never understood it. Waited all winter for warm air through an open window. I don't want to wait all winter for a cold draft of phony air from a conditioner.

— A group of high school students found a way to hold the prom without going in debt. Overdue deja vu.

— There was a frightening story in last week's Globe about a woman of 50 who had her fourth son. Beautiful baby but let us pray for a good 10 years.

— How come, if men are so averse to using pennies, they let so many get palmed off on 'em.

— Nothing so emphasizes ignorance as when someone speaks of himself as being very knowledgeable. Because it is the know-it-alls in high places whom we wisely fear.

— It's the season of green, glorious green, except in the case of the green ribbons we see that remind us there's at least one lunatic killing young people in Atlanta.

— What a relief to know Gov. King's concerned about cutbacks in towns like ours. If it's true the state revenue can't support aid to towns, maybe they could find some money from salaries of 4000 people he's just hired, primarily for "manpower affairs," whatever that means.

SPINAL SCREENING
AT THE
FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC
JUNE 2 through JUNE 30

1. Head tilt
2. High shoulder
3. Low scapula
4. Spinal curvature
5. Low hip

Potential Danger signals of Irritated Nerves:

- Headaches, dizziness, blurred vision
- Neck pain, tight muscles, spasms
- Shoulder pain, pain down arms, numbness in hands
- Pain between shoulders, difficult breathing, abdominal pains
- Lower back pain, hip pain, pain down leg

Family Practice of Chiropractic is offering spinal check-ups and postural analysis for early detection of back problems.

TIME magazine says 75 million Americans have backache, and with each passing year, this astronomical figure grows by 7,000,000.

Backache has become a catastrophic issue with the insurance companies and with our national economy. It is one of the top claims for disability. In addition to this, arthritis and rheumatic complaints affect 77 percent of our adult population, and every year millions sustain severe neck injuries from automobile collisions.

With the use of a few simple painless tests we will be able to determine the condition of the spine. Early detection of back problems is the best prevention for future back ailments.

The spinal screening will be offered without charge or obligation, at the

Dr. John P. Hayes, Jr.
Family Practice of Chiropractic, P.C.
353 Washington Street [Route 53]
Norwell, Mass. 02061

Doctor will be available for answering questions on treatment and prevention of back problems.

TIPS ON WRITING
by John Cutler and Monroe Stearns

Here's the guide to good writing habits for all ages and levels of work. Written by two professional editors and publishers, covers all the basics of clear writing and proper use of English. Recommended by English teachers and professional writers. $2.95 buys this practical, informative and witty guide.

The Critics Speak

"I wish Tips on Writing had been available when I was teaching a writing course at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Do you happen to know Donald Hall, whose book I was using -- along with, of course, Strunk's Elements of Style? Since I think that examples are more instructive to students than explicit rules, I was delighted with your well-chosen illustrations, especially your revisions of poor sentences to good ones." -- Dorothy Lucker, PhD.

"We are very pleased with this publication." -- Dr. Seldon Whitaker, superintendent of schools, Duxbury.

"Tips on Writing is written for everyone. It is amusing and easy to read and is the answer to all the puzzling questions about writing." -- Alison Arnold (former society editor of the Boston Herald and now writes for The Boston Globe).

"A most enlightening and engaging little book. Every young writer learning his trade should have it on his shelf next to Strunk, Fowler, Webster's Collegiate and the Concise Oxford." --Francis Russell (author of Tragedy in Dedham and Shadow of Blooming Grove).

"The consensus of all who reviewed Tips on Writing was that it was an extremely enjoyable book. In fact, it was a fun book to read; that individuals who enjoyed writing as a hobby or as a vocation would greatly profit from this handbook; that students in upper division senior high courses such as a course we have in 'Creative Writing,' would greatly benefit from the handbook. Likewise, with our Vocational Technical Institute we have a program on 'Writing for Profit.' This particular instructor said this would be an extremely valuable book for her students. She is interested in using the handbook in class." --Dr. James Hager, deputy superintendent of the Lake Washington School District, Kirkland, Wash.

"What Strunk and White did for adults in their Elements of Style, Tips on Writing does for high school and college students -- as well as adults. Authoritative, practical, yet engagingly informal and witty." --Doris Kearns Goodwin (authorized biographer of President Lyndon Johnson).

vol. III, no. 36 | wednesday, June 10, 1981 | 25 cents

Joseph Barresi

'Have faith' says Inspector General

By Patricia Desmond

Joseph Barresi, the state inspector general, sat in the living room of his Cohasset home, his tie was off but he was hardly relaxing.

He was talking about a pattern of waste and corruption in government — a pattern he has been hired to change.

He was talking about his plans to change the problem documented in 9 volumes by the Ward Commission, best known for the MBM scandal.

"There are really 12 volumes but the last three are just appendices and notes," he offered.

He sees his job as one that will end up changing the public attitude toward government. He sees it as a deterrent to corruption of public officials. He sees it as an administrator.

This week he plans to look over space available in the McCormack Building for himself and his staff. He will be sworn in June 29, with an initial appropriation of $400,000 for the job.

"I estimate I can hire 10 to 15 people with that. There is no limit on the staff I can hire. I can hire as many people as I want to, within the appropriation," he says.

He didn't smile much during the interview. It's not a subject one can smile very much about. But then how many people like smiling late at night after a day's work.

Right now Mr. Barresi is working as a consultant to the auditor of the city of Boston, daytimes. His evenings are just as busy with commitments of different sorts.

I arrived at the Barresi home on Brewster Road while the new reporter for the Mirror was talking with him.

He said later he had decided to give out only a few personal intervies, and those were to the local press.

"I've been warding off the others," he said. "And after I'm sworn in I'm going to be even less accessible."

The first thing he wants to do is to hire a top notch criminal investigator, probably an attorney.

Crackdown on unlicensed dogs

Less than a third of the dogs in town are licensed, according to Dog Officer Richard Yocum.

The new dog officer is planning a program of strict enforcement of the law on licensing which he expects will send quite a few dogs to the town's pound, Shishone Kennels in Marshfield.

Meanwhile the selectmen are issuing a plea to townspeople to get their dogs licensed. The board decided that would be one solution after hearing the new dog officer talk about the problem last week.

So far this year 378 dogs have been licensed. Last year's licenses expired April 1. Last year there were 753 dogs licensed in town.

Dick was appointed to the dog officer's job May 1, replacing Jack Barrett who resigned due to changing work assignments.

The job is considered parttime but Dick believes he can crack down on the unlicensed dogs beginning now.

"If I pick them up people have to pay more," he points out. "There is a pound fee and they are required to license them before being released."

Right now there is one Cohasset dog in the pound. No one had called reporting a missing dog so far this week.

"A lot of people don't think they need to license a dog," Dick said. "They think if the dog is a house dog or is kept fenced in the yard, there is no need to license him. The law says all dogs have to be licensed."

The number licensed has been in a steady decline since 1977. People say they don't think the dog population is declining along with the decrease in licensing.

In Cohasset dog licensing is easier than it is in most communities. The whole form comes with a water bill and for 25 cents it may be mailed back to the town clerk.

"There's no big stampede to get the dogs licensed even with all that," according to the town clerk's

THE LAST HURRAH — Happy graduates plan for the future before the commencement exercises for the Class of 1981 at South Shore Music Circus. They are: Tara Diab, Heidi Brown, Gail Smart, Sarah Roebuck and Karen Crowley.

CHS graduates 146

Yes, the Class of 1981 is real. It is 146 strong and very real.

Philip Dormitzer critiqued the education offered in the Cohasset school system.

Phil, wearing his dark blue graduation gown, delivered the valedictory address to the class Sunday in the South Shore Music Circus.

He found the school system must be doing something right to let a student get up and have the last word. He also found some teachers wanting in respect for the students, some homework assignments pointless, some punishment pointless and midyear and final tests weigh too heavily in grades.

Typical complaints, it would seem.

Brenda Birmann, number two in the class, wore a white gown. She delivered the salutatory address on the negative aspects of competition and said there is something wrong when someone trying as hard as possible feels that number two isn't a good enough place.

"To develop and use talent to welcome challenge is as important as winning," Brenda told the other 145 members of the graduating class.

The program was full of smiling faces. Each of the young women in the graduating class carried one long stemmed red rose.

Irene Brown, chairman of the school committee, presented all but a few special diplomas. Mrs. Brown was on the podium with the pride of a parent as well as the pride of a member of the policy-setting

Cohasset's 1st condo on the market

Cohasset's first condominium is on North Main Street at the corner of Sohier.

Prices are in the $100,000 range for two bedrooms, and other accessory rooms in what once was an old mansion.

From some windows, there is a water view.

"As tenants move out, we are converting it," Debby Deal of Jack Conway's Cohasset office said Sunday during an open house at 79 North Main Street.

Only one unit is on sale at this time. That one goes for $105,000. It includes two bedrooms on the second floor, two baths, modern kitchen and two other first floor rooms.

The waterview from that unit is from a bedroom window. Bits of Little Harbor and the ocean beyond can be seen.

A better view is had from the front condo, one that sold before the rehabilitation work was done, for $145,000.

"If it sold today, the price would be $160,000," Debby said.

That unit is larger than the one still on the market. Including an unheated glassed-in porch there are four first floor rooms, two second floor bedrooms, a second floor deck and either a very large closet or

Place accepts top Air Force post

Town Moderator David Place will resign town office to accept a Presidential appointment as general counsel to the Air Force.

His appointment to federal office has been rumored ever since the election. The moderator had worked long and hard for both the Republican Party and Ronald Reagan.

His wife, Penelope, talked about the appointment in her home this week. Her husband sent his message of impending change from Washington, D.C.

The family home will remain in Cohasset, despite the need to resign local office and employment.

"My husband has a place to stay for now,"

Cohasset's week

Pay up quickly

For some time now, we've been telling you that people with large delinquent water bills may have their supply turned off.

Well, this may be the week of reckoning.

Water Superintendent Ben Curley said his workers are telephoning the 34 people who owe between $400 and $500 in back bills, warning they better pay by the middle of the week or lose their water service.

"Some of them may be shut off, that was the decision the water commissioners made," he said.

Meanwhile $100,000 is outstanding in unpaid water bills. With the fiscal year closing the end of the month, the figure is cause for concern.

The water commissioners may change the system soon, charging interest on unpaid bills after 30 days. Right now interest begins after 90 days.

Keep-Well cancelled

For the summer months the 60 Plus Club Keep-Well will be cancelled.

The regularly scheduled Keep-Well at Harborview will be held on the fourth Wednesday of each month. If you are unable to attend, remember our office hours from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m., on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Blood pressure monitoring, urine testing and health consultation will be available at the League office. Clinical testing for anemia will also be available this month. Call the shuttle if you need a ride.

The Keep-Well will be held at Harborview, 60 Elm St., on June 24 from 10 a.m. to noon. This month Dr. John Burns, D.M.D. will be conducting a special oral screening clinic for cancer. This clinic is open to all residents and is free of charge. Doctor Burns, who resides in Cohasset, practices in Hingham, has donated his services.

N.Y. gambling study

A recent Board of Directors meeting of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., concentrated on plans to distribute copies of the anti-casino study compiled by New York's Attorney General Robert Abrams.

The group conferred at the home of Retired Justice of the State Supreme Court, Paul C. Reardon, of Hingham, C.A.C.G. board chairman. Judge Reardon urged those in attendance to forward packets of significant materials to state officials. Later that week Reardon personally delivered the Abrams Report to Massachusetts Attorney General Frank Bellotti.

C.A.C.G. president, Carol Oteri, of Hull, and vice-president Fred Moran, of Adams, quoted from the most recent U.S. Department of Labor report which has removed Hull and Adams from the government's list of municipalities having a labor surplus.

Oteri and Moran said that they were "pleased and encouraged" that unemployment rates in their respective hometowns have declined in the last year, "further reflecting the improving health of their economies." Both expressed relief that both towns "have now escaped the type of image being promoted by casino backers."

Boating speeds

In response to the offer of Lincoln Bloomfield to pay for a sign on Cunningham Bridge to regulate boating speeds, the Selectmen voted to discuss it with Harbormaster Harry Ritter and Assistant Harbor Master Jack Hubbard.

LWV to study gambling

The state League of Women Voters will be studying the issue of legalized gambling in the coming year.

The subject matter for the state study was proposed by the Hingham League of Women Voters while the legislature considers bills to legalize casino gambling for nearby Hull and the western Massachusetts town of Adams.

No hospital ballooning

On recommendation of the Weymouth Fire Department, balloon gifts, also known as balloon-o-grams, will no longer be permitted at South Shore Hospital as a possible safety hazard.

The primary consideration in banning the balloons is the possibility of combustion created by static electricity in an oxygen-enriched atmosphere such as that in many areas of the hospital.

Vendors who receive orders for balloon gifts on behalf of patients or staff members should be aware that delivery will not be accepted.

Tetanus clinic

A "Walk-In" Tetanus Clinic will be jointly sponsored by the Board of Health and the Social Service League.

Dr. Michael Bliss will be the attending physician.

A tetanus booster is recommended every ten years. Tetanus immunization is generally required in cases of injury such as puncture wounds and lacerations.

The clinic will be held on June 23 from 6 to 8 p.m., at the Social Service League, 16 Highland Ave. A nominal fee of $2 will be requested. If you have any questions please call 383-0771.

No Clark decision

Arthur Clark has not yet decided whether he will apply for the job of executive secretary to the selectmen.

Place appointment

Mrs. Place explained. "At least for the summer. We're not moving our home. The family will be based in Cohasset."

There are four children in the family — David Elliott Place, Jr., 27, Richard Merrill Place, 25, Penelope Parkman Place, 25, and Josiah Richardson Place, 19.

The town moderator has been active in Republican politics for years. At town meeting this year, he had a jar of jelly beans nearby.

The story of his appointment leaked out a day before the defense department planned its release.

"We really weren't ready for this. I should have had his resume ready but we didn't expect the news to be out. I guess we were naive," she said.

The appointment as general counsel is for the duration of President Reagan's term, three-and-a-half years.

The appointment is a presidential one. It does not require Senate confirmation.

"It's all happening so suddenly," Mrs. Place remarked. The actual swearing in happens later this month.

school committee.

Some other town officials had cause for pride, too. Richard Streeter, high school principal, beamed at the class. Mr. Streeter, who wore a white tux, made the introductions throughout the afternoon.

Blue and white carnations and baby's breath decorated the stage. The women of the school committee all wore blue dresses. Was it in honor of the school colors, blue and white?

The band played with precision and energy.

The Rev. John Keohane talked about growing and leading our lives in his invocation.

Eugene Crowell, superintendent of schools, told the graduates, "This is your day. I ask you to consider real education is a process of learning."

Gerard White, president of the senior class, said the class is unusually diversified, unlike any other.

"We were told, and I quote, we had a queer class. Soon many of us started believing that.

"Maybe it was that 1963 was not a good year for babies."

He said that during their underclassmen years, the members of the class of '81 weren't found at the beach with everyone else.

But senior year brought them together, he said.

"Seniors began to shine. Talents varied. Some felt reality was for people who couldn't handle drugs. Others felt the opposite."

He described the class as fairly tame, holding as it does an acceptance of so many different beliefs.

He reminded his classmates that they had lived with the tragic deaths of two of their class. He said the variety, the acceptance of diversity is what makes his class real.

"We can say 1963 was a good year for babies," he said.

"Once you are real, you can't be ugly except to those who don't understand."

Cameras flashed. A few members of the class, very few, tossed their mortar boards into the air.

School Committee member Dick Conley rushed to stop the bleeding from the head of one young women whose hat hit her hard as it returned earthward.

The parents everywhere in the tent applauded the success of their children. It was a proud moment.

small sewing room.

Two more apartments are located in the building. They are now occupied. A separate garage will be sold as a fifth unit — either as living space, if town approval can be obtained — or as garage space.

Leaded glass windows, walk to the village, blooming rhododendrons, an acre of grounds well planted and in the process of being manicured, new gas heaters for every unit, washer and dryer hook-ups, storage space in the basement, separate entrances, the list continues.

The building is now owned by Bill Chase of Marshfield. Space in the units ranges from 1,300 to 2,000 square feet. Most units have fireplaces, although the one now up for sale doesn't.

Why aren't there more condominiums in town?

There are few apartments.

Swim team tryouts

Try-outs for the Cohasset Swim Team will be held at the Cohasset Swim Center on Saturday, June 13.

Children whose last name begins with A-L may try out from 9 to 10:15 a.m.; M-Z from 10:15 to 11:30.

Diving try-outs will be from 11:39 to noon. All swim team members must be members of the Cohasset Swim Center.

60 Plus luncheon

Cohasset 60 Plus Club will hold their annual luncheon at Hugo's, Thursday, June 18.

Happy hour is at noon, luncehon at 1 p.m.

We will be fortunate to again have the dance team of Claire and Roger Vaka to perform.

There will be group dances for members to join in, after their performance.

Toma drug program may be too negative warns Rev. Atkinson

The sermon at the First Parish Unitarian-Universalist Church this week was: Warning, Toma may be dangerous to your health.

The Rev. Edward Atkinson, minister and high school parent, said he wanted to make it clear he was not about to find himself involved in a fight with the committee who raised money to bring David Toma to town.

He thinks he and the group of parents concerned about establishing a drug education program in town have the same goal in mind.

But he thinks the Toma approach to drug education may be too negative.

"From what I've seen of film clips, he casts doubt, he plays upon the anxiety of the parents. The one thing I don't want to do is to kill people's initiative. I'm more concerned with the kids who are not really using drugs.

"Basically most parents need reassurance, faith in themselves, faith in their child.

"Just because there are dangers out there in the world doesn't mean their children are into them."

Mr. Atkinson pointed out after the sermon that he did not ask parents to keep their children home or to boycott the program. He said the concerned citizens group that worked for over a year to bring Toma to town as the first phase of a program that will be integrated into the school system next year should be complimented for their energy and dedication.

He was also concerned because he, as a parent, received nothing in writing from the school system about the program which happened yesterday, Tuesday, and today, Wednesday.

Parents should be told about the program ahead of time so they could decide whether to let their child attend school that day.

"David Toma is a former police detective from the City of Newark, New Jersey, who amassed an impressive record of arrests primarily through the clever use of disguise. His story became well publicized through extensive press coverage, the publication of an autobiography and a television series, first under the name of 'Toma' and later, 'Barretta' which portrayed Toma's exploits as an undercover vice officer. In more recent years Toma has become known for his emotion filled harangues on drug abuse presented to school and college audiences," Mr. Atkinson said.

"Mr. Toma is an entertainer. If his past record is any guide, his performance will be filled with horror stories, psychological manipulation and intimidation and an ample supply of "street language." Presented as a motion picture, Mr. Toma's autobiography would receive at least an 'R' if not an 'X' rating for under the thin pretense of being a policeman's life story this book panders unashamedly to the prurient interest of the reader. 'Barretta' if you remember seeing it was not the kind of television program which you would encourage your children to view. But here, under the guise of a drug education lecture our children and young people will be exposed during school hours and with school approval to David Toma's verbal and psychological abuse.

"I object. I object to the use of fear and guilt in education whether with children or adults. I object to the use of sensationalism and shock to command attention. I object to the use of psychological manipulation and intimidation with an essentially captive audience. I object to the presentation as a role model, of a person, who seems to believe that vulgar language and a macho image command respect. But don't just accept my opinion. Consider the following observation taken from a recently published study by the Drug Abuse Council, a nationally based group founded in 1972 to act as a central clearing house for information on illicit drugs:

" 'This [horrors of addiction] approach to drug education failed. Reporting on the status of drug education efforts in Dealing With Drug Abuse, Wald and Abrams wrote on these early programs, [Virtually all experts now agree that such tactics have not proved effective. Indeed, in many cases, they have been counterproductive, causing disrespect, skepticism, and resistance to all advice on drugs.] Instead of frightening youth away from drugs, these early efforts made skeptics of many and often served to increase curiosity about illicit psychoactive substances.'

"I plan to attend Toma's lecture. It is important to know what our young people are seeing and hearing in school. My high school age daughters have been offered the option of attending school or not on the day the lecture is scheduled. They will no doubt attend as they are curious to see this 'celebrity' in action. With open communication before and after the lecture between parent and student, and with the option of not attending, I am confident that the negative potential of this experience can be minimized. Indeed, it may offer the students a taste of demogoguery which could be educationally valuable. Unfortunately, in a world where there are persons willing to exploit human fear and curiosity it will not be the first or the last time that our sons and daughters will come into contact with such a speaker. It is ironical none the less that this exposure will come under the heading of health education."

Barresi appointment

We want to publicly congratulate the new inspector general, Joseph Barresi.

We have read columns criticizing him in the Boston press, but after interviewing him we find him to be the sort of man we would trust to guard the chickens. He could spot a fox at 1,000 paces.

The most serious charge we've heard is that he is naive.

"I don't think we can ever stamp out all corruption. All we can hope is that we reach a place where the prior point (of corruption and waste) is lessened."

That was the allegedly naive inspector general talking.

Mr. Barresi is a man who refuses to let himself be pulled into public battles in the press. More power to him. It certainly shows he has the wisdom to know he would only lose something in the scuffle.

We hardly think it appropriate to level a charge against someone based on one comment made at a press conference.

Mr. Barresi has been an observer of politics long enough to lose his naivete, having worked for the Boston Municipal Research Bureau, a private organization that studies the city of Boston, for more than 20 years.

He should have a chance to begin his job in peace. No one has said the job of inspector general will be an easy one. No one knows what the job really entails, since it is a pioneer effort, first in the nation.

And he should be given the time needed to begin the job. It took almost a year to get an appointment to the $34,000 a year post, and it will probably take another year before the office can produce measurable results.

Investigating corruption and waste of public funds in the procurement of supplies and the construction of buildings is not something that can be handled with dispatch.

Mr. Barresi is ready to begin the slow process of restoring public confidence in government. He is ready to begin the task of ferreting out past corruption. And making it more difficult for fraud to happen in public life in the future.

It will take patience and perseverence to get results.

We wish him luck and good will.

A toast to Place

Congratulations and best wishes, Town Moderator David Place.

Cohasset's loss is the Air Force's gain.

David is forced to resign as town moderator now that he has been appointed general counsel to the Air Force.

Hope you don't gain much weight on those jelly beans they serve down in Washington, D.C.

McKinnon backs N.Y. casino study

Senator Allan McKinnon agrees with the recent report of the New York Attorney General which opposes legalized casino gambling.

"The Attorney General conducted a thorough and detailed examination and submitted a factual report on the impact of casino on law enforcement agencies, crime, the integrity of local and state government, and the casino influence on local and state government," according to the senator.

"The report's conclusion, like my own, is that casino gambling is not in our best interests, that the social costs of legalized casino gambling and the resultant disruption of our quality of life are too great to consider it a reasonable enterprise. What's more, the enormous increases in crime, the great demands on our law enforcement agencies, the intrusion of organized crime, the influence-peddling and other threats to the integrity of our local and state governmental institutions have proven serious and almost overwhelming problems where casino gambling is legal in locations where law enforcement has had a number of years to learn to cope with the casino industry."

The senator said the report documents the problems created by the existence of casino gambling. The report findings include:

1. Nevada leads the nation in crime and Atlantic City has experienced an astounding 171 percent increase in crime from the pre-casino period in 1977 to 1980. Crimes include prostitution, muggings, trickery, car thefts, arson, loan sharking, bookmaking and dope peddling.

2. Atlantic City's Police Department has been unable to cope with the rising crime in the wake of casino gamling.

3. The actual Atlantic City and Nevada experiences have conclusively demonstrated that legalized casino gambling, by its very nature, creates an environment in which crimes of all types will flourish.

4. There has existed and continues to exist an incestuous relationship between the casino gambling industry and organized crime.

5. Pressures exerted on government officials and institutions have been relentless where casino gambling has been legalized.

6. Several officials, federal, state and local, were implicated in efforts to influence decisions relating to issuance of casino permits in return for favors.

7. New Jersey officials have expressed shock at the speed with which the casino industry has become the dominant force in Atlantic City and County Governments.

8. Enormous pressures have been placed on government officials to subvert and erode casino control mechanisms, and the state is plagued by rumors of payoffs to people in high places to secure preferential treatment in the areas of licensing and security.

"This is an important document in our assessment of the impact and social cost of casino gambling."

Senator McKinnon's office will make copies of the report available upon request.

McKinnon thanks

Senator Allan McKinnon wrote a letter to selectmen thanking them for "pushing auto insurance reform."

Beatrice Collins, 97 Lamberts Lane, wrote to the Board of Selectmen asking them to reconsider the street lights on her lane.

Making choices: kids take on the tough questions

By Susan Ovans

A young girl asks a friend about an unending series of bruises she's noticed on her arms and legs. The friend pleads a klutzy nature but the girl is persistent; she's seen her friend's mother slapping her. The girl admits to a problem but refuses to get help, protecting her mom and herself.

"She promised it won't happen again...."

The audience is caught up in the drama; silent, squirming, nodding. They understand. Unfortunately, some of them have been there.

The scenario is from a series of skits performed by the Youth Expression Theatre at last week's "Making Choices" Conference sponsored by the Cohasset Social Service League, the Coastline Council for Children, the Family Planning Service of the South Shore and the Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts. The seminar was held at the First Parish, Second Congregational and St. Stephen's Churches in Cohasset. More than 100 area teens showed up for the event, where participants were admitted with parental permission slip only.

According to Helen Hooper, Family Service Chairwoman of the Cohasset Social Service League, the conference was held to enable teens to make good choices of a wide variety of concerns such as smoking, sexuality, nutrition, drugs and coping with parental divorce, depression and violence.

"We wanted to give teens the tools for making decisions," she said. "We're not trying to tell them what to do."

Another skit: A boy and girl approach each other — simultaneously thinking out loud. "Will he notice me this time? Wow! There she is, second row, English. What do I say to her? Do I look o.k.?" They mumble a greeting and pass on.

There was a real response to the morning's performance of 15 skits by the Youth Expression Theatre, dealing with teenage concerns. The theatre troupe was formed three and a half years ago as a teaching aid of the Planned Parenthood League. The nine performers are all teenagers who design and act out the skits based on personal experience and conversations with others.

The skits deal with all manner of subjects including peer pressure, saying no to sex, parental divorce, alcoholism, drugs and rape. The scenarios portrayed were so real that the kids really opened up to the characters in a question and answer period held after the performance.

"Well, what did you do after you became pregnant? Where do you find help when your parents drink too much? Did you ever tell your parents that you were raped?"

A young girl sitting behind me while viewing a skit said softly, "I feel exactly like that sometimes."

Prior to the conference, there had been reports that the event would be the target of a demonstration by a Pro-Life group. Although the demonstration never came to pass, a few women showed up and were seated through the theatre performance. Afterwards, they were asked to leave because the next segment was given over to group workshops, and the event sponsors felt that the kids would not be able to speak freely with adults other than the group leaders present.

A Hingham resident who asked not to be identified said that she was reluctant to leave but would do so, after seeing a copy of a questionnaire sponsored by the Disease Control Center. The questionnaire dealt with teenage sexuality, asking teens about their knowledge of sexual facts, attitudes and current sexual activity. The questionnaire is part of a national survey; those filling out the form did so voluntarily, anonymously.

Joy Robinson-Lynch of the Family Planning Services explained the sponsors' position in asking adults to leave: "The conference was for kids, it was not appropriate that adults be there." She pointed out that the sponsors had held a parents' night in Hingham last month to "give parents the skills to talk with their kids who attended the conference. It's important for parents to discuss their values with their kids. This should be an ongoing discussion."

During the afternoon, kids had an opportunity to participate in a health fair to learn about services available in their area; i.e., the Smokers Workshop, the Hull Teen Clinic, the South Shore Council on Alcoholism and the Nutrition Education Center. The balance of the seminar was spent in small group discussion.

A final scenario: A 16-year-old girl sits down for a heart to heart with her mom. The girl is searching for information, hesitant, stumbling over her words. Her mom ruffles through her newspaper and either doesn't hear or refuses to hear the unasked questions. The phone rings and the moment is gone.

The girl approaches her favorite teacher, asking for referral to a birth control clinic. The teacher refuses to get involved. "I could get fired," she says. No information. Two months later, the girl becomes pregnant.

Five girls in the back row shake with emotion. They are also pregnant.

According to statistics released last month by New York's Guttmacher Institute, they are not alone. Today, one of six babies born in the United States is born to a teenage mother. If current trends continue, four of ten girls will experience at least one one pregnancy while in their teens.

The statistics are startling, the problems complex. For Alice Verhoeven of the Planned Parenthood League, seminars like "Making Choices" are a first step. "People are rightfully concerned and scared about the problems facing teens, it's not so simple anymore. We need to take a very realistic look at what's happening. Hopefully, we will meet the needs of parents and their kids."

Dogs

office.

"And it's the ones that aren't licensed that give the most trouble. People who worry about their dogs aren't the troublemakers. The names of people who registered a dog last year but not this year will be turned over to county officials next month for further action.

Those people will all get a postcard reminding them their dog needs to be relicensed. People who don't heed the warning may be fined $15.

Of course any dog spotted loose, without a license may be picked up by the dog officer.

Records supplied by the town clerk's office document a pattern of decreasing licenses. No one seems to know why.

One thought is that there are a lot of new people in town — but then they get the message in the water bills.

Another idea is that court action has been lax in the past. But it was no more strict back before the decline.

And then there is the concept that the poor economy may be keeping some people from licensing their dogs. But the fee is only $3 to $5.

Court costs of court case still unknown

Town officials have no idea what it has cost them to date to try to keep Lowry and Diana Bell from building their tennis court.

The town accountant's office says no bill has come in. The selectmen's office says no limit was ever placed on the amount of money to be spent defending the town's position.

Why is there a special town counsel from the Boston law firm of Burns and Levinson?

The selectmen's office says it's because town counsel (normally Blake Thaxter and associates) will be called as a witness in the suit brought by the Bells against the town. The suit was filed last fall, after the town went to court on complaint of the neighbors on Gammons Road, halting construction of the Bell's tennis court.

"Actually town counsel said he'd rather get somebody else to handle the case before then," Arthur Clark, former chairman of the board of selectmen, remembers.

"The Bells were saying town counsel was biased against them."

Fees for the Boston law firm vary, according to the person handling the work. Partners earn more per hour than associates. No one at the law firm would quote the firm's rates this week, explaining that information could only come from the senior partner who was in court.

Selectmen briefs ...

Selectmen commended Peter Laugelle of the Tree and Park Department for the excellent job he has done in trying to control the gypsy moths.

Chief John DeBassio informed the selectmen that the KoKo Island Restaurant, the former Ground Round, must apply for a new liquor license and not a transfer. A request was tabled for an application for liquor license.

The Chief informed the selectmen this week he had arranged for the purchase of two police cars within budget application and without bidding to be available after July 1 and his recommendation was accepted.

Selectmen accepted the appointment this week of Patricia Sargent of Cohasset as a Special Police officer.

around town

☐Donald W. Pratt, Jr. of 429 South Main St. graduated from Babson College last month.

☐Among the local students who received associate degrees from Massasoit Community College are Sue Boardman, Kathleen Palimeri, Ruthann Sargent and Barbara Taylor.

☐Amy Murphy, who is 17 and will be a senior at Cohasset High next year, has been riding since she was eight years old. She's now in training with J. Michael Plumb, Captain of the U.S. Equestrian Team. She keeps her horse at Stonehenge Farm in Dover. Every day after school she puts the mount through her paces.

Amy's been training her "green" horse, which takes anywhere from two to three years. She is now competing in three events, dressage, cross country and stadium jumping. She enjoys three day eventing rather than just dressage, which she did last year.

Although she loves her intense training, Amy does miss having the time to spend on school sports and activities. She belongs to the Pointer Club, out of Weston and she has a class B rating. This summer she'll be in combined training. Her next show is June 14 in Medfield.

☐Lynn Edminster and Brian Atwood were married Saturday, June 6 at the Unitarian Church. The reception was held at the Lothrop House, the first one held there in over 100 years. They're planning to live in San Francisco.

☐Happy birthday to Charlene Jones.

☐Adele and Dutchie Lawrence arrived in Golden, Colorado just in time for a week of snowstorms at the beginning of May. They were there visiting their son, Paul, and his wife, Joan. It was a special visit since Peter, their grandson, was having his first communion. Peter and his brother David also had a school competition, with both winning prizes. Peter first in the long jump, David coming in second in the three-legged race. Adele did all the posters for the field day and Dutchie helped with coaching.

☐Carolyn Pratt celebrated her first birthday recently.

☐Andrea Burke's family gathered from all over the country to attend her graduation June 5 from Milton Academy. Andrea was editor of the school paper "The Milton Measure" and valedictorian of her class. She plans to attend Harvard University in the fall.

☐Members of Den 2, Pack 38 wanted to show their appreciation for being able to hold their weekly meetings all year at the Cohasset Community Center and so they donated one afternoon, recently, in cleaning up the play area.

It was hard work but everyone agrees that the results were worth it. Den Leader Margaret Webber and Assistant Leader Sheila Wilson were both pleased with the way the boys cooperated and worked together as a team on the project.

Five-year-old Steven Harrington munches a snack at Osgood School.

☐Connie Parker made news last summer for getting a parking ticket in front of her own house. She went to court last week to find that the charges had been dropped. Connie, who is President of the Cohasset Historical Society, is relieved she doesn't have to go to jail.

☐The Cohasset Dramatic Club held their yearly meeting last week and has elected Flo Kelley president. The plays that have been selected for the next season are "Table Manners," "A Man For All Seasons," and "Philadelphia Story." Betty Messner is heading up the membership drive. Anyone interested in participating should get in touch with her.

☐Some friends of Arthur Clark's arrived a week late for his retirement dinner.

☐Sally Avery has sent out questionnaires from the Osgood School about the menu and is waiting for the replies.

☐Maria MacCarthy, secretary to the Board of Appeals, is looking around for someone to replace her. Anyone interested in the job should call her at the town hall.

☐Two Cohasset matrons got lost in Whitney Woods last week for four hours, they were following an old Mariner map. After wandering hither and yon and not running into anyone except unfriendly mosquitoes they ended up at Jim Tyeryar's Dump. Rescued at last.

☐Fred Hansen has retired from the South Shore Mirror.

☐Tanna Kasperowicz and her sons, Peter and Tad, have recently returned from Pennsylvania where they were visiting Tanna's mother and father.

☐Melissa Rousseau read her poem over the loud speaker at the Deer Hill School picnic last week. She was only a little nervous.

☐John and Mary Muncey, proprietors of Harbor Liquors, have planted a garden on the tiny strip of land next to the store. The lettuce is probably already for picking, they also have tomatoes and radishes. But keep out of the garden.

☐Brian, Monica and their daughter Cara McKenney rode their bikes down to the beach on Sunday. A respite from working on the house they've been renovating by themselves. They figure the house will be done in about fifteen years.

Pratt honors 5 library volunteers

By Karin Bartow

Five dedicated volunteers who have given ten or more years service to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library were honored at a luncheon last week. The Friends of the Cohasset Library, who hold the annual luncheon to thank all library volunteers, singled out Ursula Connors, Betty Eaton, June Hubbard, Florence James and Janet MacClure for their commitment to the library.

David Chittim, chairman of the board of trustees of the library, introduced and thanked the honored guests, saying that the library couldn't function without them.

Library volunteers, who in 1968 came under the organizing umbrella of the Friends, perform valuable and needed services. They man the front desk, checking books in and out, work on files and select and deliver books to Cohasset nursing homes and shut-ins.

Richard Hayes, librarian for the past 13 years, said last week that he is pleased with the success of the volunteer program and is particularly grateful for the assistance of conscientious people like the five honored. He commended all the volunteers who are remarkably faithful to their jobs, which he said, fill needed positions.

Betty Eaton, who also serves as a trustee of the library, stressed the need for support of the volunteers' work which is more important than ever post Prop. 2½ cuts. An English literature major in college, she said, "The library really interests me more than anything else." Connors and Hubbard serve on the board of the Friends and all five share a deep interest in books.

Hubbard finds the library a good place to keep up with what's going on in town. "It's really a fun spot and sort of like a big family."

"You really feel you are contributing to the economy of the town," MacClure says. Volunteers work as many hours a week as one-and-a-half staffers. MacClure also finds the library a pleasant place to work. "The staff is very helpful," she says.

"I am always amazed at the things they will do to help people!"

The five women honored for their service epitomize volunteering as Hayes views it: "The idea of volunteering for public service should be defended vigorously. The service of these volunteers is just as valuable as if they were hired to do a job."

Miss Piggy, Big Bird aid reading program

"Miss Piggy Wants You!" is the theme of this year's Summer Reading Program at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Readers will be welcomed by an enormous Big Bird who is presently in great need of feathers! As each child reads 10 books another feather with the child's name will be added.

The object of the summer reading program is to keep children reading through the summer months — reading for pleasure, for information, to expand their reading background, and to keep sharpened their reading skills.

In addition to befeathering Big Bird, each child who reads 10 books will receive a reading certificate. Those who read 20 books are given a free paperback book. These paperbacks are a special collection purchased for the annual program by the Friends of the Library.

Marilyn Pope and Jo Ann Mitchell, children's librarians, will be available to assist children with their selections. Reading cards to record titles may be picked up in the Children's Room. The program begins June 19 and continues through September 11.

The spring sports highlights

By Rob Tis

The highlight of the spring season was the state tournament berth gained by both the boys and girls tennis teams as well as the golf team.

The boys tennis team finished with a 10-2 record and faced Dimon Vocational High School in the first preliminary round. The Skippers breezed through this match 3-2. Scoring victories for the Skippers were both doubles teams, made up of Joe Whelan and Rob Tis and the second doubles team of Paul Riley and Jason Gill. Shannon Collins also defeated his opponent 6-4, 6-3 to push the Skippers ahead to victory.

The very next day, Friday, the Skippers faced Bishop Feehan, who had knocked off the number one seed in the tournament, Sharon, the day before.

The Skippers, however, were no match for Bishop Feehan as they dropped the match 5-0. This score, however, does not reflect the true efforts of the team. Shannon Collins took his opponent three sets, but lost in the end. Mike Brady lost a tough tie breaker, and Geery White played top notch tennis. But as fate would have it, the Skippers lost but they can still console themselves with the fact they were one of the 32 best teams in the state.

The boys team will be losing three quality players this year. Gerry White, who has played on the team since he was in eighth grade, was the co-captain in his junior and senior years. Joe Whelan, a four-year man on the team, will also be leaving. Joe was one of the best doubles players at CHS and along with his partner was elected to the all league tennis team.

Jason Gill who transferred from Norwell will also be leaving this year. Jason proved to be a needed addition to the team. Next season, however, there will be a younger group to carry on.

The girls tennis team traveled all the way down to southern Massachusetts to face Seaconk. The girls took this match 3-2. Sue Dalrymple won a first singles and Mia Graham won at second singles. The doubles team of Dianne Mullen and Karen Murphy also won, giving the Skippers the victory.

Next, the Skippers faced a powerful team, Attleboro. The Skippers went down tough, however, losing 3-2, getting their strength from their doubles team of Murphy and Mullen and Krissie Ralph and Diana Heintz.

The Skippers are not losing any starting seniors. This team will be a force to be reckoned with next year. The entire starting lineup of Sue Dalyrmple, Mia Graham, Joy Pratt, Dianne Mullen, Karen Murphy, Dianna Heintz and Krissie Ralph.

Cohasset will be the team to beat in the South Shore League next year.

The recreation report

By John Worley

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for Summer Playground programs from 9 a.m. to noon, only, from Tuesday, June 23, through Friday, June 26, in the town hall lobby.

Again this season there will be two programs: a half day program for children four years old as of April 1, and five year olds. A registration fee of $6 for one child, and $12 for two or more children in the half day program will be charged. The fee covers the entire eight week program.

There will be an $8 fee for one child and $12 fee for two or more children for the 6 to 12 year old, full day (9 a.m. to 3 p.m.), program. This fee also covers the eight week season which begins Monday, June 29, at Osgood School, and will end on Friday, August 21.

Program formats will be much the same as last year, offering a variety of recreational, educational programs, and activities as well as a number of special events. Kurt Rever will again be the Playground Head Instructor.

YOUTH TENNIS PROGRAM

Registrations for Youth Tennis (ages 8 to 18) will be accepted at the town hall between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m., Tuesday, June 23, through Friday, June 26.

There will be an $8 fee per person for the eight week program. Classes will be offered in all levels of instruction from beginners thru advanced. Jeff Ladd will be the head instructor assisted by Shannon Collins. The program will meet on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule, keeping Fridays open for special clinics, tournaments, etc. Classes will begin on Monday and Tuesday, June 29 and 30, continuing for eight weeks thru August 21.

OTHER SUMMER RECREATION

A variety of programs will be conducted again this summer as well; the Thursday evening movies at the town hall, band concerts on the Common, and other special activities. A six page flier depicting the summer programs and schedules of events will be available at the Recreation office during the week of June 22.

For other information you may call the recreation office at 383-6791 from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday.

Garden Club plans fund raiser

Plans are under way for the Cohasset Garden Club's annual fundraiser, this year expanding from a plant and food sale to include members' donations of treasures and trifles of myriad description. Planned for Saturday morning, June 20, on the grounds of the Unitarian Parish House on Cohasset's Historic Common, this year's sale promises to be bigger and better than ever.

Along with the accustomed delectables from members' kitchens and a selection of plant materials, homegrown, will be a variety of items for sale, running the gamut from art, jewelry, china and glass to small household bric-a-brac and appliances and, of course, books.

General chairmen for the Club's annual fundraiser are Mrs. George Rabstejnek and Mrs. Frederick Garrison. Others helping them are: food: Mrs. John Howe and Mrs. Samuel Wakeman; plants: Mrs. John Hubbard; linens: Mrs. William Russell; art: Mrs. Thomas Williams; jewelry and antiques: Mrs. Allen Weisenfluh; toys: Mrs. Robert Jordan, Jr. and Mrs. Timothy Marsac; special champagne preview: Mrs. Richard Yake and Mrs. Charles Higginson.

Proceeds realized from this sale will go toward the club's civic planting projects in the town of Cohasset, which in the past have included planting, design and maintenance of the Historic House Gardens in Cohasset Village, planting and design of plantings of shrubs and trees at the Joseph Osgood School, and design and plantings at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The Cohasset Garden Club is a member of the Council of Garden Clubs of the town of Cohasset, and in that capacity, this year, took responsibility for planting of the traditional red geraniums at the site of the war memorial for Memorial Day exercises. The Cohasset Garden Club is also a member of the Garden Club of America and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

French, exercise, baton classes at CCC

An opportunity to become acquainted with the French language and culture is being offered by the Cohasset Community Center this summer.

Registrations are being accepted for the six week program which will meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 8:30 p.m. from June 22 to August 3.

The cost for the course is $25.

The Community Center will also reoffer sessions for two courses in Exercise for Fitness and Fun and Baton.

The exercise course, taught by specialist Joanne Sheppard, aims at slimming and trimming while achieving aerobic efficiency. Two different programs are available during the three week course. The first meets from 9 to 10 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursdays for $13.50. The second session meets from 9 to 10 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at a cost of $20.25. Both sessions will begin during the week of June 22.

Baton Champion Helen Phinney has rescheduled her classes to 5 p.m. on Thursdays for the next session in order to avoid the heat of the day. The cost for the hour classes which will run eight weeks is $24. Classes are scheduled to begin on Thursday, June 25.

SPINAL SCREENING
AT THE
FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC
JUNE 2 through JUNE 30

1. Head tilt
2. High shoulder
3. Low scapula
4. Spinal curvature
5. Low hip

Potential Danger signals of Irritated Nerves:

- Headaches, dizziness, blurred vision
- Neck pain, tight muscles, spasms
- Shoulder pain, pain down arms, numbness in hands
- Pain between shoulders, difficult breathing, abdominal pains
- Lower back pain, hip pain, pain down leg

Family Practice of Chiropractic is offering spinal check-ups and postural analysis for early detection of back problems.

TIME magazine says 75 million Americans have backache, and with each passing year, this astronomical figure grows by 7,000,000.

Backache has become a catastrophic issue with the insurance companies and with our national economy. It is one of the top claims for disability. In addition to this, arthritis and rheumatic complaints affect 77 percent of our adult population, and every year millions sustain severe neck injuries from automobile collisions.

With the use of a few simple painless tests we will be able to determine the condition of the spine. Early detection of back problems is the best prevention for future back ailments.

The spinal screening will be offered without charge or obligation, at the

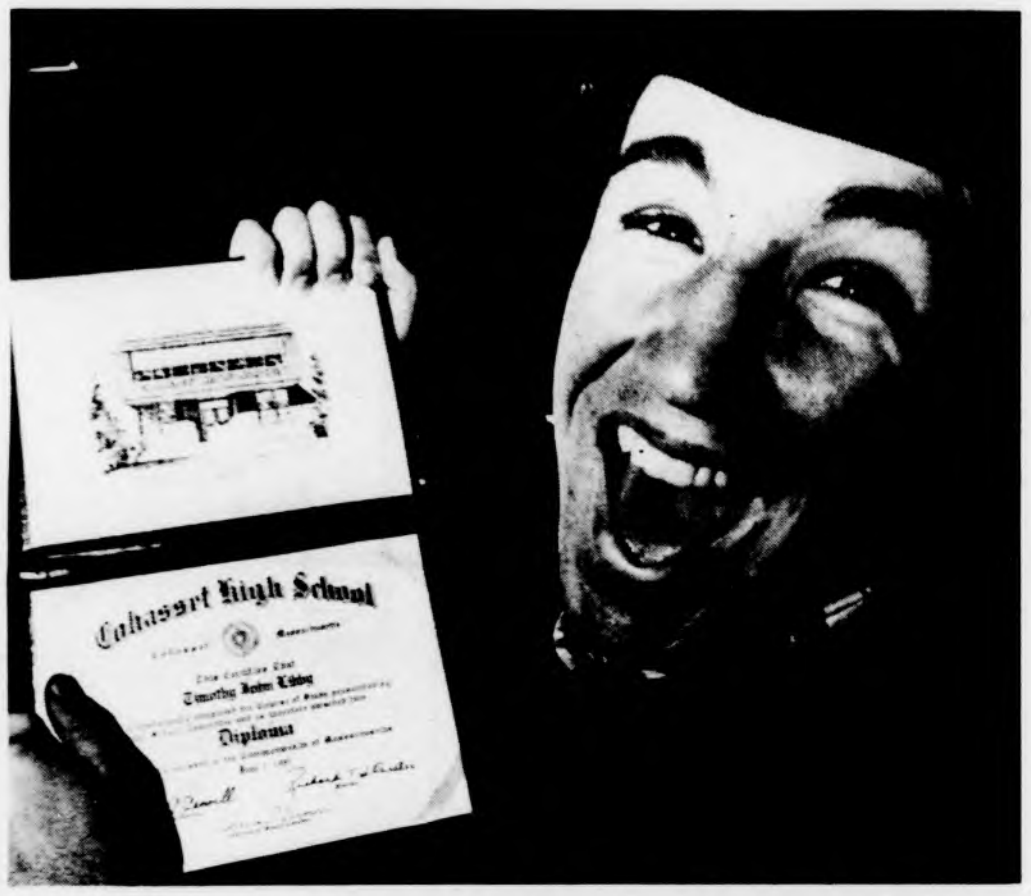
TO THE TUNE OF BEGINNINGS — Steven D'Onofrio, who will be president of next year's senior class at Cohasset High School, marshalls this year's graduates, all 146 of them, into the tent at the South Shore Music Circus Sunday.

UNDER THE TENT at the Music Circus Irene Brown, School Committee Chairman, awards Mike Jones his diploma.

CHS Graduation

AWARD WINNER — Charles Stockbridge accepts a police association scholarship from Sgt. Richard Barrows, president of the police union, during graduation ceremonies. Charles' father is Lt. Charles Stockbridge.



JUBILATION — Tim Libby fails to hide his happiness as he shows off his high school diploma.

Many fans look like Hunter, but none lasts like Hunter.

Hunter is made like no other fan. Solid cast iron, packed wall-to-wall with a one-of-a-kind ceiling fan motor of aluminum, copper and steel. No plastic. No shortcuts. Hunter Fans can cut your summer cooling costs up to 40%, and save in winter by re-circulating warm air off the ceiling.

Many imitations have been made to look like Hunter. But no other ceiling fan has been made to last like Hunter.

Inspector General Joseph Barresi

"I want to assemble a high quality staff. I'd like to get a good financial investigator, probably an accountant, secondly." 'In hiring the staff, the inspector general is not subject to civil service laws or collective bargaining. He's already getting applications.

"It's true I'm not a criminal investigator," Mr. Barresi said. "The job doesn't require I be one. My ability is to get a good staff and to motivate them."

He said he decided to grant a few interviews so people could see what kind of man he is.

"Once the operation gets going, I'm going to become a monk," he said, pointing out the laws on confidentiality require secrecy while investigations are underway.

"I want the people to believe and have faith that I will do the job."

He said that given human frailty, he doubts if it would ever be possible to end corruption.

He said what he was trying to tell people at the press conference when he talked about the extent of corruption in public life is that there are indeed many public officials, people in public life, who are honest.

"The Ward Commission found a pattern of corruption that permeated public life," he said. "A lot of people are expecting something will change with the establishment of my office.

"I'm not going to disappoint that expectancy."

The Barresi family has lived in Cohasset for 20 years. Joseph and Velma Barresi moved into the house they still own on Brewster Road when the neighborhood was still undeveloped. The house was under construction when they bought it.

It's the house where they've raised their children. Paul, at 19, is a sophomore at Cornell University. He graduated from Milton Academy. Cia, at 15, will be a junior next year at Cohasset High School.

Mr. Barresi said his neighbors seem to wave more often now that he's been named inspector general.

'I've been kidded a lot," he said. "What they usually say is something like: 'Congratulations and maybe condolences.' "

His background is on the edges of polictical life. From 1953 to 1962, he was assistant director of the Boston Municipal Research Bureau, a private organization that studies Boston government. From 1962 to 1975 he was the executive director. After that he worked for Scudder, Stevens and Clark, an investment firm. He analyzed municipal credit. He left that job in April and was looking for work when he applied for the inspector general slot. He is a consultant to the Boston City auditor.

Mr. Barresi said he would have his agency investigate the unfinished business of the Ward Commission, investigating past instances of fraud and corruption.

But he sees another important goal as making changes in the system to lessen the likelihood of corruption.

"I see my role as reducing to a minimum this pattern (of corruption and waste) to a point where the public perceives this totality."

He said the present public attitude of cynicism and alienation is unfortunate. He said the Ward Commission documents the problem of corruption with a detail he is still studying.

Mr. Barresi will hold the job for five years. He will run the office with near autonomy during that time.

He will be the first inspector general in the nation. There have been inspectors general for the federal government in the past.

Register for Scituate road race

The Annual Scituate 10 Kilometer Classic Road Race will be held Sunday, July 5 at 10 a.m.

Coca Cola is sponsoring the race and it is being hosted by the Jolly Tinker Athletic Club.

Entry fee is $5 and the runners will be limited to the first 800 applicants — no post registrations.

The master of ceremonies will be Tony Reevis from "The Running Digest." Times will be displayed on a digital clock.

T-shirts go to all entrants, certificates to all finishers.

Balloons for the children, flowers for all female winners, and the race will be video taped.

Applications are available at various South Shore retail outlets or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to J.T.A.C. Race Committee, P.O. Box 575, Scituate, MA 02066.

June 10, 1981

Introduction

It's the summer of '81. And you'll never get to see it again. So use it wisely. Make the most of it.

This year, we suggest you vacation in your own hometown ... or at least close by.

We have the unique privilege of living by the sea. And while thousands of other people need make elaborate and costly arrangements to be near the ocean, our access is at best a scant few miles away.

So within a hair's breadth of our homes is a means to go sailing, boating, fishing, swimming, wading, sunbathing. Or take to the woods. We have plenty of those... for hiking, birdwatching, bicycling, camping, picnicking.

Or maybe you're an antique buff who hankers for tours of grand old buildings. Take your pick.

And, if you're a fan of fairs, art shows or concerts, include those in your summer schedule.

A travel agency would be hard put to match the offerings of our area in this Summer of '81. Starting with your own back yard, make of this season a wholesome, fun, outdoor experience for you, your family and your friends.

Focus on Summer here on the South Shore.

TOP OF THE CATCH TO YOU!

The picnic basket

By Joan Pinkham

Pack a lunch of wine, cheese, fruit and bread and head for the woods or shore. Break out the fishing pole, get out your back pack, or make for the beach. No matter if there's a few grains of sand in your lemonade, if the ants are parading through your feast, or you forgot the napkins — everything tastes better out of doors. Here's a pleasant way to start with a

WHITE WINE SPRITZER

In a tumbler filled with ice cubes combine 3/4 c. dry white wine, 1/4 c. club soda (or to taste) and a twist of lemon peel. Makes one drink.

Each picnic needs only the best of early summer's produce, a little organization and skill at packing a hamper just so. Then off you go. Take your picnic to the woods, or go no further than your own porch or backyard. Stretch out your blanket and arrange yourself. It is summer! The sky is blue, the sun is pleasing and all's right with the world, particularly if you're munching on one of these

BAKED CRUMBED DRUMSTICKS

In a large ceramic or glass bowl combine 1 c. sour cream, 3 T lemon juice, 1 large garlic clove, minced, and Tabasco, salt and pepper to taste. Add 4 pounds chicken drumsticks (about 24), skinned, tossing them to coat them with the mixture and let them marinate, covered, at room temperature for at least one hour or chilled overnight. In a shallow bowl combine 2 c. ground saltines, 2 T minced fresh thyme, or 2 tsp. dried mustard, 1½ tsp. salt, or to taste, 1 tsp. sweet paprika, 1/4 tsp. cayenne and pepper to taste. Roll the drumsticks in the crumb mixture shaking off any excess and arrange them 1'' apart on buttered baking sheets. Drizzle the drumsticks lightly with melted unsalted butter and bake in 375 degree oven for 35 min., or until they are golden brown and tender. Arrange the drumsticks in a napkin-lined basket, garnish with sprigs of parsley and serve 8.

When the dog days of summer arrive and the humidity thickens and the air is sultry, light meals are all we fancy. Forgotten are winter's hearty stews and the homemade soups that simmered on the wood stove. These same nourishing soups can be made tempting when served cold and when we savor something cool, the answer is

Cut enough well washed leeks (about 3) into paper-thin slices to measure 2½ c. In a heavy saucepan sweat the leeks in 3 T unsalted butter, covered with a buttered round of wax paper and the lid, for 5 min., or until they are softened. Remove the pan from the heat. Peel and grate coarse enough potatoes (about 1½ lbs.) to measure 4 c. Add them to the pan with 3 c. tinned chicken broth, bringing mixture to a boil and simmering the liquid for 20 min., or until the potatoes are soft. Puree the mixture through the fine disk of a food mill into a bowl and stir in 2 c. half-and-half cream and salt and pepper to taste. Chill the soup, loosely covered, for at least four hours. Ladle into chilled soup plates and sprinkle with snipped fresh chives. Serves 4.

Appetites that flag on land seem to revive as if by magic when out of the bounding main. The salt air transforms the simplest meal into a feast and the picnic basket that we lugged down to the dock is far lighter on the return trip. When Norma and Louis Reder were cruising aboard a chartered ketch in the Grenadines last spring, the 45 ft. boat was equipped with a stove and oven and the "Sunbird's" skipper's wife was an excellent cook. Luckily for us, Norma jotted down some of the recipes and has taken the time to do the same for us. You don't have to be in a ship's galley to enjoy

SEAFOOD CURRY BY CORNELIA

2 T butter
1 onion, sliced
4 T flour
2 c. chicken bouillon
3 T lemon juice
1/4 tsp. ginger
3 T curry powder
Salt and ground pepper to taste
2 c. crabmeat
2 c. cooked shrimp
1 cuke, sliced

Melt butter in skillet. Add onion. Cook slowly. Blend in flour. Add bouillon. Stir and cook till smooth and thick. Stir in lemon juice, ginger, etc. Heat and serve over rice.

A QUICK AND DELICIOUS SOUP

Mix together cheddar soup and asparagras soup, a l'il milk (Cornelia used condensed on the boat), a l'il thyme, nutmeg and ginger and sliced scallions, if desired.

CORNELIA'S CHICKEN

6 chicken breasts [boned is better]
Salt
Curry powder
2 T Grand Marnier
1 large can frozen orange juice, thawed

Sprinkle chicken with salt and curry powder to taste. Place in large casserole. Mix Grand Marnier with orange juice and pour over chicken. Bake, covered, 1½ to 2 hours in 325 degree oven. Serves 4. Serve with rice.

Focus on summer favorites

By Lois Martin

Summer's our favorite. We wait all year for it, speak fondly of it in December, wistfully of it in February and impatiently for it in April.

But in New England we're funny. We'd go along with Shakespeare who said, "Sweets grown common oft lose their delight." We appreciate summer 'cause it comes to us in small doses after winter stays too long. And sometimes our summer becomes overbearing with humidity, but we forgive that fault.

Because packed into those few sun-gilded months are these special treats, on which we focus as summer's especial favorites:

PATCHES

— the smell of wild strawberries when the sun hits the field.

— an altogether fresh fish caught by an amateur fisherman who vastly overestimates its value, considering he probably spent $40 in gas trying to catch it.

— a sunburn on my shoulders and on my nose, even a little peeling as proof of a day spent outside, probably with friends, who always look even better in the sunshine.

— bright colors.

— a dight of sand in the bathtub that didn't drain, rather than between the sheets.

— beach plum jelly, made and presented by a beach plum expert, who isn't happy till someone has local color on morning toast.

— no pantyhose, and legs that don't look attic white.

— flowers, everyone of them, more so if they'd grow in my yard, bouquets in the house, with one smack in the middle of the kitchen table, because they're proof of creation, creativity and the Creator.

— getting two flies in one swat.

— a hot dog that's been overcharcoaled, so it's black and crispy and you can eat it with your fingers.

— the car window open so the dog can put his head out and I can smell cedar when we drive past patches of those trees.

— being one of the first on the beach in the morning, establishing a private relationship with the ocean that day, finding a harmony of sorts with the strength and consistency of the tide.

— berries, all of them, with raspberry pie the number one goal, and a shot at picking wild ones in the thunder brush where you scratch your legs and battle bees (only once a summer).

— use of generous friends' swimming pool, as well as their comaraderie and a chance to steal a few of their string beans for raw and immediate consumption.

— a lingering, unhurried evening to watch the conclusion of the day.

— a hammock by the shore where, when you close your eyes, you can hear the waves and the gulls.

— our lobsters, as many as are affordable, in too much melted butter laced with lemon.

— sundresses with pizzazz.

— company for three days or until the clean towels are gone.

— the sight of a clamdigger bent over his hod in silent, relentless and privileged pursuit of the crustacean.

— the first and best batch of corn or watermelon or fresh peas or new potatoes (from Maine if you're any kind of a New Englander).

— the thought of fall, along about August when we realize how magnificent fall is around here ... amused awareness that without our seasons changing we won't either.

— June, to whom I take my hat off, who is welcome to replace March any time she feels like it.

Clift Rodgers Library news

BOARD MEMBER

The Board of Trustees is pleased to announce that Tod Forman has become a member. Dr. Forman is a Family Physician in Pembroke and writes on medical subjects. The rumor that he is also a minister has not been verified.

HOT CAKES

Books most in demand presently are the newest Dick Francis, the newest Robert Parker and ditto John MacDonald. Mystery time!

Our librarian found a book reviewed as "wickedly funny," "human characters" and ordered it confidently. The first reader brought it back saying, "A complete waste of time and the characters never came to life." Sigh. She is eager to hear your recommendations, wishes and comments, particularly as book prices climb.

SHOP TALK

New to the shop, a display of greeting cards, notes, recipe cards and savers from Current Cards, those cuties with the huggable animals and other fetching designs. Also in stock at this writing: 10 yards forest green bark cloth, a dictaphone, cotton towels and double bed sheets, several lace stoles, many dresses women's L, 18, 20, etc. Buyers have hailed this special rack, many more will be available at our June 6 sale of books, clothing, etc. beginning at 10 a.m.

LEAD BALLOON

Another Think Tank idea which has met with underwhelming reception: groups, clubs, etc. wishing to Make Money could ask members to donate clothing and bric-a-brac to be consigned in the name of the organization. If each member brought two or three items to the monthly meeting, and one volunteered to convey to the shop, we would co-operate to net that group some healthy checks. Opportunity knocks.

YUMMY

The Newcomers' Cookbook is becoming a standard reference. "Blue cheese dressing? Look it up in the Newcomers' book!" We have a few upstairs to sell; the given is that it is well worth the asking price.

REJECTS

Two aspects of: at their annual luncheon, the shop volunteers agreed unanimously that we would no longer attempt to save rejects and return them to owner. Articles with rips, stains, faded areas, missing buttons, soil, cracks, etc. will be donated straight to charity. "If you wouldn't buy it, don't try to consign it!"

And, a consignor says, "What gives? You refused my jacket, but here is one on the rack with a broken zipper?" Different volunteers make different decisions. Some refuse anything not perfect, others will accept a garment in excellent condition except for one repairable feature, and price it very low. What to do? Volunteer! Then you get to consign your own things. You can also join the clean-out sessions held on the first Monday of each month at around 9 a.m., when the group goes over the racks weeding out half-price, and items over two months old. Discards are available for your charity sale.

SUMMERTIME & KIDS

Friendly's is co-operating with the C.R. to produce a luscious, tempting summer reading project, minus tedious reports. Watch for details!

And, in the Consignment Shop is a typewriter we visualize as prime summer entertainment. For a low price, a family could turn to writing, youngsters could revive the neighborhood newspaper, preschoolers could pick out their names. Few items can so stimulate youngsters as access to a typewriter! Ours awaits a fore-sighted opportunist!

Cohasset Police will take a dim view of kids jumping off the Mille River Bridge this summer.

Local summer recreation

By Bucky Yardume

Nobody short of Nostradamus can forecast with any degree of certainty whether it will be a long, hot summer. But what's for sure is that it's going to be duller for those who count on town recreational programs in all but one of the Mariner family's five communities.

At the risk of ruffling Barbara Anderson's feathers, the villain in the piece is Proposition 2½ which has seen sports and recreation programs in general and summer programs in particular emasculated or even eliminated entirely.

Those well-heeled, as usual, won't be put out that much. If you summer on the Cape or Islands or down Maine, ho-hum! While the price of marine fuel has escalated in proportion to gas for cars, if you have to ask the price per gallon, you can't afford a 60-foot yacht.

Members of country clubs...swim and tennis clubs...tennis and swim clubs...racquetball clubs... yacht clubs can take it all in stride.

For others, there are still seashore beaches, the North River and assorted ponds for swimming, beach bumming, fishing or boating in something less than a leviathan. Those refuges figure to be more heavily trafficked than ever with so much else missing.

A survey of the situation led to the following conclusion:

Only Cohasset will see summer recreational life go on pretty much as usual. The other Mariner towns — Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Hingham — are hurting to various degrees.

COHASSET

Recreation Director Jack Worley, who used to serve in that capacity in Marshfield, finds himself in an enviable position in Cohasset.

"Essentially, we haven't been hit at all," relates Worley. "The only change really is in reduced band concerts (those were held in July and August on alternate Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. on the Common). Our budget in that area was cut in half. We used to get seven concerts for the price for about only 2½. Now while there still will be concerts, how many exactly is up in the air."

Otherwise, the program is intact.

Worley has changed the playground program.

"We found that with a satellite setup we were spreading our instructors and energies too thin," Worley explains. "So we have concentrated efforts into a Day Camp type setup of two programs."

One is for 4-5-year-olds consisting of half a day from 9 a.m. to noon spanning eight weeks. The other three school playgrounds.

That's the playground staff consisting of town youth who counted on the work for income towards is for the 6-13-year-olds all day over the same time frame, both conducted at Osgood School.

Cohasset's sailing program is separate from the rest of the summer recreation, run by the Cohasset Sailing Club.

But Worley has plenty of other goodies going including some 20 different offerings running the gamut from tennis on.

Some highlights include a balloon flying festival... another for kite flying...and one that really has taken off in popularity — the sand castle building contest.

There even are movies Thursday nights at Town Hall.

NORWELL

In one way, Norwell is worse off than anybody.

Recreation Director Ron Ritchie resigned about two months back. While the job's been advertised, so far there have been no takers. No takers? There haven't even been any applicants as of last report. So the ship has no skipper for openers — a ship-rec. as it were.

As much of a problem as that is, however, Recreation Commission Chairman Sara St. Ours focuses on something which really doomed the summer playground program usually conducted at college and other expenses.

Norwell, like a lot of other towns, deferred financial articles on its March Town Meeting til June. The Advisory Board for openers chopped the budget in compliance with 2½. On top of that, Town Meeting is being asked to approve establishing a revolving fund to make programs self-sustaining. Anyway, just about everything was left in limbo. Consequently, the Commission couldn't go ahead and hire youngsters to run the playground programs even on its own without a director.

The Commission, Mrs. St. Ours says, still is hopeful it will be able to put on at least one playground program at Osborn School.

"But," she points out, "that's very tentative and also beset by problems. In the first place, the regular kids we hire to work all have gotten themselves other jobs. After all, they couldn't hang around waiting without any real assurance there even would be any work. So we have no trained people."

An alternative if the single program gets the green light is to hire work-study personnel. But they come at $3 an hour instead of the 75 cents per hour paid youngsters.

The sailing program on Jacobs Pond initiated last year by Ritchie with the purchase of a couple of boats looks to be definitely in dry dock, at least this year.

[See page 19]

Canoe trips up the serene North River in Norwell are worth the effort.

Local summer recreation

SCITUATE

Recreation Director Bob Drew sums up the Scituate situation succinctly.

"We were wiped out!" Drew declares.

There is hope, albeit slim.

"The Advisors are looking into the possibilities of putting on one, maybe two playground programs," explains Drew who until now ran four. "But we will be going into Town Meeting soon. We won't know if even that much is possible until then."

Two programs previously town-sponsored lost those auspices but survived.

Those are the sailing and tennis programs.

The Scituate Youth Center, a private, non-profit organization, has taken up the slack and is sponsoring both the sailing and tennis programs.

The town still is picking up the tab for lifeguards at the beach. But that hardly comes under the heading of recreation, only required protection for those whose recreation takes them to the seaside.

"Otherwise, we're dead!" Drew concludes. "At least for the moment."

MARSHFIELD

At the outset, the position of Recreation Director was voted out. But there was a hearing at which 200 some residents showed up demanding retention of the director and programs and Al Menice's post and funding was established permanently.

"We're in better shape than some towns," Menice assessed, although just what total funding will be is subject to Town Meeting action starting June 8 when establishment of a revolving fund to help make programs more self-sufficient also will be decided by voters.

Meanwhile, however, playground programs are set at four locations — Marshfield Hills, South River, Daniel Webster and Tower Acre.

Plus there is funding for a special needs playground at Camp Madayca conducted at the Governor Winslow School.

Programs will run six weeks from July 6 through Aug. 14.

Three other programs — swimming, tennis and gymnastics — however, are dependent on Town Meeting action relative to the revolving fund article. If it is approved, the programs will be held. Otherwise, they won't.

Sailing appears to be kaput. The one boat purchased two years ago is in need of repairs and even if the money were forthcoming, Menice doubts it could be fixed in time.

Finally, Menice has had applications from youngsters from both Norwell and Scituate looking for playground jobs since those programs were not up to their usual form or eliminated entirely in their communities.

HINGHAM

While the format is different, Hingham's summer recreation is in pretty good shape, according to Director Jean Gilbert.

"We are down to a single centralized playground program which will be held at the Central Junior High School and down from 41 employees to 12," relates Ms. Gilbert. "But frankly, that was going to come anyway, regardless of 2½. There simply wasn't the demand for neighborhood playground programs to justify the six separate programs that we had in the past. So centralization was bound to happen."

The single program will run for six weeks from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays and will include tennis, softball, all usual playground activities including special events and field trips.

The single program will run for six weeks from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays and will include tennis, softball, all usual playground activities including special events and field trips.

The cost is $10 per family but there is a discount incentive for those who sign up by June 22. They will enjoy a $3 savings paying only $7.

Swimming in Hingham is a separate entity from the regular Recreation system and comes under jurisdiction of the Trustees of the Bathing Beach of which Ms. Gilbert is a member. The lessons will be held but there again, the fee has gone up from $1 to $2.

Band concerts once sponsored by the Rec. Commission now are sponsored by other organizations in town and in addition to the traditional one the night of July 4th, there will be three or four others on dates to be announced.

The Rec. Department's Equitable Tennis challenge is slated June 6 and 7 and is open, not only to all ages but to entries from other neighboring towns as well.

Finally there is the Adventure Awareness program starting June 29 for ages 13-15 held at Bear Cove Park on the Back River with ropes, cycling, hiking, swimming and more scheduled for participants.

Joggers, not to worry! All they need is running shoes and a road. Oh sure, some get stylish in color-coordinated garb. But others are casual about it all.

Those content to play tennis on school, town and other courts still have that option but may find court demand almost as heavy as those of the legal variety.

One always can trek to Fenway Park and hope the Red Sox are up that day or night instead of down.

There is also Wompatuck State Park with hiking, biking, jogging, camping or just relaxing, even if it doesn't have a Norwell access road and is not what one would call an arena for the more physical kinds of recreation.

Or consider the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell but accessible and open to area residents, young and older with a multiplicity of programs if not athletic, both fun and educational.

One of the best bargains around is the local public library. To be sure, most are not immune from Prop. 2½, and reduced budgets have resulted in further cutbacks in normally reduced summer hours, staff, and even available materials. But there still remains a wealth of everything, and no one can contest that the price is right. If the physical must be included, you can get books on sports.

If all else fails, there's the tube. In view, though, of the usual summer parade of repeated reruns, tiddlywinks might be more exciting.

The fishing scene

Thanks to the bureaucrats, this could be an important year for the striped bass.

With the striper population declining in recent years, and everyone blaming everyone else for that decline, officialdom has decided to come to the rescue.

Marine fisheries management programs from Maine to North Carolina have come up with a new plan that calls for a daily bag limit of four stripers between 16 and 24 inches long. Anything under 16 inches is, of course, strictly verboten. There is no limit to the number of fish you can catch over 24 inches.

But that new bag limit of four stripers between 16 and 24 inches in now more than an idea in Massachusetts. It is the law of the Commonwealth and must be obeyed. Otherwise we can forget about this most magnificient of the game fish and concentrate on species like, ah, pollock and other swell fighters.

Very simply, the new law is designed to protect year-class stripers until they can mature and spawn. Female fish are usually fully mature at six years and about 26 inches. By protectting the smaller fish, we should see a 300 per cent increase in spawn potential and that dear friends means many, many more fish down the road.

If dressage is your thing, protecting the striped bass may seem trivial. But those who fish the salt understand otherwise, knowing that no game fish can equal the magnificience of the striped bass. It is the mystique fish of New England, and if your territory includes the Cape and the islands, nowhere is there better striper fishing in the world.

Catching the striped bass is not easy for the novice, nor should it be, but if you pay attention here are some hints that will help with the hunt.

First, June is a great month for striped bass. Schoolies — small bass — are most everywhere. Try small plugs, Rebels or bucktails, in Plymouth or Duxbury Bays and if they don't work, try drfiting with long seaworms. You can also troll with hoochies or plastic tubes. In the bays, fish the outgoing tides for best results.

Stripers will roam wherever there are bait fish and that means the entire coast is your hunting ground. The North River, particularly, the mouth will offer as much as anyplace on the South Shore, though you would do well not to overlook, the Green Harbor jetties, Hull Gut, the South River, Boston Harbor and the islands in the harbor.

Striper fishing around the harbor islands is often better at night. In Cohasset, check those boulders pushing through the surf and keep checking them. There are bass there.

Should you fail locally, try the Cape: Barnstable harbor, Billingsgate, the Race off Provicetown, off the Pamet River and in Buzzards Bay. The Canal will also produce but be careful not to lose plugs in the rocks. If those spots don't works, try the rips between Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket and if that fails, face it...you're a lousy fisherman.

Some people think we spend too much energy on the striped bass and though they are wrong, we do admit that other species are around that deserve attention.

Codfish, for example. Cod are a cold water fish that go deep in summer, but you can still

[See page 21]

Stripers, pollock, cod and an occasional bluefish can be yours from the Brant Rock jetty in Marshfield. Bring your surfcasting rod.

Yipes! Stripes!

Hank Bruckner caught himself a couple of bull stripers aboard the Big Fish II out of Green Harbor. June is one of the best months for striped bass fishing.

Fishing

catch your share in close...off Green Harbor, the North River mouth and the Glades. Pollock are everywhere and will often take the plugs you're trying to serve to stripers. Some horse (big) pollock have already been brought in.

Mackerel, scarce for a few years, are now abundant and are a fine fighting fish if you use light tackle. They will accept a seaworm, but mackerel jigs work best and produce good catches off High Pines (Duxbury Beach) and the Gurnet. Mackerel also make great bait for bluefish and big stripers.

Flounder are everywhere, as usual...Hingham Harbor, Quincy Bay, Duxbury Bay and the North River. Just use a piece of a seaworm on a small hook and get down on the bottom.

Bluefish aren't off the South Shore in big numbers yet but they will be shortly when the water temperature rises a bit. When feeding they'll take most anything but they're best when chasing popping plugs on top. (We'll go into more detail on the bluefish and other species when the Mariner's "Angler's" column returns next week.

For freshwater enthusiasts, we must report that the best trout fishing in locallly stocked ponds is over. You can find some brookies in the South River, Marshfield, and in Scituate's Bound Brook, but you'll do far better on the Cape which has some of the best trout fishing in Massachusetts.

Largemouth bass are almost through with their spawn and should begin feeding heavily again shortly. Rubber worms, jerked from the bottom, work well, and you should know that bass fishing is best in the evening at this time of year.

One of the best bets locally for largemouths is Jacob's Pond in Norwell. Fish around the island and bring a small boat or a canoe. There is no real boat ramp for trailers.

Pickerel are around and about and so too are horn pout and bluegills.

Good fishing and don't forget the "Angler's Corner" starting next week.

MULTIPLE LISTING SERVICE MLS

To horse!

By Peggy Beals

When we were young, a hobby was essential equipment. You were in a certain grade, had certain color eyes, and a hobby. It was as American as chocolate chip cookies. Adults had them, too. A big church in my town held an annual Hobby Show. Hundreds proudly displayed their coins, dolls, stamps, matchbook folders, model planes and trains, postcards, and collections of (oo la la!) pretty girl pictures from Esquire. An immensely popular show. What are today's hobbies? What does Marshfield make, save, collect, turn to, especially in summer? In fact, what is a hobby?

The Oxford English Dictionary says it is a favorite occupation or topic, pursued merely for the amusement or interest it affords, which is compared to the riding of a toy horse. This "hobby" horse comes from an old name for horses, same source as the name Dobbin for some horses. A hobby is an individual pursuit to which a person is devoted, sometimes, in the speaker's opinion, out of proportion to its real importance. Defenders say, "I quarrel with no man's hobby" said Scott, and "the pleasure of being allowed to ride is hobby in peace and quiet."

A sampling of citizens reveals many summer hobbies. Taking courses is one. Several families seek interesting courses at various educational institutions about, and persuade others to enroll and car-pool. The writing, photography and other courses aren't quite like real school and youngsters enjoy learning at the slower pace.

"Chauffeuring!" one mother says wryly, and another claims her kids specialize in the hobby of being pains in the neck. Perhaps some of the activities below would distract their attention.

A Hingham farm horse enjoys lunch in his stall.

One family looks for sports camps, channeling youthful energy into tennis, swimming and other muscle and skill building, tiring activity. A family built its own primitive sports back yard, including a miniature golf course with sunken soup cans, badminton, rope swings, and gymnastic equipment. It became a neighborhood magnet, imaginative and low cost. Our family used to have a dandelion stem contest, opened when someone pinned up a long stem with its measurements and challenged the others to beat that. Pockets of deep weeds were classified information, to be visited in casual, deceptive manner as they sought the ultimate long stem.

Other youth hobbies include elaborate Tonka truck play, and dirt bike excursions over the hidden network of trails linking all Marshfield legally, if you push across the highway, rather than zooming when no one is looking. Please wear a helmet. Dirt bikes and their kin appear to spend 25 percent of their time on the road and 75 percent being tinkered with, an absorbing pasttime.

Day trips are popular with families. Some seek area museums for special events or just to view the glass flowers, old autos, chinese artifacts. Edaville, Cranberry land and the historical sites in Plymouth are pleasant day journeys.

Kid gardens are good distractions. The obliging radish makes a satisfying first crop, preferably one of the milder kinds. Sunflowers may be encouraged to grow the biggest head, and pumpkins encouraged with faithful watering to grow one's own Jack. The Corse family used to put one of most kinds of plants in each youngster's little plot. Adult gardens spawn the gleeful hobby of gathering in mulch materials, noted as several matrons fought over some roadside bags of grass clippings.

The sea, the beautiful sea draws us. Many teens appear to summer on the seawall, or drape along the bridges, tots still work with buckets and shovels, their elders sun, gossip and bake. A grandmother cites making sand candles with the "grands," scooping out a neat hole and pouring in the very hot wax. Late winter's hysterics over Getting the Boat In, "nobody ever offers to help" say captains with Little Red Hen syndrome, all is forgotten as they glide over the water. An interesting poll might be taken to find how many wives will set foot on a boat captained by their spouses. "He turns into Blight (Queeg, or other mad captain).

The libraries draw many youngsters to special summer programs and their elders to seek "hammock" reading, the lighter, non-stimulating books which help the home-bound to escape chores, whines and bugs for a spell. A large jig-saw puzzle serves this purpose for others.

Ambitious adults pursue their needlework on porch and beach. Quilters choose the lap method, doing one square at a time rather than hunching over a big frame, and those who knit and crochet tote their string and implements about.

A major weekend hobby is "saling," as Nurit Bowman, sister of Deena Strauss Beals, calls it. Yard sales, garage, barn and rummage sales, the faithful make the rounds clutching a newspaper folded to the ads, asking each other where Summer St. is, where Ferry and Atwell, anything good there? and don't miss that one on Union, you won't believe that barn!

Quieter summer hobbies include the gracious Tuesday morning coffees at the historic Winslow House, combining sociable visiting with an interesting speaker. Or an occasional occupation of the late Miss Evelyn Cummings who would sit under her apple tree and "watch the world go 'round."

Late July brings the effort that rescues the mental health of Marshfield mothers, preparations for the Marshfield Fair. Enterprising youngsters, armed with a copy of the fair booklet (at the libraries) are madly gluing, sewing, baking, painting, polishing and agonizing over their creations, praying they are prize winners. Main St. explodes in August for that glorious, wonderful ten day riot of popcorn, cotton candy, horses, lights, rides, flies and trash. Exhibition Hall displays our productions for the critical view, and the disgruntled question the eyesight of the judges. We exalt, or drown our sorrows in another eating orgy.

Summer has wound down. We take a deep breath and reach for the brochures from the Y, the North River Arts, and night school to find what new hobbies we can pursue in winter classes.

South Shore's historical trails

By Joan Pinkham

Sometimes when word comes that company is coming — Aunt Mary or Uncle John — the question of how to entertain them arises. With the fervor of a cruise director, plans are made for jaunts to the Plimoth Plantation, the Freedom Trail, the top of the Pru and that tourist mecca, P-Town.

Summer in New England offers a tantalizing variety of scenic spots, historic sites and inviting shops. So that, after talking it over, the question seems not what to do, but how to find time to do everything.

News of an impending visit can cause near panic at the thought of keeping your guests entertained. And yet, you may be pleasantly surprised to find at the end of their stay there are still miles to go and places left unseen for want of time.

A ride around one's hometown is a pleasant introduction. So much to see!

Perhaps, like many of us, you'll have to bone up on local history. And a trip to the historical room of one's library is a must. On their shelves, you'll find fascinating tales of our early American tradition.

MARSHFIELD

Plan on a lengthy drive in Marshfield, a town that encompasses in its 28-square miles the historic Winslow house, Daniel Webster's law office, the Hatch Mill, cranberry bogs and old churches such as the First Congregational, first "gathered" in 1632. The triangle on the opposite side of Ocean St. was the town common years ago, where cattle were staked out for grazing in Colonial days. Now the scene of the church's annual fair in July, the "common land" was for the good of all and each farmer had a certain number of grazing rights allotted to him by the warden.

Driving in the opposite direction on Ocean St., at the junction of Rte. 139, one passes the handsome Memorial Park, not so handsome until after World War II when the 150-year-old mill was torn down. The weather beaten, sagging building was once a grist mill owned by another illustrious resident, Senator Daniel Webster.

Further along on the left at the junction of Cross Street is the former United Methodist Church parsonage, built in 1820 by Nahum Packard. One of many handsome colonial homes in Marshfield, trees on the property were used to build the sea captain's home, some 22" wide. The cost of building the stately colonial was $1,500.

You'll also want to view the gracious homes on Union St. in the Two-Mile section of Marshfield, formerly a part of Scituate. The Hills section is picturesque and a ride along Summer St. takes one past Seaview where sea captains built substantial homes.

The Rexhame area, now bustling with summer visitors, was once called the Eden of the region, with its groves of majestic oaks and walnuts. Along the waterfront to Brant Rock, scene of one of the worst fires in the nation in 1941, past the shopping center, one discovers Blackman's Point, site of the world's wireless experimental station where on Christmas Eve, 1906, the first overseas radio program was broadcast.

SCITUATE

Having gone full circle on a ride complete with glimpses of the sea and salt marshes, boats plying the waters, shady trees and open meadows, it's back to Rte. 3A. Travelling north, one crosses the North River Bridge into Scituate. This winding river, a national landmark, flows out to sea and is the site of boat yards where a thousand ships were launched in the days of wooden vessels.

At the lights in Greenbush, a turn to the left leads to the Old Oaken Bucket Homestead and Well made famous by Samuel Woodworth in his poem "The Old Oaken Bucket." Known the world over, the poem is also the official song of Scituate.

There are other old homes listed in a brochure prepared by the Scituate Historical Society, some dating back to the 17th century.

The Cudworth House and Mann Farmhouse are open to the public from mid-June through September.

The Belle House, the Williams-Barker House (used as a garrison during King Philip's War and presently a popular restaurant), and Mordecai Lincoln Mill and Homestead date back to the 17th and 18th centuries.

Brooding over the Scituate countryside is the Lawson Tower, a gift to the town from Thomas W. Lawson, "The Copper King." Guarding the rocky shoals at the Harbor entrance is the Scituate Lighthouse built in 1811 and open to organized groups by special arrangement.

Back to Greenbush and Rte. 3A is a must if one is to visit the beautiful town of Cohasset, but don't leave Scituate without a stop at the First Herring Brook, site of the first water driven grist mill in the Old Colony.

COHASSET

The village of Cohasset is charming and distinctive. Nestled together in the very center are three unique buildings. The Historic House, Maritime Museum and the Independence are museums housing collections and exhibits attractively displayed and offering fascinating memorabilia of the rich heritage of Cohasset, indeed of the United States.

The Historic House is furnished authentically with antiques characteristic of homes of the past. The Maritime Museum has relics of days gone by and the third museum was the town's first jail. It has a magnificent gown collection described by authorities as being unique in America.

The buildings are open Tuesday through Sunday in July and August and part of June and September.

Almost fully restored is the Caleb Lothrop House, built in 1823 and acquired in 1975 by the Historical Society. It is available for wedding receptions and other functions. Open by appointment, several open houses will be held this summer at dates to be announced.

Cohasset Common is considered one of the most beautiful in New England and high on a granite ledge is St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, noted for its concerts on the 51-bell carillon. Audiences bring deck chairs and gather for an afternoon's performance.

HINGHAM

You'll probably have to return for another visit if you wish to take in all the historic sites listed in their brochure, but if you wish to walk along such streets as Forget-Me-Not Lane or Bachelors' Row, it's on to the town of Hingham. Settled in 1635, magnificent

Historical trails

homes and old meeting houses once sheltered such men as General Lafayette in 1776 when he stayed at the Sign of the Anchor Tavern.

The houses along North St. present varied architectural styles dating from mid-17th century to post Civil War and many of President Abraham Lincoln's forebearers settled in Hingham; hence the name of Lincoln Square.

The General Benjamin Lincoln home is a National Historic Landmark. He was an aide to General Washington and received Cornwall's sword at Yorktown.

There is a statue at the head of Fountain Square of the president and nearly opposite is the Old Ordinary built in 1680 and now the Hingham Historical Society's museum. Here is a collection of antiques, paintings and historical items, as well as a formal colonial garden.

North St. dates from 1635 when the first house lots were granted and here you'll find the house of Abigail Adams' granddaughter. The Nye Tavern served meals to British officers who were prisoners of war and one building was brought down from Salem by boat and another from Cambridge.

Hingham Harbor in earlier times was a series of wharves, warehouses, ship chandeleries, barrel cooperies, salt works and fish packing. Steamboats once served Hingham from Boston, beginning as early as 1819.

Walking southwesterly along Main St. you are treading the original Bachelor's Row, one of two streets first laid out in 1636. This is the site of the old Derby Academy, founded in 1784 as the nation's first co-ed school.

A short distance farther is Old Ship Meeting House which celebrates its 300th anniversary this year. Built by our Puritan ancestors in the style of the English guild halls, this, too, is a registered National Landmark, built in 1681. The anniversary observance will include many events and projects, culminating in an anniversary dinner in October.

NORWELL

Our last stop on our historic tour is the town of Norwell, formerly known as South Scituate, the south parish of Scituate proper.

Here, where the Massachusetts tribe of Indians roamed, the Puritans laid out their streets along their trails. Seeking timber and water power, they left Plymouth behind to settle this "upriver community."

If you drive along Rte. 123 and River St., you will see a scattering of approximately 150 homes built by the men who owned the shipyards on the banks of the North River when wooden ships were made from the oaks that grew along the water's edge.

These men built their homes about 3/4 of a mile away from the river on lands that bordered established roads and were suitable for farming.

The Jacobs Farmhouse on Rte. 123 is open to the public during the summer months on Sundays, Thursdays and Saturdays from 2 to 5 p.m.

The adjoining Jacobs Pond is the site of an old sawmill and grist mill and a walk through the Albert Norris Reservation which meanders through the woods down to the river banks reveals the remains of another old mill on Second Herring Brook.

No need to travel far and wide in search of history and beauty; we're surrounded by it here on the South Shore.

From the garden

By Joan Pinkham

From the moment the warblers make the woods ring with their song at dawn to the rising of the Wild Rose Moon and the Big Dipper high overhead, who can forget that this is June? Azure skies reflect the blue of wild chicory, delphinium and morning glories and the golden hours are mirrored in the yellows of black-eyed Susans, butterfly weed and, here and there, a butterfly. Sandpipers, plovers and egrets crowd our marshes and the woods offer sorrel to nibble on and fiddleheads to bring home to boil. As you wander about through the month, keep an eye open for other wild flowers and grasses. Pressed flowers may be used in so many ways — to record a special time or event — on lampshades, trays, placemats, pictures, or greeting cards.

Though we revel in the thought of the summer solstice, when summer officially begins at four minutes to seven on the evening of the 21st, there's a twinge of sadness because by the end of the month, the days are moving inexorably toward fall and winter. True, the sun rises at its earliest of the year and sunsets are the latest, but the trees will have finished their annual growth by the end of June. However, it's not too late to sow annual seeds; they'll grow rapidly in the warm weather and fill in blank spots in the garden. You can also make late plantings of cabbage, carrots and corn before the end of the month.

Break seed capsules off rhododendrons, laurel, lilacs and azaleas promptly for better blooming next year. If your iris is crowded, divide and replant after blooming.

The orioles and cuckoos arrived at Marion Brown's, much to her delight. The latter are one of nature's most secretive birds; you can hear them better than you can see them. They were a welcome sight, for cuckoos are one of few birds that devour gypsy moth caterpillars. Left to our own devices in ridding ourselves of these pests, our Tree Department Superintendent Walter Bartlett reassures us that by the middle of the month, the caterpillars should have had their fill of our oak leaves and will enter the pupa stage. Then, it's time for us to strike. The moths we will see are the males. Attracted by the scent of the females, box traps which give off the same odor should be effective. Kennedy's has them for sale at cost — their way of helping to rid their customers of gypsy moths. Our Tree Department has done its best, trying to douse road side trees with spray, but not permitted to spray private property.

Those little fledglings who flop out of their nests before they can fly have to be handled ever so carefully. Never take them into the house to try to feed them, for you may kill them with kindness. The best thing to do, is to pick up the little bird gently and place it in a lower branch or thicket. Mother bird will take over from there, if the cat doesn't find it first. Cats do their hunting at night, so if you love birds, keep your cat in at night. Otherwise, it may clean out an entire nest in one swoop.

Leave your gardening chores behind for a few hours to revel in a walk through what is called "Webster's Wilderness," the Cherry Hill and Winslow Cemetery conservation lands off Webster St. Here, in the magnificent Dwyer Farm area, an osprey was spotted. It was a surprise to the birders out that day, for the osprey's migration is over and they are hopeful it might be nesting in the Green Harbor River area. Members of the group, some of whom have been birding for 30 years, were thrilled when a Least Bittern responded to a tape recording of their call. Unlike any other American bird, it is small and secretive, hiding in reed beds and difficult to flush and rarely seen except by those who spend much time in the marshes. Easier to spot was a distinctive sighting of all six species of the heron family; two great blue herons, three green herons, a glossy ibis, a great egret, snowy egret and cattle egret, also in Dwyer's Farm.

Some of us have learned through bitter experience that decorating a loved one's grave with cut flowers, or even planters, is a mistake. Some time during the night of Memorial Day weekend, our lovely remembrance disappeared from Winslow Cemetery, container and all. Bartlett, also Superintendent of Cemeteries and Greens, says that short of stationing an armed guard in the town's seven cemeteries, there's nothing his department can do to prevent the thefts.

June is the last dew month of the year before July and August's drier air and time for weed growing. Farmers set great store by dew, knowing that a heavy dew is far better than a wild, brief summer shower that steams the land. Lack of rain resulting in our watering ban, is hard on our plants, for when we are limited to two hours, five evenings a week, watering by a hand-held hose is not too effective. A deep watering is necessary so that the roots will reach downward and not upward toward the water that does not soak into the ground when only sprayed. Some suggest puncturing the bottom of a three-pound coffee can with a nail, filling with water and placing near the plants. The water seeps out slowly, soaking the plant roots. Even dish water that is not greasy is perfectly acceptable to the plants. Plants resent the chill water of a hose, particularly in the evening when they will be sitting through the cool night. A large barrel filled with water and allowed to warm in the sun provides water that can be scooped out, but has to be emptied every few days, so that it won't become a breeding place for mosquitoes.

Now, when the weather is warm and friendly for your houseplants, it's a good idea to move them outdoors and let them make part of your outdoor decoration till frost. Some will do best if more or less hidden under a tree or bush, but others can be put on the porch or patio.

The revolutionary 2.2-liter NAPS-Z engine actually gets over 13 percent more torque from less gas than last year's engine. Put that into a rugged, comfortable Datsun 4X4 and you've got the kind of truck you've always wanted. Test drive it today.

4X4 Standard Equipment:
• 2.2-liter NAPS-Z 4-cylinder engine • Power-assisted front disc brakes • Independent front suspension • 4-speed manual transmission (5-speed overdrive on King Cab®) • Bright T-type tie-down hooks • Center console • and lots more, all at no extra cost.

MORE POWER THAN EVER BEFORE

King Cab 4x4 with standard 5-speed transmission

Remember, use estimated MPG for comparison. Your mileage may differ, depending on speed, weather and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Coast Guard visual distress signals

The Coast Guard has adopted new requirements pertaining to visual distress signals. Since Jan. 1, all boats which carry six or less passengers for hire and all recreational boats 16 feet or longer have been required to be equipped with both day and night distress signals when operating on coastal waters. Boats less than 16 feet in length are required to carry nighttime distress signals when operating at night on coastal waters.

'Giant' readers at Ventress Library this summer

Summer is a growing time. At the Ventress Library readers in Grades 2-7 may become "Giant" readers by participating in the Summer Reading Program. "Giant" reading packets will be available at the library from June 22-June 27. Each packet will contain a membership card, book lists, puzzles, instructions for making a "Giant" mobile which will grow book by book, and strips of colored paper to record book titles. The strips will be added to the Giant's chain at the library. On Friday, August 14, there will be a Giant Celebration to honor all Giant Readers.

Pembroke Arts Festival

Plans for the 1981 Pembroke Arts Festival are forging ahead as summer festival time approaches. On August 7-9 three tents holding the area's finest art and artisan talent will spring up on the Pembroke Green in front of the Central School. Children's activities and art exhibits will be housed in the new Town Hall. This year's Festival will also feature an invitational exhibit of the 1980-81 posters for the Opera Company of Boston designed by Pembroke artist Bob Wilcox and a Sculpture Garden under the direction of Howard Bornstein and Ron Smith.

The weekend's festivities will begin with a restyling of the traditional Invitational Cocktail Preview Party which will be held "under the tents." And Saturday evening will bring the return of Pete Collins, noted Dixie Land Jazz artist, and his unique style of entertainment.

If you would like to be a part of this year's planning or would like any further information regarding the Festival, please call Festival President Judith Campbell at 826-8763.

Crowell unveils new drug program

There will be locker searches for drugs and police prosecution of dealers by sometime next fall if the school superintendent's plan is adopted.

A detailed proposal on school drug and alcohol abuse went to the school committee this week. Because the meeting was running late there was no discussion.

Eugene Crowell, superintendent, said he expects his proposal will be ripped apart by the school committee and reworked over the summer.

School officials have begun a system-wide policy of drug education. The plan, as proposed, lists five goals:

—To reduce or eliminate the use of harmful drugs and alcohol in the school system.

—To establish standard rules for handling drug-related situations.

—To give the rules to students, parents and staff in a concise manner.

—To rehabilitate drug and alcohol offenders.

—To coordinate with law enforcement agencies in connection with criminal offenses.

Locker searches would be authorized "under the circumstances of a clear and present danger to the individual and general well-being and/or in the maintenance of discipline and order in the schools."

A student might even be searched under the regulation "within legal guidelines in the presence of a witness and only if circumstances direct."

Police would not be involved in the case of use of a controlled substance. The suggested punishment for use or possession would be a three day suspension from school. Parent conferences would be mandatory and the family would be referred to a rehabilitation program.

Smaller 1st Grade at Osgood

By Patricia Desmond

Next year — and for that year only — there will be a transitional first grade set up at the Osgood School.

There will be a pupil teacher ratio of under 18 to one, unless more students transfer into the system. But this ratio, which will hold for the Kindergarten too, is needed because of the high number of children with problems, according to school officials.

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell said he's been shown the test results that indicate the necessity.

"I'd rather see the problem addressed now rather than later," he said.

The school committee, voting to hire six non-tenured teachers who were given termination notices three months ago, decided to go along with Crowell's advice on the matter.

Why are so many children having trouble moving ahead?

Crowell says there are 14 or 15 students "at risk" in first grade and kindergarten.

He suggested it could be that the high number of children with problems may be due to the unique make-up of the group.

Or it may be due to the economy. He said a few years ago there was more talk about holding a child out of school a year to wait until he or she were ready for school.

"Today there may be more motivation for parents to move a child rather quickly into a public school Kindergarten rather than pay for an additional year of nursery school."

He said the unrest both social and emotional is another factor.

Christine Collins, a Kindergarten teacher at Osgood, suggested the number of children who

Tardy book borrowers may face court action

A small percentage of library borrowers will see court action for failing to return their books, magazines and other material.

They look to a future of criminal prosecution with a $25 fine plus court costs.

Richard Hayes, library director, said the names of offenders will be discussed with the library trustees before any court action is begun.

The delinquent borrowers account for only one-half of one percent of library circulation — but that translates into 300 to 400 books, some more valuable than others.

Crime Watch program to continue: DeBassio

By Susan Ovans

The town's new crime prevention officer, Gerald Doyle, is leaving the police force but Police Chief John DeBassio thinks his crime watch program can continue uninterrupted.

The chief wants to hold an in-service training session in Cohasset for neighboring communities in the crime prevention area.

Chief DeBassio asked selectmen last week to get a civil service list of the candidates qualified for appointment on the basis of Jerry's oral resignation. He plans to leave the department June 29.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said that he would prefer to have a written resignation in hand before requesting the civil service list, and board members Rocco Laugelle and Mary Jane McArthur agreed.

Mary Jane said she'd talked with the chief on certification standards for permanent intermittent police officers. Permanent intermittent police officers, who are appointed by the board of selectmen, must now be certified to meet state requirements.

To that end, the chief would like to begin proper training of the officers in police duties and functions. He is also requesting auhorization from the board to inititate background investigations and medical and psychological exams.

While the board agrees that proper training is vital, they are less sure of the chief's other recommendations.

The board expressed reservations about the cost of the testing, and who is to assume those costs. Reportedly, the testing will cost approximately $225

Cohasset's week

Beach tow zones

Chief John DeBassio wants tow zones at Sandy and Black Rock Beach.

The chief is recommending a $20 fine for violations in these areas, plus possible tow charges.

The tow zones recommended are: the parking area, entrance and exits at Sandy Beach; also Atlantic Avenue from Sheldon Road to 355 Atlantic Avenue, Nochols Road from Atlantic Avenue to 121 Nichols Road.

The Black Rock Beach tow zones will include Wadleigh Park, Forest Avenue Extension, Forest Avenue from Spindrift Lane to Forest Avenue Extension, Jerusalem Road from Black Rock Road to Stoneleigh Drive and Linden Drive from the entrance to number 19.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle will survey the area and report back to the board.

Voters nix harbor $

Scituate town meeting refused to go along with an agreement, worked out early this year, giving Cohasset part of the boat excise tax money for vessels moored in the Scituate side of Cohasset Harbor. The vote came this week as reaction to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's bill changing the boundary line between the towns.

Clark seeks exec. sec.

Arthur Clark, Cohasset's unofficial town father, applied for the job of executive secretary to the board of selectmen at the eleventh hour.

The board will have money available for the post beginning with the start of the new fiscal year, July 1.

The dozens of applications for the position are now under review, the deadline for application having closed June 12.

People in town have urged Arthur to apply for the job which will pay $15,000 to $20,000 a year. In fact Sen. Allan McKinnon, speaking at the recent testimonial for the recently retired selectman, said he expected to continue working with Arthur in the other capacity.

Selectmen ignored a town meeting resolve to appoint a special screening committee to sift through the applicants. So the selection process rests totally with them.

For kids at the Pratt

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library invites pre-school age children to join in the summer time fun at the library Thursday afternoons at 1, beginning July 9.

Programs are being planned by Heidi Bishop, Susan Shumaker, Carol Foley, Susan deMichael, Corine Leung, Martha Equi and Carolyn Horn and will include special treats such as flannel board stories, fingerplays and simple crafts.

Children must be 3½ years old to register. Call the library, 383-1348, any afternoon to register. The Friday morning series is filled.

Early registration may be made for the fall series.

Little Harbor opening

The selectmen asked that the press please note and print the following:

On even numbered days Little Harbor is open to motor boats and for water skiing.

On odd numbered days the harbor is only open to sail boats, canoeists, fishermen. No motor boats will be permitted on these days.

Beach stickers available

Beach stickers are available and the police are out tagging violators to the tune of $20 a violation.

The unofficial estimate for money raised by the ticketing process over the weekend alone was $1,500.

Police Chief DeBassio said this week residents may use last year's sticker until July 1. But if the sticker is off the car, a new one is required immediately.

Stickers, which weren't available until last week, may be purchased for $10 at the police station from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. — except during a noon lunch break for the clerk. Until the Fourth of July the stickers will be sold from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays at the station.

Stickers for a second car in the household can be obtained for $2. Stickers are available with a two week limit for house guests.

And made some conversions too

Toma draws enthusiastic crowds

Toma left them crying last week.

The high-paid drug educator was brought to town by concerned citizens who wanted the dangers of drugs spelled out in big letters for the teenagers.

David Toma did it with all the emotion-packed knowledge available. He won tears and applause and promises of reform.

Youngsters from the Deer Hill School listened to his pitch and described him as wonderful.

"He knows about all this because he's done it," one young girl commented afterwards. "I don't use drugs and he's one more reason not to."

It cost $5,000 for Toma's two-day appearance in town. Most everyone agreed the price was worth it. Irene Brown, chairman of the school committee, said she thought the presentation was interesting and well done.

"I think he had a great influence on the kids. I hope his influence will last," she said. "There was an instantaneous response. He really turns the kids on, or turns them off drugs, which ever way you want to put it. If it helps out one kid, that's the most important thing."

She said she agrees with Toma that the deterioration of the family is one of the causes for the problems today.

Toma brought out hundreds of parents for his Tuesday night session. Estimates are there were 700 to 800 at the high school. He advised parents on how to deal with the problems that might otherwise lead their children to drugs.

The day after his appearance, a woman called the Mariner office wanting to buy 8 by 10 photos of Toma and wanting to know where copies of the Mariner were on sale.

Due to our deadline schedule, the Toma story was not in last week's issue. The woman, not from Cohasset, described herself as just a fan of Toma's.

One high school girl said she decided to stop using marijuana after hearing Toma's thoughts on the evils of the drug. Toma described it as poison. He talked about the health hazards created by other drugs, including alcohol, during the various lectures.

The presentation is just the beginning of a drug education program for the town. Michael Gill, health coordinator, was hired nearly a year ago to come up with a drug and health program. The curriculum was adopted in the spring. It goes into effect in September.

The Toma presentation was the first step, Mrs. Brown and others have said.

The second step happens this week with a display of information put together by Police Chief John DeBassio for interested parents.

Mrs. Brown said she knows there's a drug problem in Cohasset just like there is everywhere else.

"Actually the problem's probably a little less here, we have highly motivated kids."

Letters

To the Editor:

It has been six months since the tragic accident that burned 60 percent of Marion Douglas. Marion spent more than three months in the hospital and underwent nine skin graft operations while being hospitalized.

Her complete recovery will take a long time. Each day Marion has her dressing changed, either by the visiting nurse or a member of the family, and makes her daily trip to Braintree Hospital for one hour of occupational therapy and one hour of physical therapy.

The doctors tell Marion it will take about a year for the therapy and it may be necessary for more operations in the future. Her rides to Braintree are provided by friends and the organization Fish.

The Fire Department responded both quickly and efficiently and we wish to thank both the Department and the Fire Fighters on duty that night.

Back in December a group of people started the Marion Douglas Fund. Marion would like to thank all the people who worked on the committee and to the hundreds of people, family, friends, neighbors, churches, business and other organizations who gave to Marion's Fund.

In February there was a benefit for Marion, held at the VFW in Scituate, sponsored by the Tigerettes Softball Team and Cohasset Auto Body. Many people gave their time, talents, and love to make this benefit a very successful one. It took hours of planning and hard work and Marion wishes to thank all who worked so hard for her.

In the spring, the Jaycees sponsored a road race, with half the proceeds to Marion's Fund and half to the Bobby Beal Fund. Thanks once again.

Thanks to God Marion is alive today. While in the hospital she had excellent nurses and doctors who cared for her. Hundreds of cards and prayers were sent to her. Weekly visits by her pastor kept her spirits up and the help and support of family, friends and townspeople have meant a great deal.

Due to Marion's determination and courage and all the support and prayers of hundreds of people Marion is on the road to recovery. With your continued prayers she is going to make it.

Thank you all and God Bless You, from the family of

Keep going

The school system began its new drug education program this week with the appearance of David Toma, the man who inspired the Barretta series for television.

More than one young person decided to stop using drugs.

That's fantastic. It's exactly what the citizens' group that sponsored the event hoped for. The group raised $5,000 for that appearance, obviously hoping to make a flashy start for the program.

And it did.

The young people who heard Toma seemed fascinated with the man. He has the ability to motivate young people. That's fine.

But often that sort of quick conversion is short-lived. Now it is up to the school committee, parents and others concerned with drug education to keep the stone rolling.

The town will begin its first ever health curriculum with the start of the next school year. Michael Gill, new health coordinator, worked all year on the program.

The effort that has gone into that program may not have the charismatic appeal of the Toma lecture but it will certainly have the hopes of many riding on it.

Now that Toma is gone, the young people who decided to swear off drugs have only promises to keep.

Last night Police Chief John DeBassio began to reinforce the lesson Toma began. He talked about ways drugs in the medicine chest are abused.

People like Chief DeBassio and Mike Gill won't get the wide-eyed, teary and hero-worshiping response Toma won. But they deserve strong praise and whatever help is available. They are the ones left to fight the drug problem over the long haul. And they're already working.

Criticizes Atkinson's Toma view

To the Editor:

I am writing about the article about David Toma. I do not object to how the article was written, but I do object to Reverend Edward Atkinson's views.

I am speaking for the sixth graders. Everyone I asked thought he was a great man, and has done much for this town, especially the high school. I feel that it was unfair to judge Mr. Toma before even listening to his speech.

Reverend Atkinson also expressed his concern of the children who are not affected with drugs, yet I feel Mr. Toma discouraged any child who may be thinking about trying drugs.

When I was at his presentation I was lucky. I sat in the second row. When he was speaking I noticed how he was so involved with what he was saying. He seemed to be warning each one of us separately about the dangers of drugs. The children who had gone to Mr. Toma for help stood right near me. I watched them and realized how much they respected him for what he did.

Reverend Atkinson also said he used vulgar language, which he did not. I wish Reverend Atkinson got to ask some of the children Mr. Toma was trying to help before making those statements in his sermon. I also wish he would give him a second chance.

Sincerely,
Cindy Bell

One woman's fight against the gypsy moth

By Claire Sheppeck

I was desperate! The enemy had been inching forward since late April. The very first day I tried to relax in my favorite lounge chair, in my new bikini bought with avid anticipation of soaking up the first spring sun, I spotted a small squad of caterpillars milling around my giant oak tree. Out with the can of aerosol bug spray! I rested comfortably, thinking that I had wiped out the little invaders. However, I had defeated only the forward reconnaisance or enemy scouts.

The next morning, the gypsy moth caterpillars arrived in platoons, one brazen enough to try to take over my lounge chair. I had to use a new plan. My throat was sore from the previously used insect repellent. I armed myself with a large empty coffee can and a wooden spoon. Deftly, with the spoon, I knocked the enemy into the can. This process took patience, but I had lots of time. I wiped out another platoon that had surrounded the base of the mighty oak. Once in the can, the enemy nested together on the bottom. They did not even attempt escape. These creatures were obviously stupid, I thought. My judgements were premature. They had huddled together to discuss new battle strategies, and to send out signals, because now they got tough.

Next, they sent out a regiment to surround my linden tree. They completely covered the tree swing. This was just a diversionary tactic. Another regiment had the oak under siege. I was ready. Humming "Tie a Yellow Ribbon," I whipped out my expensive but more powerful weapon, the gypsy moth sticky tape and wound it carefully around my favorite trees.

It rained heavily. The sticky tape's seal was soon broken and as it flapped in the wind, I think I could hear the enemy cheering.

I wrapped tin foil around the tree trunks, and then applied petroleum jelly. While I was carrying out the advise of environmentalists, the enemy had been collaborating with their allies the tent caterpillars. They had spun cacoons on some other branches of the trees. My husband was trying to burn out these nests with a homemade torch.

Although the tin foil slowed them down, the enemy was able to sneak underneath it at night, and had moved onward to upper branches.

I began to feel battle weary. Heavy artillery must

The number one student grades his education

By Philip Dormitzer
CHS Valedictory Speech

Cohasset has an effective school system that is worth perfecting. After all, something has to be right in an institution that lets its graduating seniors up on stage to get in the last word.

It is my pleasure to address the Class of 1981, parents, relatives, and friends. I would like to take this opportunity to discuss the education offered in the Cohasset School System in terms of both a nationally published survey and some of my own observations.

A Cohasset education clearly has many benefits. One has only to look at the list of colleges into which Cohasset seniors have been accepted to see that our system is a good one.

The U.S. Institute of Education has just published five characteristics of the most effective schools. These characteristics are high expectations, strong leadership, emphasis on instruction, discipline, and effective testing.

It is interesting to see how Cohasset has fulfilled each of these requirements. The first of these characteristics is high expectations: "Students must be challenged and encouraged." Cohasset's performance in this area has been somewhat variable. The AP, or Advanced Placement, Program has provided a challenge for many of the students in that track. The three AP courses that I have taken have been well worth the extra effort that they require. On the other hand, the quality of courses below the AP level ranges from poor to excellent. The cause of the difference in the quality of these courses is the difference in the level of skill of the teachers.

The second of these criteria is effective leadership by the administration. The leveling out of differences in the quality of instruction should be one of the administration's main objectives. This goal can be achieved by monitoring courses to ensure that their quality is consistent. In addition, inexperienced teachers should be teamed up with veterans of the system so the newer teachers can benefit from the educational know-how of the more experienced teachers. Of course, the most effective way to ensure that courses are of a high quality is to employ highly qualified teachers.

The third essential for effective schools is an emphasis on basic skills. The humanities program and "TOWP," Task-Oriented Writing Program, a required course for all juniors, have ensured that almost all Cohasset students have basic writing skills. The state's required competency testing has furthered this emphasis. On the other hand, achievements test scores have indicated that there are deficiencies in the Science and Social Studies Departments.

Fourth, according to the study, school should "maintain a climate conducive to learning," a nice way of saying discipline. Although when sitting in class one can sometimes hear what sounds like scenes from the Exorcist being acted out in the next room, Cohasset is basically kept under control through the efforts of Mr. Di. Unfortunately, some of the rules of the school, such as the punishments for being tardy, seem to be pointless and often punish students who are victims of circumstance rather than active offenders.

The final characteristic of an effective school is an active and fair testing policy. While in most courses testing is active, two basic improvements could be made to make the testing procedures more fair. First, the mid-year and final exams comprise a full third of the students' mark for the entire year. Because of the number of variables that can affect a student's performance of any given test day, this is far too much weight to put on any two exams. Second, some teachers will refuse to scale a test even when the grades of an entire class are low or will disregard the importance of the marks that they assign. While grades are not indicators of anything other than academic achievement, they are one of the few indicators of a student's ability available to colleges, scholarship services, and other organizations. Therefore, grades should be made out both thoughtfully and accurately by the teachers. To aid teachers in this task, there could be more time between the end of terms and the dates on which grades must be submitted.

From a personal perspective, one legitimate criticism of Cohasset High School is that there are times when teachers do not give students the same respect that they want for themselves. For example, some teachers assign work that has little or no educational value. In the early years of high school especially, students are given lengthy assignments simply because there must be an assignment for the night. All homework takes time and effort, and to assign useless work shows a lack of consideration for the students' life outside of school. To eliminate this problem, the school rules should be changed so that there is no longer a rigid minimum of homework to be given each night regardless of what is being taught in class.

A key to effective education is respecting the students' ideas so that they feel free to express their views and ask questions without fear of ridicule. It is unfortunate that in some cases students who ask questions are cut down by a teacher who considers their thoughts to be worthless or irrelevant. Of course, there are times when a student's response is inappropriate, but to turn on the offending student is the wrong reaction.

One aspect of respecting students in which Cohasset teachers generally excel is in responding to students' requests for help. Most teachers are very generous and will put aside their other work in order to meet with students. However, during the after-school help period, teachers are sometimes unavailable because of coaching and other commitments. To avoid this problem, all sports should adhere to the existing rule that mandatory athletic activities should not begin until after the extra-help period.

Finally, when only seeing students for forty minutes a day, it is easy for teachers to forget that students lead active lives outside of the course that is being taught. Out of respect for the students, teachers should be flexible enough to adapt to the students' needs. For example, there are times when a student simply cannot meet a deadline. While most teachers are understanding and will give students extensions under certain circumstances, others are inflexible. One friend of mine who has since been graduated, went abroad on a trip with a youth orchestra, and on returning found that she was in trouble academically because of work missed.

I have focused mainly on the responsibility that teachers have to show respect towards the students. Of course, the students also have an obligation to earn that respect. With mutual respect between student and teacher, Cohasset should be able to maintain its present academic standards and make improvements in the education of its students. Cohasset has an effective school system that is worth perfecting. After all, something has to be right in an institution that lets its graduating seniors up on stage to get in the last word.

Gypsy moth fight

be brought in. First, I used the insecticide advertisied as dangerous only to caterpillars. The creepy crawlers marched on, devouring leaf after leaf. They were supposed to die two days after eating the sprayed leaves. They had renewed strength! A new division was munching on a flowering crab tree.

I shopped for the most powerful insecticide I could legally buy. Ahah! Spray, attack! Spray, attack! Spray, attack! It made them meaner. They started to work out a plan to surround my house.

I started to experience some mental defeat. In one of my frequent fantasies of winning the war, I had dressed up the neighborhood children as little oak trees. I had pinned oak leaves all over their clothes for camouflage. They then marched slowly to their own yards. The enemy followed them, freeing me from attack. "The Pied Piper Plan," I called it. Alas, I was becoming desperate!

I slicked the tree trunks with axle grease. An army moved forward to concentrate on my house. I sprayed deadly foam. Another army soon appeared. My intelligence sources informed me that the crawlers are able to reproduce quickly and therefore supply themselves easily with reinforcements.

I am tired now. War is Hell, but I am holding the enemy off, standing my own ground, knowing that in mid-July a wonderful metamorphosis will take place. The caterpillars will turn into moths, and I will be relieved from battle until next spring. In the meantime, I will have months to prepare for next year's offensive tactics which promises to be devastating. After all, I am invincible. I am woman!

☐Rebecca Patrolia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Patrolia, Cedar Acres Lane, was awarded a master of Arts degree at Framingham State College's 141st commencement on Sunday, May 31. There were 680 graduates.

A 1967 cum laude graduate of U. Mass. Amherst, Rebecca concentrated in Community Counseling at Framingham State.

Rebecca will continue her career in psychiatric nursing at the Manchester Mental Health Center. She is a member of Sigma Theta Tau, the national honor society for nurses.

☐Jeffrey Peters, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Peters of Jerusalem Road, has completed basic training at Fort McClellan, Ala.

During the training, students receive instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

He is a 1975 graduate of Wellesley High School.

☐Many local students have been named to the Day Division Dean's List at Massasoit Community College it was announced this week by Dean Carl Kowalski. Those honored from Cohasset were: Sue Boardman and Kathleen Palimeri.

☐Steven Bartow of Cohasset received a Colby Brick for "dedicated and meritorious service" to Colby College, his alma mater.

Honored during Alumni Reunion 1981 of the liberal arts college, the 1960 graduate was credited with revitalizing the Greater Boston Alumni Club, having served as president, treasurer and a member of the board.

"You are a thoughtful and serious alumnus, concerned with the college and its future and, as is evident in your membership in our President's Club, you are willing to make personal sacrifices to support Colby's mission," stated the citation accompanying the award.

☐Bates College freshman Jodi Sandblom of Cohasset helped the Bobcat softball team to its best record ever in 1981.

Jodi, the team's designated hitter, batted at a .378 clip with 14 hits in 37 plate appearances, including a team-high five doubles. She also smashed two triples, scored eight runs and drove in 13 more. Her team-leading slugging percentage was .622.

Jodi is the daughter of Russell and Carol Sandblom of Rustic Drive.

☐Nancy Digirolamo, daugher of Gino Digirolamo is a recent graduate of Lasell Junior College in Newton.

Nancy graduated with an Associate's degree in Art.

Lasell Junior College, founded in 1851, is the nation's oldest two-year college for women.

☐Welcome home to Jocelyn Kennedy, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, a sophomore, who has completed a semester of study at the Catholic University of Angers, France.

☐If you hear a cow bell ringing on the common it's Mrs. Atkinson calling her children home.

☐The Cohasset Dramatic Club had their summer send off party at Gari Glennon's in Allerton on Sunday. If for no other reason to join, the parties are great. Gari's home has a spectacular view of Boston Harbor, and the islands, which we all could partake of while standing on the patio wishing we lived there.

The Prentice women were there, Sue, Linda, Phyliss and Starr. Also the stalwart's of the club, Bob and Evelyn Shultz, Helen and Burke Ketchum, Murray Campbell, Flo and Dick Kelley and Bob Julian.

☐I'm looking for people who would be interested in helping put together the opening parties at the South Shore Art Center next season. Any thoughts on food, table arrangements, floral displays, and food would be much appreciated.

We'd like to hold a meeting sometime this summer. Val Reever is still looking for volunteers for the Art Fair. This is a great way to meet new people and become involved with the community.

☐The pool's open and they've already had swim team try-outs; 175 children turned out to make the team, but only so many will make it. Those who don't can always try again next year.

☐One good thing about the gypsy moths is they'll be gone soon.

☐The Open Door Society, which is a support group for adoptive parents, held a picnic Sunday in Hingham. They hold their meetings on the third Friday of the month. Anyone who is thinking of adopting and has any questions can call me for further information on the meetings.

☐Eileen and Vinnie Nardo celebrated their fifth anniversary last Friday. They started off early with their family, Amy, Andrea, Vinnie's sister Janice, and her children, Nicole and Jared, and Vinnie's mother at Sandy Beach. It was a beautiful day to relax, but the topper was going to the Bay Tower Restaurant in Boston for dinner.

Vinnie said the place is an experience. The view is spectacular from every table. The food was great, they had Filet Mignon and Medallion of Veal and Baked Alaska for dessert. They toasted, of course, with champagne.

☐Sara Gallagher is working for the recreation department this summer.

☐Dawn Faith Massa, at age one, is ready for an acting career.

☐The Class of 1982 extends their most sincere gratitude to Amy Murphy for her outstanding efforts at the horse show held this past Sunday at Wheelwright Park. The event was held to raise money for the class and cleared over $400. Once again, special thanks to Amy Murphy for coordinating the entire event.

☐The pre-season social event for the two year old set was Torrie Androski's birthday party. Everyone turned out in their summer finery. Keith Jackson and Taylor Devin both had on shorts with a matching shirt, one in red, the other in blue. Torrie was dressed in a pastel liberty print princess style frock with a pink over apron.

Also there were Austin and Brian Lewis, Kaitlin and Kristin Jackson, Carrie, Heather and Jeff Pietrowski, Ben Laney, who was dressed in a blue seersucker jacket, blue turtle neck and cotton green pants, and Ben's four-year-old Aunt Lindsey.

Everyone had a great afteroon sharing Torrie's new red car and eating the hotdogs. No one seemed to care for the rolls, and the best part was the bunny rabbit cake. The color scheme was pink and white with a flower display of pink carnations and white snap dragons.

CACG seeks equal time on Cape

Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc. has requested "equal time" from the Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce, which has invited casino promoters MGM Grand-Greylock to make a presentation at their final meeting of the season, Tuesday, June 16.

Carol Oteri, of Hull, president of C.A.C.G., took issue with the statement of Michael Frucci, executive secretary of the Cape Cod Chamber, that the meeting would "keep chamber members informed in the event that they have to make a decision on gambling."

Oteri asked, "How can a program on such a controversial issue be truly informational when only one side is given the platform?" Reacting to Frucci's remark that Proposition 2½ "might change peoples' attitude toward gambling statewide," Oteri replied that "even the highest projections of anticipated tax revenues from casinos amount to a mere 2 percent of the total state budget."

The Hull activist felt that Cape residents have been consistent in their opposition to casino gambling there or elsewhere in the state. Oteri said, "MGM is extending its tentacles to Barnstable County and trying to convince them that they can reap so-called 'benefits' without having to put up with a casino in their midst. However, at State House hearings, their legislators expressed the belief that casinos in neighboring Plymouth County would be followed by casinos on the Cape and they were saying 'No thanks'."

Oteri continued, "MGM's road show on the Cape brings to mind the fact that two years ago the bill which would have legalized casino gambling on the Cape and in the Berkshires was called 'the handiwork of Robert Ambler' by members of the media. That same Rep. Robert Ambler made an occupation of feigning neutrality at this year's State House hearings as Co-Chairman of the Government Rules and Regulations Committee which was reviewing casino legislation.

"The other Co-Chairman, Senator Denis McKenna, of Somerville, is the only sponsor Hull could get for the latest bill. If there was much support for the idea of casino gambling in Massachusetts more legislators would have come forward, at least to the extent of testifying at the hearing."

Oteri concluded by saying that C.A.C.G. is "looking forward to meeting with the Cape Cod Chamber in the Fall, when their meeting schedule resumes. In the meantime," she said, "more chips will fall and alert people to the high price that must be paid for promised casino revenues, not to mention the high price MGM is willing to pay to foist casinos on a region."

Tardy book borrowers

People who owe the library material lose their borrowing privileges when they are sent out their second overdue notice.

The black list is kept at the front desk, making it difficult for repeaters.

Several years ago Judge Albert Kramer began a program that encouraged local libraries to bring delinquents into court. Until now Cohasset has not participated.

The beginning of the court program will involve seclective application of charges, with the first group chosen according to the number of books involved.

"Frequently people think it's our mistake. And then they find the book under the seat of the car. It's hard to get tough with your friends and neighbors but people have to be a little more careful with the books they borrow. Some of the missing items are things that would tend to get lost easily, magazines for example. But some of the missing material is valuable, out of print, or just beyond our budget to replace."

Three percent of the materials taken out of the library require a first notice that there's a problem of being overdue.

At the Community Center

The Cohasset Community Center will offer a typing course, this summer, for high school students and adults.

Mrs. Doris Lahage, business department head at Cohasset High School, is helping to coordinate the course which will meet from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, beginning July 6 and ending July 31.

Registrations are now being accepted for the program which will cost $90.

NATURE PROGRAM

Only a few openings remain in the Center's Summer Nature Program for children in grades K-6.

The six-week program will meet on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. until noon, beginning June 24 and will cost $25. On site discoveries and hands on activities are planned on amphibians, birds, rocks and minerals, ocean and wildlife.

GYMNASTICS

Gymnastics instructor Ruthann Sargent will offer her program, according to the following schedule: Tumble Tots (ages 3-5) from 9-10 a.m., 10-11 a.m.; beginner-intermediate from 11 a.m. until noon; and intermediate-advanced from noon until 1 p.m. on Saturdays beginning July 11 and ending August 15.

The cost for the 6 week program will be $12.

BATON CLASSES

Registrations are also being accepted for the Center's baton classes which will be offered on Thursdays from 5 to 6 p.m., beginning June 25 and ending August 13. The cost for the eight-week program is $24.

FITNESS & FUN

Joanne Sheppard's Exercise for Fitness and Fun is available in two different sessions running for three-week periods.

The cost for the Tuesday and Thursday classes is $13.50. For the Monday, Wednesday and Friday classes the cost is $20.25. Classes meet from 9 to 10 a.m. and the next session will begin June 22.

Further information is available at the Center from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., weekdays at 383-0088.

Democrats to host brunch

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be the host town at a COOP-5 brunch with Senator Sharon Pollard (D-Third Essex) on Sunday, June 28 at The Greenhouse Restaurant, Cohasset Village from 10 a.m. to noon.

This brunch is the third in a series hosted by the COOP, an association of Democratic Town Committees consisting of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield and Scituate, with candidates running for state-wide office.

Now 30, Sen. Pollard is the youngest woman ever elected to the Massachusetts Senate.

Operating policy set

The Board of Sewer Commissioners have set the following policy for operating under the state imposed Sewer Ban:

Owners of single family houses presently connected to the municipal sewer may increase the number of bedrooms and bathrooms without permission from the Board. Owners of single family houses converting to multi-family, and business owners planning a change of use for a building, must seek permission from the local Board.

In these such cases, a special permit issued by the state to the town may be required. The Board retains the right of decision to apply for the state permit. This judgment is made on a case by case basis.

When flow comparisons are necessary, the water meter readings of 1977 will be used. If such readings are not available, the nearest yearly readings, both prior and subsequent to 1978, the year the ban was placed, will be used.

Special permits are required when the comparison indicates a daily flow increase, a change, or modification of use of a building, or when a new connection is proposed.

The Board may require certain conditions in regard to type and amount of flow to be placed on the local permit. If such conditions are violated, both local and state permits may be rescinded.

The above process was duly followed by the Board of Sewer Commissioners recently in the case of Margie's Seafoods which is located at the Harbor in Cohasset. A Special Sewer Permit for modified use of a building was issued with the agreement that certain conditions would be met.

"No fried foods, no cleaning or preparation of whole fish, no dishwasher, no food consumed by the public in the building, no garbage grinder. Only paper containers to be used for take-out service. Grease trap per state code is required and will be cleaned when necessary; this is determined by the Sewer Commissioners, per 5-12 of the Rules and Regulations Concerning Sewer Use."

Host families needed for Japanese students

Being 6,000 miles away, Japan is a country most people aren't able to visit. However, this summer you can experience Japan right in your own home through Interstudy's cultural exchange program. For the seond year, Cohasset and Scituate will host 30 Japanese students, ages 18-23, who will be here from Aug. 3-25.

Last year over 20 Cohasset/Scituate families hosted students. Margot Cheel, returning group representative, is happy to have a good number of families come back and is looking forward to introducing new families to this rewarding cultural exchange.

Margot, who can be called at 383-6845, says that the reason Interstudy is so successful as an international travel organization is its planned program of education and cultural exchange. There's structure but flexibility too.

Each morning students attend English language classes held at the course center. Afternoon schedules include field trips to Plimoth Plantation, Boston's Faneuil Hall, etc., or a bike ride around town, a tennis match at the high school or a jaunt over to Hanover Mall for "Cohasset" T-shirts.

A host family orientation is held prior to the students' arrival; a welcome party for the students brings all families together, as does the students' own Sayonara Party. Many host families find new friends in their own community this way. In addition, many find the experience brings the whole family together.

The Japanese respect for family and home find these students attentive to young children and eager to learn and share their culture with their host family.

As one mother said, "It is an experience every family, especially with children, should enjoy. Once you have a student, then you look forward to having one again!"

Crowell unveils new drug program

In the case of sale of drugs, police would be notified and punishment would range from a 10 day suspension to a school committee hearing on expulsion.

"Teachers must make it clear to pupils who confide information about drugs or alcohol involvement that it is the duty of the teacher to report this information to the school principal — but only to further the goal of promoting the pupil's personal welfare.

"This policy avoids the situation where the teacher has to decide whether or not to reveal this information to higher authorities within the school."

Parents would also be notified since state law does not give teachers the right of confidential communication.

"The role of the teacher is not to be punitive, but supportive, and to show caring and concern for the student by being concerned for the health and well-being of the individual.

Every effort would be made to include a parent or legal guardian in any questioning of a student.

The School committee has already decided to have its drug education program extend to the primary grades. Teachers at the Osgood School will have in-service training with the health coordinator during the coming school year to implement the program.

"The place to start is Osgood," Richard Conley, committee member said this week. "At that level they're not getting health fulltime, it's (classroom) teacher taught."

Some members of the school committee wanted the release day for information on misuse of drugs at the start of the year. School officials say the teachers won't get to the material until the end of the year.

Communication Councils: link between parents & schools

By Karin Bartow

As the school year winds down, so does the work of the Cohasset Communications Councils, which are parent groups serving the four schools.

The Councils are representative groups from the Osgood School, the Deer Hill School and the Junior/Senior High School who meet monthly throughout the school year with their respective principals. Their purpose is to serve as an information link between school and home.

Parents on the councils become better informed about school issues while becoming better acquainted with the administration and staff. Meetings, however, and council sponsored activities and projects are open to any parent. The "business" of each meeting usually centers around issues of concern within the schools. Parents and principals exchange ideas, make suggestions and discuss school programs and problems.

Each council is composed of three to five members for each grade level. Their bylaws provide for a consecutive two-year term, ensuring participation by more people. Each year at least half of the council membership is lost due to expiration. Those who've served on a council may be eligible again after a year's absence. Anyone not serving as a council member may, however, serve on a sub-committee.

Parent education programs are often presented at individual council meetings. John O'Brien of South Shore Counseling spoke on stress at holiday time. Marilyn Powers, Osgood reading specialist, discussed her work, and Larry Lieberman, psychologist and consultant to the schools, talked about the problems associated with raising elementary school age children at the Osgood meetings this year.

The Deer Hill Council invited the art and gym teachers to their meetings this year and also a representatiave of SRA Testing Services.

The councils also sponsor activities that they deem appropriate and while they do not have treasuries, they fund raise from time to time to pay for specific activities. The Osgood council sponsored enrichment programs this year that included a local author/illustrator and the Children's Museum Kit on handicapped, "What If You Couldn't." They will also help buy some gym equipment and will set up a trust fund for field trip scholarships and help pay for an outdoor nature study center.

The Deer Hill Council has raised scholarship money to help fifth grade students attend Outdoor School. Both councils are working on a grant proposal and will support its financial needs for a two month poet-in-residence program next year. The Deer Hill Council's Arts Committee has brought a local artist to the school once a month throughout the past couple of years.

All councils help coordinate open houses in their respective schools and this year, co-sponsored Superintendent Crowell's reception. They also coordinate parent volunteers in the schools who have become an essential aid to teachers and students. Budget discussions, especially this year of Prop. 2½, are also held with principals and superintendent.

Many issues of concern among parents have become off-shoot projects of the councils. The junior/senior council was intrumental in seeing a health education program and the Dave Toma alcohol and drug abuse program (June 9 and 10) realized in the schools. They also lobbied successfully for a seventh grade representative on the student council.

A group of Osgood parents concerned about food waste, nutrition and the variety of school lunches, has organized a survey that will be sent home to parents this week They hope to determine the level of satifaction with the lunch program and then act accordingly for constructive change.

A very valuable source of information on school matters and policies is the Steering Committee of the four councils which meets monthly with the superintendent. Each council has a permanent representative to the Steering Committee and at least one of each co-chairman attends. Meetings are also open to the public.

This committee coordinates the activities of each council and serves as a vechicle for the exchange of ideas. Monthy speakers this year have included the Metco Coordinator, Philip Burrows, health coordinator Mike Gill police chief John DeBassio, and assistant to the superintendent Stephen Hart.

Through the steering committee the councils have strengthened many projects, such as the development of the schools' basic competency testing, health education and development of a drug and alcohol policy.

The councils are an appropriate and effective clearing house for parents' concerns, questions and suggestions for improvement in the Cohasset school system.

If you are interested in volunteering your services on one of the communications councils for the 1981-82 academic year, contact the Steering Committee, office of the Superintendent of Cohasset Schools, 143 Pond St., 383-6111.

They keep Cohasset blooming

By Jennifer Grisdale

Cohasset has not one, but three garden clubs, that harbor over 300 green thumbs. And the clubs don't seem to compete with each other; they work together to keep Cohasset beautiful.

The largest is the Community Garden Club (of Cohasset) which has about 250 members. Each one must devote 10 man-hours of work to the club every year, according to president Joanne Haynes.

In addition to maintaining the garden by Sandy Beach and the community center grounds, Mrs. Haynes said her organization is repsonsible for the outdoor world at the historic Lothrop House on Summer Street.

Landscape architect Barbara Power is in charge of that job. And it's far from just a matter of deciding where to plant the Hollyhocks. Historic house gardens must be designed in accordance with the period of the house, the president explained.

"We strive for horticultural perfection," she said.

The club also has subcommittees that do all kinds of good deeds including "garden therapy." Garden therapists visit the local nursing home to help residents make Christmas decorations or plant bulbs.

"It gives the elderly quite a lift!" Mrs. Haynes said. The group also visits the South Shore Hospital.

The organization's size as well as the continuing sales of it's cookbook "Cohasset Entertains" help keep the club going. Activities aren't limited strictly to gardening either. Members are planning a Christmas house tour and an antique show in the spring.

While the Amateur Garden Club is the smallest of the trio, with membership limited to 25 under its charter, it is by no means inactive. The organization's aim is to "help each other be better gardeners," explained member Rosilla Trott. Part of that goal is accomplished at each monthly meeting when members can take the opportunity to exchange tips.

Between meetings, they work on a number of on-going projects, including care for the hedge at the little league field, the dogwood trees at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and several gardens along Jerusalem Road.

"For a small club, I think we hold our own," Mrs. Trott said.

The Cohasset Garden Club, which has 53 members, is the oldest of the three. President Jane Crocker explained gardeners founded the club in 1925 to increase "knowledge and love of gardening" and to be concerned about "matters of environment."

Mrs. Crocker said members care for the museum gardens downtown and donate a tree to the Joseph Osgood School each Arbor Day. They also help maintain the trees. "It helps the kids gain an appreciation of trees and shrubs," she commented.

The club will have a carriage house sale this year on June 20 as its annual fundraiser. Members plan to sell books and personal items, as well as plants.

The organizations unite their efforts every year for at least one project: the Memorial Day geranium planting at the war memorial in the harbor. In addition they have founded a council of garden clubs to help them keep in touch with each other.

The result: A blooming town!!

SPINAL SCREENING
AT THE
FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC
JUNE 2 through JUNE 30

1. Head tilt
2. High shoulder
3. Low scapula
4. Spinal curvature
5. Low hip

Potential Danger signals of Irritated Nerves:

- Headaches, dizziness, blurred vision
- Neck pain, tight muscles, spasms
- Shoulder pain, pain down arms, numbness in hands
- Pain between shoulders, difficult breathing, abdominal pains
- Lower back pain, hip pain, pain down leg

Family Practice of Chiropractic is offering spinal check-ups and postural analysis for early detection of back problems.

TIME magazine says 75 million Americans have backache, and with each passing year, this astronomical figure grows by 7,000,000.

Backache has become a catastrophic issue with the insurance companies and with our national economy. It is one of the top claims for disability. In addition to this, arthritis and rheumatic complaints affect 77 percent of our adult population, and every year millions sustain severe neck injuries from automobile collisions.

With the use of a few simple painless tests we will be able to determine the condition of the spine. Early detection of back problems is the best prevention for future back ailments.

The spinal screening will be offered without charge or obligation, at the

Dr. John P. Hayes, Jr.
Family Practice of Chiropractic, P.C.
353 Washington Street [Route 53]
Norwell, Mass. 02061

Doctor will be available for answering questions on treatment and prevention of back problems.

Coast Guard distress signals

By Dick Rice
First Coast Guard District

The Coast Guard has adopted new requirements pertaining to visual distress signals. Since January 1 all boats which carry six or less passengers for hire and all recreational boats 16 feet or longer have been required to be equipped with both day and night distress signals when operating on coastal waters. Boats less than 16 feet in length are required to carry nighttime distress signals when operating at night on coastal waters.

Boaters are not required to purchase each or every item contained in the table, nor are boaters required to have pistol-launched devices. The table contains a listing of all items which have Coast Guard approval. The boater may select any device or combination preferred.

As an example, let us assume your boat is over 16 feet long and has three hand flares accepted for day and night use. You would be in compliance with the law at that time. After using one hand flare, you would no longer be in compliance. You could rectify this by obtaining one hand-held rocket propelled parachute red flare which is accepted for day and night use.

Persons on vessels over 16 feet long involved in the following activities are exempted from the requirement to carry visual distress signals during daylight hours but must carry the required signals at night:

A person competing in any organized marine parade, regatta, race or similar event.

A person using a manually propelled boat.

A person using a sailboat under 26 feet, of completely open construction, and not equipped with propulsion machinery.

For more information, contact the Coast Guard Boating Safety Office at 223-3607.

ACCEPTED VISUAL DISTRESS SIGNALS

Hand-held red flare distress signals, day and night (1), three required.

Floating orange smoke distress signals (5 minutes), day only, three required.

Pistol-projected parachute red flare distress signals, day and night (2), three required.

Self-contained rocket-propelled parachute red flare distress signals, day and night, three required.

Hand-held orange smoke distress signals, day only, three required.

Floating orange smoke distress signals (15 minutes), day only, three required.

Red aerial pyrotechnic flare distress signals, day and night (3), three required.

Distress signal for boats, orange flag, day only, one required.

Electric distress light for boats, night only, one required.

These signals must have a date of manufacture of October 1, 1980 or later to be acceptable.

These signals require use in combination with a suitable launching device.

These devices may be either self-contained or pistol-launched, and either meteor or parachute assisted type. Some of these signals may require use in combination with a suitable launching device.

per man for the five officers involved ($1,125). Mary Jane said that sufficient money exists in the police budget account to pay the expense.

Henry is uncomfortable with the notion of background investigations. "We've tended to sway on background checks," he said. "Generally we know the people we appoint. We're willing to overlook certain things. I'm not sure a straight investigation would'nt eliminate many people who would make good policemen."

Henry and Rocky expressed concern with psychological tests, wondering who would determine acceptable standards for the officers and what the tests were comprised of.

"We will make the decisions as appointing authority on qualifications, not the chief," said Henry. "If he comes up with the money in his budget — I don't object. I want to see what the tests involve."

In the end, the board decided to request the Chief outline his recommendations in detail; specifying the kinds of physical and psychological tests, what acceptable standards are and where the tests emanate from.

Police grievance

A hearings' officer from the National Labor Relations Board heard both sides of the story in the case of the hiring of a civilian police dispatcher last week.

Police Chief John DeBassio said he expects to know within a week whether a full hearing will be required.

The police union filed a complaint with the NLRB after the chief decided to hire a civilian to fill a slot that had been handled by police in the past.

Obituaries

Bertha Goodwin-Mulhern

Bertha (Thompson) Goodwin-Mulhern, 89, died June 6 in Los Altos, Calif., where she had lived for 10 years. Before moving to California, she had lived in Cohasset for many years.

She was born in West Middle Sable, Shelburne, Nova Scotia, and came to the Boston area in 1919.

She was the wife of the late George James Mulhern.

She leaves three sons, Harold F. Goodwin of Cohasset, George M. Mulhern of Los Altos, and Bradford L. Mulhern of Wakefield; two daughters, Louise Davis of East Millinocket, Maine, and Irma James of Cohasset; one brother, Irwin Thompson of Manchester; 22 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was conducted June 13 at the Sparrell Funeral Home by the Rev. Gerald A. Foote, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Rockland.

Burial was in the Woodside Cemetery.

Donations in her memory may be given to any charity.

Rebecca Quigley

Rebecca (Hunsicker) Quigley, 62, a resident of the town for the past eight years, died unexpectedly June 11 at her home.

She was born in Elkins Park, Pa., and attended schools in Abington, Pa.

She was a member of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

She leaves her husband, Thomas Arthur Quigley; three sons, Donald Arthur Quigley of Old Lyme, Conn., Thomas Richard Quigley of Scarsdale, N.Y., and Drew Lansing Quigley of Plano, Texas, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted June 15 at Sparrell Funeral Home. Burial was in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, 243 Charles St., Boston, 02114.

Fire Facts

A portable fire extinguisher is a good investment for the protection of your family and property. The suggested size and type of extinguisher for the average home is a five pound "multi-purpose" dry chemical.

Multi-purpose means that the extinguisher is effective on all Class A — ordinary combustibles, such as wood, paper and cloth, Class B — flammable liquids, such as gasoline, kerosene, and charcoal lighter fluid, and Class C — electrical fires.

The manufacturer's operating and maintenance instructions should be followed.

The best location for your extinguisher is near a potential fire hazard such as your kitchen, garage, workshop, furnace room, car, truck or boat. In a house or building it should be placed in an easy-to-get-at location near an escape route. In a vehicle or boat, it should be located within easy reach of the operator.

Most extinguishers are sold with a hanging bracket for wall mounting.

Do not let the possession of a fire extinguisher give you a false sense of security. Always call the fire department immediately when a fire breaks out.

When you're a newcomer. . .

By Lois Martin

It's been 10 years since we moved here. That's a milestone because as a family we've not stayed so long in a town. I guess we were part of America's transient society. We left native Maine, a shock then, for reasons that were sound — to find special medical attention for someone who needed it where an appropriate job was available.

Anyway, lovely as Virginia was, there was this hankering to head toward home, New England. And so 10 years ago we were new comers to town. Now we've advanced to 'old' comers. And it's my intent to add many more years on our record here.

But I was thinking about where we'd been and I was reminded of a somewhat supercilious notion I've had to organize a slumber party of old friends I knew in Sterling, Virginia. You know we have ages and stages and the stage of our time there was one of small children, houses close together and friends that were also that close.

It's not easy being new anywhere. There's a time period needed to feel at home in a new house. Never mind a new neighborhood and town. And there's a smattering of loneliness in that lag. Fortunately we share it and that gets us beyond it.

Sterling is a suburban development near Dulles Airport. It probably had all the good and bad features of such a community Residents there seemed to have come from every state in the country. On that basis it was an expansive experience.

During our first week there in 1967, one son was four and downright wanting for a friend. He asked if he could go find one from the nearby houses.

He sallied forth in favorite hand-me-down cowboy boots which were the rage back then. I saw him approach a yard next door hoping to find someone as short as he was. Within a few minutes he returned with a woman in tow. He'd brought home a friend for me, he said.

It was a good selection. Marge Trask was from Minnesota, married, mother of four boys. And she and I became the friends we still are. I remember the moment they entered the door, I was chasing a naked toddler down the hall and I hoped that this woman would tolerate a mother who couldn't keep clothes on a wee streaker.

She could. She'd chased a few herself and many's the time she helped chase mine.

Marge and I ended up working together to teach undereducated, foreign-born and illiterate adults in that county. It was clearly one of the greatest privileges of my life. And she shared that enthusiasm.

Then I met Peggy Day, who was actually from the state of Virginia, a gentle attractive woman who was so well organized I should have learned from her. And there was delightfully whacky Betty Hammond from Colorado, hysterical Darlene Spencer from Iowa and exhaustingly clever and crazy Joan Konz from London, England.

We all had small children, senses of humor, appreciation of friendships, and one whale of a good time in that stage together.

I don't want to live there now. I like it here in this passage for the moment. But, gee, I'd like to meet that gang somewhere for a get together. Maybe Chicago because we're all scattered again and that's central.

But if any of you are a new comer, a dight disoriented and lonely, send out a small son to find a friend. He'll do a good job and 10 years from now you, too, can organize a slumber party to see if anyone's improved. I know none of that covy of friends has changed. And I'm grateful.

First some facts. School bass are most everywhere and last week were taken from the Green Harbor and Brant Rock jetties, the North River, Hull Gut and from the islands around Hingham. Bucktails will still produce.

Should you be without boat, take a drive down to the Pilgrim I Power plant in Manomet and get way out on the jetty. Stripers there are going for sand eels and silver Rebels. Be careful not to get tied up in those boulders pushing through the surface.

The report on flounder is mixed. Still some in Quincy Bay and Hingham Harbor, and a friend of ours last week caught 30 plus in Cohasset Harbor but made us promise not to say where. So we won't, except to point out that Cohasset Harbor is not that big.

Flounder are also available in the North River, east of the Route 3-A bridge on an incoming tide and off Power Point bridge in Duxbury. The Powder Point bridge, incidentally, is among the more overrated fishing spots along the South Shore but you can get flounder and an occasional stripe or pollock. The A Street Pier in Hull will provide far more action.

Pollock? Yeah, they're most everywhere too and can be moderately fun-filled if you chase them with light tackle. One good spot is off those big, big boulders at the mouth of the North River.

The fact that small stripers are most everywhere in the Nawth indicate that bluefish haven't arrived in large numbers yet. But they're coming. Last week, a Marshfield fisherman caught more than 20 off the Race at Provincetown; his toughest problem was giving them away.

Race Point is traditionally the best spot for bluefish throughout the summer. Should you want to join the fleet there, leave early and be prepared to get down deep. Rebels will work well, but then so will most anything when the blues are feeding.

FRESHWATER

There is good and bad news on the freshwater front. First the good...the Atlantic salmon, which nearly disappeared from New England waters, is making a solid comeback in the Connecticut River, with record-breaking numbers lifted over the Holyoke Dam this spring. Shad were also reported in large numbers in the Connecticut.

The comeback of the salmon is fortuitous because this noble species is among the best gamefish we have. Its return, however, will take time as well as money from the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife.

The bad news is acid rain. It is not a hollow threat and is already the cause of what are called dying ponds on the Cape and in Plymouth. Several ponds in those areas are now considered too acidic to support rainbow trout, and if the tide isn't turned they will soon be devoid of all fish.

In the Adirondacks of New York, more than 200 ponds are now sterile as a result of acid rain. Their death means no fish, no plant life, no insects...no nothing but contaminated water.

On a brighter note, if you should want to catch a calico bass, try the Scituate Reservoir on Route 3-A (on the right as you drive north). A Mepps or a worm and bobber will produce; fish along the road leading into the pond and make sure you have a license.

Cohasset Recreation Program

Rather, children should be dropped off at Town Hall at 10:15 a.m. 4-5 year olds should be picked up at Town Hall at 11:30 a.m. 6-12 year olds should bring lunch. They will be walked back to playground at 11:30 a.m. to have lunch and continue with afternoon activities.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 21

Final day cookout, Barnes Little League field. Both programs will meet at Barnes Field at 10 a.m. Cook-out, games, swimming, (for 6-12 group and special activities will be on tap until 3 p.m.) A fee of 50 cents will be collected from each child during the week, to help offset costs of food. Parents may donate baked goods.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Rainy Days: On mornings when it is raining before 9 a.m. the 4-5 year old playground and youth tennis programs will not be held.

The 6-12 year old program will meet at CHS gym if it is raining before 9 a.m. Children should not bring lunch that day and must be picked up at noon. 6-12 program only.

If it should rain after 9 a.m., children will go into Osgood School (both programs). Programs will end at noon if it is still raining.

If it should rain before your tennis lesson, but after 9 a.m., youth lesson is cancelled. Rain before 9 a.m. all classes are cancelled.

Drop-Off, Pick-Up: Staff members will indicate drop-off and pick-up areas at the school. Please adhere to specified drop-off and pick-up areas for safety purposes.

Clothing: Children should come dressed appropriately as weather dictates. There should be no bare feet and sneakers are advised. On swim days, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, children should wear bathing suits under outer clothing. Hats and caps are advised as protection from the sun.

Arts and Crafts: Arts and crafts will be offered on a regular basis to those children who wish to participate, both programs.

Special Needs: Parents of special needs children should speak to the director of recreation, Jack Worley, at the time of registration.

To all persons interested in the Estate of LORENZO LONGO late of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk and to the Attorney General of said Commonwealth, if required.

A petition has been presented in the above captioned matter of a certain instrument purporting to be the last will of said deceased praying that LOUIS L. LONGO of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk be appointed executor named in the will without sureties on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on 7/22/81.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Judge of said Court at Dedham, the fifth day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-one.

Paying the school bills

Calling the issue of how the school committee pays its bills a "tempest in a teapot," School Superintendent Eugene Crowell recommended the committee return to the old system.

The new system went into effect last month. Monday, on the superintendent's suggestion, the vote was rescinded.

It means the committee will be forced to hold summer sessions to sign the bills. The new and abandoned system would have allowed bill payment without going through the full committee.

Martha Gjesteby, school committee member, said she spoke out because she, as a committee member, is responsible and she wants to know what bills are being paid.

"I'm doubly concerned now at the end of the school year we unexpectedly have $75,000 to spend. I didn't have the opportunity to sign any warrants."

Crowell prefaced his response by saying he didn't want to anger anyone but the $75,000 was not a windfall.

He said the extra money is going to purchase supplies needed for the next school year. The school committee decided to keep an aide for Grade 4 and a reading teacher not budgeted for.

The money was saved by not hiring this year to replace staff, doubling up duties and putting off capital outlay items, Crowell said.

Recreation Program

meet the same time on Wednesday; likewise, Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Fridays will be special instruction, clinics, and tournament days. Also, a Nelta sponsored youth tennis tournament will be conducted again this year.

Soccer Camp: A comprehensive summer soccer camp for ages 6-18 is currently being anticipated and planned. Details will be available separately.

SUMMER FILM SERIES

All films will be free of charge, held at the Town Hall auditorium, and will being at 7:30 p.m. sharp!

July 9, Brian's Song, ends at 8:50 p.m.

July 16, Dracula, Dr. Jackle & Mr. Hyde, Hunchback of Notre Dame, ends at 8:55 p.m.

July 23, three J. Cousteau Films, ends at 9 p.m.

July 30, C. Chaplin, Laurel & Hardy, B. Keaton, and W.C. Fields Films, ends at 8:45 p.m.

Aug. 6, 500,000 Years Beneath The Sea, ends at 8:45 p.m.

Aug. 13, Emperor's Nightinggale, ends at 8:30 p.m.

Aug. 20, 20,000 Leagues Beneath the Sea, ends at 8:30 p.m.

All residents are invited to the films that are co-sponsored by the Cohasset Public Library and the Cohasset Recreation Department. Younger children must be accompanied by an adult or older sibling. Children must be picked up promptly at the indicated ending times.

The Music Circus registrations will be open to children in both programs. We will be attending the show at a group rate cost. Reservations must be made two weeks prior to each performance that we plan to attend. Payments must be made at the Recreation Department office. Call the office to confirm the payment date for the performance you choose. No late registrations will be accepted as our reservations must be made the same day payment is required. All payments must be by check, no cash accepted.

Aug. 13, Goldilocks and the Three Bears, $2.45.

Aug. 20, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, $2.45.

Children will gather at the playground at the usual time (9 a.m.). We will be leaving from the playground at about 10 a.m. Those children who do not wish to attend the Music Circus may stay at the playground as regular activities will be going on.

BAND CONCERT SERIES

All concerts will be held on the Town Common, free of charge, at 7:30 p.m. If inclement weather forces a cancellation concert will be held on a new date which will be announced by local news media.

School appointments

The school committee appointed the following staff members this week: Carolyn Curtis, home economics: Joan Gatturna, library coordinator; Dorothy Wondolowski, parttime gifted and talented teacher; Maureen Alcott, half-time English teacher.

Frances Cronin will teach as a half-time English teacher in a team approach at her request. In the past school officials were reluctant to accept two half-time teachers for a full slot.

Chelsea resident wins Josiah's Jitney

Josiah's Jitney, that child-sized Model T the Historical Society had up on chances for the past few months, was won by someone in Chelsea.

The raffle was held Saturday afternoon at the Hanover branch of the Quincy Cooperative Bank. The car was donated by the bank to benefit historical societies in five communities.

Bank employes dressed in hoop-skirted gowns of the Colonial era greeted the public throughout the day as part of the open house held in honor of the bank's 25 years in Hanover.

The small car was named for Josiah Quincy, father of cooperative banking. Francis Mitchell said the raffle raised more than $6,500. Which means each historical society will receive more than $1,000.

The project was run for Lothrop House in Cohasset, Adah Hall House in Pembroke, Old Oaken Bucket Home in Scituate, Jacobs Farmhouse in Norwell and Stetson House in Hanover.

Smaller 1st Grade at Osgood

aren't ready for Grade 1 could be due to the times when families are less stable.

Crowell said the team teaching approach in the L-shaped room at Osgood "may be a limiting format."

He said that may have to be changed "if the products are transitional classes."

He was careful to point out that he wasn't suggesting the format was the problem.

The Kindergarten class this year at Osgood is broken into four sessions. There are 71 children enrolled. When the budget was established, predictions were that there would be 80 children enrolled in Kindergarten next year and 75 in Grade 1.

Parents attending this week's school committee asked that the low percentages be kept to provide a solid foundation for the children.

Some classes in the high school will also run with low percentages next year. But those classes will be run for single courses, according to Jack Langmaid, committee member. The single courses would involve subjects with small enrollments like A.P. Biology.

At the close of lengthy discussion with only Langmaid questioning the ratio, the committee appointed the following non-tenured teachers for the coming year: Jane Corry, Doreen Flynn, Elizabeth Cisneros, Carol Lash, Antonette Jillson and Virginia MacDonald.

Parking fees rising, more signs going up

Soon Jerusalem Road will be posted with towing area signs, beginning at Black Rock Road and going down to Linden Drive.

There are quite a few new tow zones soon to be marked for enforcement. Police Chief John DeBassio and the selectmen agree on the need to go one step beyond the mere tagging of illegally parked cars.

And the fees for many parking violations are up. It used to be that the fee for a parking ticket at Sandy Beach was $20 but some parking violations elsewhere in town carried fees of $3 or $5.

Now the new system is that fines for parking illegally by the Cunningham or Mill River bridges, near Black Rock or at Sandy Beach, are $20. All other parking violations in town from double parking to parking too close to the corner carry fines of $10.

There will be no towing until signs are purchased and erected clearly designating the hazardous areas.

Chief DeBassio expects that will be about four weeks from now. He said he isn't sure whether money for the signs will come from his or the selectmen's budget.

He explained that the parking of unauthorized vehicles around the town's beaches has always been a problem. With 2½ there's a concern on the part of local residents who want the situation straightened out.

Some parts of town, particularly Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road, could present access problems for emergency vehicles during times when cars are illegally parked.

Will the residents of those areas be happier with a batch of signs that warn that the area is a tow zone?

The chief thinks so.

His men are already involved in a parking enforcement program, heavily ticketing the parking violators.

"B. we haven't issued as many tickets as people

Driver Don Salvaggi (R) surveys the scene after his gasoline truck flipped on Spring Street. (Greg Derr photo)

Gasoline truck flips, firefighters avert disaster

The quick action of firefighters kept an accident from exploding into tragedy.

It began at 10:33 a.m. when the fire department was called to Spring Street. A tank truck tipped over, sliding into a six-family house.

Within minutes the first engine crew to arrive had checked on the driver, who was fine, evacuated the only three people in the house nearby, searched the building for others and shut off all possible sources of ignition, including the electricity.

Meanwhile Fire Chief Charles Peipenbrink was at fire headquarters in Scituate. He headed back into town as soon as the call rang in to direct the carefully structured plans to contain the gasoline.

Crews from Eastern Edison and the gas company were called in, electricity and gas were shut off at the apartment house and one house nearby.

The tank truck with 4,800 gallons of the highly explosive fuel stayed on its side throughout the morning and into the afternoon.

Fire fighters from Hingham, Hull and Scituate brought mutual aid. A total of 10 pieces of fire apparatus worked at the scene.

The truck, Quality Trucking out of Boston, was making three deliveries to private contractors in town. His schedule called for stops at Sesitito's, Gaffey's Marine and one of the Pape's.

According to police reports of the accident, the driver, Donald Salvaggi, claimed he was traveling down the hill from Pond Street when he realized his brakes were not working.

Salvaggi told police he swerved to avoid what he thought was a person at the side of the road. The truck flipped on its side and skidded into the Local developer introduces town's 1st cluster plan

Plans are on the drawing board for the town's first cluster development.

A 12 plus acre site off Cedar Street, near the town landfill, is the location. Joseph Crosson of Jerusalem Road is the developer.

Most of the rest is still sketched in pencil.

In April the annual town meeting gave the concept of cluster zoning the go ahead. Last week the planning board sat down with a developer and his architect to discuss the way the plans should be drawn.

At the time town meeting approved the new zoning concept, officials talked about the benefits the town would derive from better use of land. In return for the right to put in some multi-family units and closely spaced homes, the town avoids pork chop lots, grid pattern roadways and has control over the design standards. At least 35 percent of the land in a cluster development must remain commonly-owned open land.

In the Cedar Street development, expectations are there will be about eight multi-family units in a total somewhere around 20 units.

Crosson, himself, doesn't know the number of units yet.

"It depends on a number of things, the board of health, the planning board, I don't know how many units they'll let me have."

The bylaw on cluster limits the number of multi-family units to 30 percent of the total units in the project.

Echo Design International of Cambridge is handling the architectural work. Crosson said preliminary sketches and some degree of detail will be available next week.

The date for the public hearing will be advertised in advance. Barbara Power, planning board chairman, said she does not yet know when it will take place.

The opinion of people who have heard about the site to date is positive.

As one official said, "If the project were in some other community it would be the head of a pin, but it's a very small geographic area. Here the project is

Cohasset's week

Concrete bids

Bids for bituminous concrete for street resurfacing, and for disposal area landfill cover were opened last week. The concrete bids were: Tilcon-Warren Inc. of Brockton, $32.30 per ton; Old Colony Crushed Stone and Construction Co., Inc. of Quincy, $29.65 per ton.

On landfill cover the bids were: Sylvester A. Ray Inc., Marshfield, $2.80 daily cover, $2.80 intermediate cover; Wethers Inc. of Plymouth, $3.24 for daily cover per cubic yard, $3.33 for intermediate cover.

All bids were referred to Highway Department surveyor Harold Litchfield.

Chinese restaurant opens

A new restaurant, serving Chinese and Polynesian cuisine, will open in the fall on Route 3A in the building formerly operated as a Ground Round.

Ko Ko Island restaurant won the needed alcoholic license from the selectmen last week. The actual sale of the property goes through next week and then extensive renovations are planned.

Billy Lee of Newton will be manager of the restaurant. Lee worked for the Mai Tai in Braintree for nine years. Principals in the operation include Allan Lew and Robert Wong.

The Ground Round went out of business early in the spring. It has been operating at that location since 1974. Before then the establishment had been Signorelli's restaurant, operated for nearly 20 years by that local family.

Water money

Money continues to trickle into the water department as the end of the fiscal year fast approaches.

The money is needed in hand by the end of the fiscal year to keep the books balanced.

The delinquent bill payers — down to the $300 level — have all been served with notice that either they pay up or their water will be shut off.

So far as one deadline after another has passed, all the customers are at least making an attempt to pay the bills, according to Ben Curley, water superintendent.

"We can't turn off the water while they're trying to pay," he commented.

Curley said some more discussion on the whole issue of bills will come up soon at meetings of the water commissioners.

Now that interest is charged after 90 days, bills are paid more rapidly.

The latest thought — still in the proposal stage — is to charge interest or a flat fine after 30 days.

Beach sticker costs

There was a story in another newspaper that described a woman from Hingham as having paid $100 to buy a guest parking sticker for Sandy Beach.

"I saw that story and I think what they meant to say was that the woman was a member of the Sandy Beach Association," Police Chief John DeBassio said.

The beach stickers cost $10 for residents, limited term guests and members of the Sandy Beach Association — owners of Sandy Beach. The difference is that members of Sandy Beach Association also pay a membership fee to their club.

Contract to Goff

Selectmen last week accepted the lowest bid, conforming to specifications for insulation projects to be done at Government Island and the Bates Building. The award went to Edward F. Goff Co. for $2,540.

Boost for Lothrop House

The maintenance funds of four historic South Shore houses have been increased by a total of $6,635, thanks to Josiah's Jitney, a half-size Model T automobile equipped with a working gasoline engine.

The four houses — the Thayer Birthplace in Braintree, the Stetson House in Hanover, the Old Oaken Bucket Homestead in Scituate, the Lothrop House in Cohasset — are maintained by their respective towns' historical societies which had been given the little roadster by the Quincy Cooperative Bank.

The societies sold almost 20,000 chances to win Josiah's Jitney (named for Josiah Quincy from whom the Quincy Cooperative took its name).

The inning name, Jean Chapman of Chelsea, was drawn at the 25th anniversary celebration held by the Hanover office of Quincy Cooperative Bank, Routes 53 and 139, June 13.

Curly water supt.

Ben Curley was officially promoted to water superintendent by action of the water commissioners last week.

Curley has been serving as acting water superintendent since January 1. Edwin Pratt, former superintendent, retired in December.

Curley's new appointment takes effect Wednesday, July 1.

The other new appointment in the water department is Randy Sylvester of Hill Street. Sylvester was hired last week to work as treatment plant operator.

He graduated recently from the American International College in Springfield with a major in biology and minors in chemistry and math.

Sylvester will have a year to obtain state certification as a treatment plant operator.

"With his background, he shouldn't have any trouble," Curley said.

Golden at S. Shore

Dr. Steven Golden, a physician in family practice with offices at 86 Summer St., has been appointed to the associate/provisional staff at South Shore Hospital.

He is a graduate of Harvard College and received his medical degree from State University of New York Upstate Medical Center, Syracuse.

Dr. Golden served his internship and residency at St. Joseph's Hospital in Syracuse, and he is certified by the American Board of Family Practice.

SPINAL SCREENING
AT THE
FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC
JUNE 2 through JUNE 30

1. Head tilt
2. High shoulder
3. Low scapula
4. Spinal curvature
5. Low hip

Potential Danger signals of Irritated Nerves:

- Headaches, dizziness, blurred vision
- Neck pain, tight muscles, spasms
- Shoulder pain, pain down arms, numbness in hands
- Pain between shoulders, difficult breathing, abdominal pains
- Lower back pain, hip pain, pain down leg

Family Practice of Chiropractic is offering spinal check-ups and postural analysis for early detection of back problems.

TIME magazine says 75 million Americans have backache, and with each passing year, this astronomical figure grows by 7,000,000.

Backache has become a catastrophic issue with the insurance companies and with our national economy. It is one of the top claims for disability. In addition to this, arthritis and rheumatic complaints affect 77 percent of our adult population, and every year millions sustain severe neck injuries from automobile collisions.

With the use of a few simple painless tests we will be able to determine the condition of the spine. Early detection of back problems is the best prevention for future back ailments.

The spinal screening will be offered without charge or obligation, at the

Dr. John P. Hayes, Jr.
Family Practice of Chiropractic, P.C.
353 Washington Street [Route 53]
Norwell, Mass. 02061

Doctor will be available for answering questions on treatment and prevention of back problems.

Please call 659-7989 for an appointment and bring a copy of this announcement with you.

The good fight

The snipers are at it again, this time taking aim at State Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray and her correct-thinking stand on the casino gambling issue. In recent weeks the Cohasset Republican has become the target of unyielding abuse from pro-casino forces who, in damning the opposition, continue to confuse fact with half truth while issuing siren calls about who represents whom.

It all falls under the category of rubbish.

From this vantage Mrs. Murray is very much on the right side and the fact that her good work on the issue has drawn such hysteria from the pro-gambling lobby underscores just how effective she is. Instead of another swipe, she rates high praise.

The latest scheme of the casino lobby is a late-filled bill introduced (with great reluctance) by State Sen. Allan McKinnon at the request of Hull Selectmen. The bill has received the four fifths vote it needs for consideration in the State Senate and is now awaiting similar approval in the House.

Rep. Murray is staying close to see that approval is not forthcoming. Her diligence is such that she has taken to dining from a brown bag to ensure she not stray too far from the House Floor and potential back-door tactics by the opposition. At this point, it is a most necessary procedural fight.

Pro-casino forces are mounting an impressive lobby on Beacon Hill which means money to spread around and it will be spread around. Anyone who doesn't think so should see the tooth fairy the next time they lose a molar.

Rep. Murray is waging a good fight here and representing her constituents — all her constituents — in the process. The sniping won't stop, but then we hope she won't either.

Please pay early

Anyone paying a water bill between now and next Tuesday can pat themselves on the back for a civic good deed.

That doesn't imply bills can't or needn't be paid after that date.

It's just that the fiscal year is closing Tuesday, June 30, and the water department needs all the revenue it can get before the financial new year to keep its books in order.

Ben Curley, the new water department superintendent, has done a marvelous job bringing attention to the financial problems slow payment causes for the water department.

His get tough attitude that forced some to begin payments or face speedy water shut-off was the medicine needed.

We wish him good luck.

Rates Toma talk effective

Letters

To my friends in Cohasset:

Last week I had the pleasure of seeing Dave Toma's presentation to the junior high school. As a former drug abuser and a graduate of Cohasset High School, I feel that he was very effective. I think his message was not about fear and intimidation — it was about self-worth, people caring about people, and love.

I learned how to smoke pot in the men's room at school when I was in eighth grade. I learned how to "toot" cocaine in the bus box downtown. For those of you who don't believe it when Mr. Toma says 80 percent of the kids in school have smoked pot, all I have to say is please believe it because I know — I've smoked with them. If your point of view is "just because there are dangers out there in the world doesn't mean our children are into them," then you can congratulate yourselves for the 20 percent that don't somke pot — yet. They're probably still in sixth grade!

If you heard the message about caring and loving, then look at the 80 percent who do — they're your children too. And let them know you care. Like I said before — drugs and alcohol are a poor substitute for love.

When I gave up drug use I learned that first I had to have a feeling of self-worth and then I had to care enough about myself to quit. My congratulations to all the young men and ladies who discovered enough of the good in themselves last week such that they felt that they were worth quitting drug use.

It's nice to know that there are people in this town who cared enough to invite Mr. Toma to talk. But remember — he does no magic on his own — only with the care and commitment of the community.

I speak for, and I am, "your child."

Thwarting the will of Hull

[The following is a copy of a letter to State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray by VOICE, a pro-casino group from Hull. Ed.]

Dear Representative Murray:

Your recent actions to thwart the will of the overwhelming majority of the residents of the Town of Hull by lobbying against admittance of the late-filed gambling bill goes against your sworn oath to represent the interests of your constituents.

The people of Hull have spoken loud and clear on the issue of casino gambling — by a two to one margin in 1977, by a four to one margin at an April, 1981 Special Town Meeting and by defeating in May the incumbent person on the Board of Selectmen, who was opposed to a casino, and electing two pro-casino candidates.

The townspeople of Hingham and Cohasset haven't voted at a town meeting or on an election referendum — in fact, a referendum question on the 1981 election ballot was withdrawn in Cohasset and a town meeting warrant article in Hingham was withdrawn. Why? Perhaps the answer is that the people of those two towns aren't as vehemently opposed to Hull having one casino as the anti-casino forces are contending. Why else would they petition to have the two questions removed?

In essence you have not only ignored the demonstrated will of the people of Hull, but have led the fight to block them at every turn, based on unsubstantiated reports of strong opposition.

Your most recent efforts to block admittance of the late-filed casino bill has in effect disenfranchised more than 80 percent of Hull residents and prevented them from having even a chance to present their case.

As an American I always was taught we had a government of the people, for the people and by the people. Your actions have caused me to wonder if that sacred principle still applies.

Sincerely,
Mary A. Belyea
Acting Chairman, VOICE

Physical fitness at the Community Center

Does your preschooler spend as much time outdoors as he/she needs to? Studies show that many young children have not developed many of the physical skills they need for physical fitness and future success in school.

The staff at Camp Quonahasit has studied these theories and designed a program which can help young children to develop skills in balance, strength and agility as well as stretching and strengthening muscles which can cause postural deficiencies. Many of the activities incorporated into the Camp Quonahasit program have been recommended by Mary Benbow, Occupational Therapist for the Cohasset Public Schools. The program is planned to be a fun way to improve the physical skills of young children.

In addition to physical skill development, children from three to five years old will participate in creative movement and rhythms, water and sand play, an introduction to games, and ball, hoop and beanbag activities. At least one morning of each session will be devoted to nature activities, as well.

The camp program begins on July 6. Three two-week sessions will be held at the Cohasset Community Center. Children will attend from 9 a.m. to noon daily. The program is directed by Sandra Putnam, Director of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School. She will be assisted by Ruth Ann Sargent, who will provide a "Tumble Tots" program, and Jane Bishop of the nursery school staff. Enrollment is limited, so parents are urged to register soon. Call Mrs. Putnam at 545-3002 for information.

Fire Facts

Cooking-out during the summer can be an enjoyable experience if steps are taken to prevent tragic burns and fires.

Because of the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning, as well as for practical fire safety reasons, charcoal cooking should always be done out-of-doors. The charcoal fire is not a hazard by itself outside. It becomes dangerous when a child or adult is burned as a result of coming too close to the grill.

The most common fire incidents involving barbecue grills happen when the user ignites the charcoal with a flammable liquid not designed for that purpose. Charcoal lighter fluid should be applied to the charcoal BEFORE anyone attempts to start the fire. After the lighter fluid has been applied to the charcoal, close the container and store it away to prevent anyone from attempting to "freshen up" the fire by pouring lighter fluid on smouldering coals. Even if the fluid isn't ignited when it strikes the charcoal, it will be heated, producing vapors that are as explosive as gasoline. Never use gasoline, gasoline lantern fuel or similar flammable liquids to start a fire.

Also, when using the popular Liquid Propane Gas barbecue grills, check to make sure that all connections between the tank and grill are tight to assure against leaks. An LP-Gas leak could mean an explosion and flash fire and severe burns to anyone near the grill when it is ignited.

Cooking-out can be an enjoyable summertime activity, and a few simple fire prevention measures will assure a pleasant time for all.

Orthodox Church to celebrate the 4th

July 4th is a national holiday. This year, however, it will be an international celebration. Thanks to the efforts of Cohasset's new Greek Orthodox Church, the South Shore will be treated to a living example of a Greek "Taverna," an event designed to delight all the senses, with the sight and smell of whole lamb roasting on an open fire, the tastes of Mediterranean delicacies and sweets, and the sounds and the fun of dancing to traditional Greek music.

It all begins on Saturday, July 4 at 11 a.m. till 7 p.m., and will continue on Sunday, July 5 from noon until dusk, on the church grounds on Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Group spokesman, Ernie Sophis, says, "We held our first Taverna last year on the Fourth, and it was successful beyond our wildest imaginings. People just couldn't get enough. This year's two-day format is a response to try to satisfy everyone. Similarly, we didn't have dancing last year, and everyone cried for it, so this year we've got a dance floor. Of course we're very pleased about that addition. Anyone who has seen Zorba knows how we Hellenes feel about dancing!"

☐Samuel Wakeman, an account executive at the Boston insurance firm Rollins, Burdick, Hunter, has been elected president of the Governor Dummer Academy Alumni Association.

An alumnus of the class of 1961, he was elected to this position because of his outstanding contributions to the school.

Governor Dummer Academy in Byfield with 4,000 active alumni is located on a 300 acre colonial style architecture campus 35 miles north of Boston.

☐Recently Tad Coffin, former Olympic Gold Medalist, returned to Ponkapoag Pony Club of Milton, to conduct a series of stadium jumping clinics.

He worked with Marley Rabstejnek, Liz Conklin, both of Cohasset and others. The group was told to visualize proper technique before beginning a jump. Each rider analyzed her jumps and set personal goals for herself. Points that were discussed included balance, breathing, visual focus, and the necessity of a warmup period for the rider as well as the pony.

☐Scott McLean of Cohasset, who majored in Food Science and Nutrition, graduated recently from the University of Rhode Island.

☐Cohasset students graduating from Thayer Academy at the 104th commencement are: Andrew Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Chase, and Peter Klier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Klier. Andrew Chase graduated cum laude. He was on the Honor Roll for the year.

☐Douglas Fauth and Paul McKeough received bachelor's degrees from Fairfield University during the university's 31st commencement, May 24.

☐With a time of 34:16, Mary Cowan of Linden Rd., Cohasset finished third in the Women's 40-49 Division at the third annual Celebrity Love Run held recently in Boston by the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Mary was one of over 400 runners who joined local television, radio and sports personalities in the run around the Esplanade.

☐Patty and Jimmy Gallagher traveled to Nantucket recently. They stayed in a housekeeping cottage, which they felt was an economical alternative to hotel lodgings, being that they could cook two of their three meals there.

One place they had dinner was Easy Street on Steamboat Wharf, which had the best Shrimp Scampi they'd ever tasted.

While there Jeff Forsdick and Barbara Sheerin stopped by for a visit.

☐Liz and Jeff Bates picked Saturday, one of the wettest days we've had in a while to move into their new home on Highland Avenue.

☐Charlie Toppan celebrated his second birthday recently.

☐Marcia Murphy and Marie Kenerson will run a summer reading clinic for children and young adults with specific language disabilities, including Dyslexia. Both trained at Massachusetts General Hospital for a year's internship especially geared for reading problems. The program will be at the high school, but testing is by appointment. Call 383-0839 for further information.

☐Kevin O'Brien and Diane Kurtz were married on Saturday morning June 20th. A reception followed at the Bridgwaye Inn in Marshfield.

☐Jeff Forsdick and Curt Smalzel came in second to last in the "Member's Guest Tournament" at the Cohasset Golf Club. Jeff feels they should give out trophies for those who had the most fun.

☐Ethel and Noel Edwards were seen having a quite brunch at the Log and Line Sunday afternoon.

☐Kathy Davis and Don Trisler have house guests visiting from Ohio for a week, James and Joanne Schieltz. They stopped by here last summer for only a day, but felt they had to come back for a longer stay.

☐Todd Fitzpatrick, Cindy Spooner and David Schultz have advanced to the finals of the Massachusetts Junior Olympics. These three students competed June 21st at Boston College for the state championships. Tadd and David both advanced to the finals in the softball throw and Cindy advanced to the finals in the standing long jump.

☐Madeline Roy, who will be a senior in September, was recently elected captain of the girls varsity basketball team at CHS. She was the leading rebounder and most consistent player on last year's club. She will captain the 1981-82 club.

☐Karen Froio of Surrey Drive is the new captain of the 1982 CHS softball team. A varsity performer for several season's, Karen hit. 448 and banged out 34 hits this past season. Miss Froio will be a senior next fall.

☐Mary O'Brien and Michelle Shea are co-captains of the 1981 CHS varsity soccer team. Michelle was an all-league performer as a fullback last year. Mary was a standout at the halfback position. Both are seniors.

☐Carol and Bob Begin said every weekend isn't taken yet this summer, so anyone who'd like to invite them to a party feel free to call.

☐Pam Weisenfluh and Sue Douglas, both 16, and juniors at CHS will run a summer play group for 3 to 5 year-olds at 110 Atlantic Ave. from 8:30 to 12:30 Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The group starts June 22 and will run through August 21. Only 10 children will be accepted.

On good days they plan on trips to the beach and on rainy days they plan for arts and crafts, stories and film strips etc. Pam ran a group last year and is back by popular demand. The tuition is $15 a week and you can sign your child up for one week or any number of weeks.

☐Katie Begin and Amy Russell were in their first dance class review last week in Hingham. I heard they were both great.

"I expect excellent cooperation from people living in the areas," the chief said. "They are the people we are worrying about reaching in the event of an emergency."

The other no parking zones designated to become two zones are: the entrances and exits of the Sandy Beach parking lot; Atlantic Avenue from Sheldon Road to number 380; Nichols Road on both sides from Atlantic Avenue to 121; Wadleigh Park Road; Forest Avenue extension; Forest Avenue on both sides from Jerusalem Road to Spindrift Lane, both sides of Atlantic Avenue from 215 to Hobart Lane; both sides of Beach Street from Atlantic Avenue to the causeway; both sides of Border Street from the front of the Mill River Marine, just before the bridge, to number 97. That last stretch includes the entrance to Government Island.

medium-sized."

While the land near the landfill has found only slow development until now, most people in town know there is talk of closing the dump a few years down the road.

Some sort of regional waste disposal system seems to be the most likely approach. And there is some talk of a regional network buying the private dump at Cohasset Heights, since the dump is for sale for $5 million.

Closing the dump would certainly increase the worth of Cedar Street property.

The number of lots in a cluster plan may not exceed the number of building lots that would be allowed under conventional zoning. Steep slopes and wetlands are not counted in the total acreage that combines to develop that number.

The advantage to the developer is that frontage requirements and lot size are reduced, thus decreasing the cost of providing roadways and utilities.

Obituary

Emily Gleason

Emily B. (Clapp) Gleason, 86, of Cohasset, a longtime library trustee and a civic leader in the Greater Boston area, died at home June 3.

She was born in Dorchester and had lived in Cohasset for more than 60 years.

She was a 1912 graduate of Newton High School, and a Phi Beta Kappa and 1916 Smith College graduate. From 1935 to 1938 she was president of the Alumni Association and until 1947 was a trustee of the college.

She had long been active in the Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts and the World Affairs Council of Boston. She had also been chairman of Smith's 75th anniversary campaign.

For more than 50 years she was a trustee of Cohasset Public Library and active in the Cohasset Discussion Club. She was a member of Cohasset Golf Club, Cohasset Yacht Club, College Club, South Shore Smith Club and First Parish Church.

She leaves her husband, Hollis Gleason; a daughter, Mrs. John M. (Eleanor) Bleakie of Cohasset; a son, Herbert P. Gleason, former city of Boston corporation counsel; and eight grandchildren. She was also the mother of Howard Gleason, who was lost with the submarine USS Trigger in World War II, and of the late Edward Gleason.

A memorial service was conducted June 7 in First Parish Church.

Marriage

Evans-VanLenten

In Second Congregational Church, Cohasset, Jill Kathleen VanLenten of Cohasset became the recent bride of David K. Evans, also of Cohasset. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George VanLenten of Marshfield. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Kenneth Evans, also of Marshfield. The Rev. John Benbow officiated at the noon ceremony which was followed by a reception in VFW hall, Abington.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. Nancy Sullivan of Carver, as her matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Regina Baronas of Marshfield and Lisa Farrell of Weymouth.

Brian Evans of Marshfield was best man. Bruce Fife of Scituate and Frank Law of Marshfield were ushers.

The bride, a graduate of Cardinal Mooney High School, Sarasota, Fla., is a waitress at Barnside, Hanover. The bridegroom, a graduate of the University of Vermont, is a second chef at The Greenhouse, Cohasset.

Marriage

Durant-Buckley

A wedding trip to Nantucket and Bermuda followed the recent wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Allen Durant in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. The bride is the former Donna Patricia Buckley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Buckley of Cohasset. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley Durant of Cohasset. A reception at Cohasset Golf Club followed the nuptial Mass.

Both are graduates of Cohasset High School. The bride is employed at Smith, Monsees, Penza, Inc. The bridegroom is employed at New England Energy Alternatives.

Ripley Nursing fair

The Ripley Road Nursing Home will hold its annual summer fair on the grounds of the home at 25 Ripley Road, Cohasset, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, July 18.

Proceeds from the fair go to a fund for the benefit of Ripley Road Nursing Home residents and provide for outings and trips. Last year residents enjoyed a boat trip to Boston as well as a fishing trip in the harbor.

Donations for the baked-food table and hand--made crafts table are solicited, and a white elephant table welcomes any bric-a-brac in usable condition.

Residents who can volunteer a little time to help with the summer fair project should call the nursing home at 383-0419 and ask for Mrs. Harrold, administrator or Mrs. Locke, activities director.

Sewer connections

People adding rooms, even bathrooms, to single family homes that are sewer-connected do not need permission of the sewer commission.

Most everyone else needs that permission.

The board needs to issue a permit whenever a change in building use indicated the waste water flow may be increased.

Owners of single-family homes that are sewer connected need permission to change to multi-family. Business owners need permission for use change.

The town has been operating under a ban on new connections since 1978. Court action is forcing the town to either update its sewer plant or build a new one.

Cohasset scientist to join research team

Richard Guilfoyle of Nichols Road, recent winner of the Sigma Xi National Honor Society Award for his distinguished doctoral dissertation, will begin work this summer on a post-doctoral project at the famous Cold Spring Harbor Laboratories on Long Island, N.Y.

He will be collaborating with Doctors Thomas Broker and Louise Chow, at the laboratory directed by the famous scientist James Watson who, along with Francis Crick, won the Nobel Prize for unravelling the double-helix structure of DNA. This discovery led to the science of recombinant DNA and gene-splicing, the technique which is today more popularly referred to as "genetic engineering."

Dr. Guilfoyle's project will be conducted under the auspices of the National Institute of Health. His research is designed to use the genetic approach, including gene-splicing techniques, to study molecular events that take place during human cellular development using human adenovirus as a model system. In a recent interview, Dr. Guilfoyle stated that —

"Gene-splicing is probably the most powerful and awesome skill acquired by man since the atom was split. It is a marvelous exploratory tool for use in the laboratory to examine the complicated machinery of heredity. When a gene with an unknown function is inserted into bacteria, it can perform as a probe which lets the laboratory scientist actually see its role precisely. By using this technique, researchers can now speed up the work involved in performing the formidable task of identifying, locating, and analyzing every individual gene of the more than 100,000 genes found in the human cell. The world of medical science is hopeful that once this task is accomplished, it will be able to learn a great deal more about some of the mysteries of the triggering mechanisms which cause normal cellular change, as well as the abnormalities of cellular development that result in cancer. Genetic engineering has already made possible certain new drugs, like the antiviral agent Interferon, which hopefully will prove to be a weapon with which cancer can be attacked."

Dr. Guilfoyle graduated from Cohasset High School in 1971 and completed his undergraduate work in microbiology at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. He also received his Ph.D. in Molecular Biology from the University of Pennsylvania after completing a five-year doctoral program at the university, which included research work at the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia.

He is the son of Richard and Barbara Guilfoyle, long-time residents of Cohasset, who, for a number of years, have been closely associated with many of the community's civic activities. Mrs. Guilfoyle is well-known throughout the South Shore for her work with Community Health Services. Mr. Guilfoyle is president of The Sturges Corporation, a Boston-based financial management company, which owns and operates several South Shore subsidiaries, including The Limited Editions Collectors Society in Hingham.

Dr. Guilfoyle will live at the special housing facilities provided by the Long Island Laboratories for their research scientists and their families. He estimates that his research project, which will begin in late June, will take from two to three years to complete.

apartment house.

The accident is under investigation. Police did not know Tuesday whether charges would be lodged.

Chief Piepenbrink said the brakes on the truck were smoking when the first fire crews arrived on the scene, indicating the brakes had failed.

Throughout the day foam was used to hose down the truck and vicinity. About 150 gallons were used.

"No one town has that much foam," the chief said after the incident was officially finished. Foam was brought in by the other three communities directly involved in the operation plus Norwell and Hanover offered their foam.

There are two types of foam available for fire fighting purposes. The sort used Monday was a heavy, protein foam that is used to provide a blanket between the atmosphere and whatever.

The foam was used to coat the truck and nearby area to prevent gasoline vapors from escaping, which might have led to combustion.

Gasoline is a highly volatile liquid.

"We were fortunate," Cheif Piepenbrink said after the engines cleared. "If we had had a fire, I doubt we could have handled it.

"I want to commend the men. The first concern of the men on the scene was to make sure the driver was out, make sure the people were out of the building and to reduce the hazard as best they could with the limited manpower.

"Three or four people can't do everything at once. They did a fine job."

Residents of the area agreed.

"Edison and the gas company stayed at the scene all day. The water department and highway, all should be commended," the chief said. The other town departments provided barricades and sand, closing off the area until the danger passed.

"I also want to extend my appreciation to the surrounding towns."

He said the action of his men, and others working on the emergency, may well have prevented the potential explosion.

"They took steps to prevent combustion," he explained.

Off duty men were among those working on the accident scene, which the chief said could have turned into a disaster.

State environmental officials were called in to investigate the danger to the water table from the small amount of gasoline that actually escaped.

As of Tuesday, that aspect was not a concern.

By 6:15 p.m. Monday, the families living in the apartments were allowed back in their homes, gas and electricity were turned back on.

The Chief said there were only two buildings blacked out while the work went on.

Only one alarm was struck for the situation.

Meet Josephine Laugelli, archeologist, lover of life

By Laura Doherty

Josephine Laugelli has that important capacity to enjoy life to its fullest and the ability to convey that enthusiasm to all she meets.

After several suggestions from people who know her that she would make an interesting interview, I called Josephine. Her first response was not encouraging. "I don't know why you want to interview me. I'm not very exciting," she said doubtfully. However, eventually, she graciously agreed and I sat in her comfortable screened porch taking notes on the variety of subjects which have interested Josephine over the years.

As we talked, Josephine, obviously never idle, busily worked on a christening dress. "I've become the official family christening dress maker," she laughingly explained. "This one here," she continued, "is really a lot easier than the elegant specialty I'm sometimes asked to make which is a dress with the family tree worked in embroidery on the front panel."

It's not long before Josephine begins discussing her 20-year interest as an amateur archeologist. She is quick to note that "amateur just means that we don't work for money, not that our work is amateurish."

It was while her daughter, Virginia, was at Stonehill College that Josephine was exposed to archeology for the first time. Virginia invited her along on one of the digs with the suggestion that "you can always play scrabble." It was not long before Josephine asked if she could join in on the dig, and "that," according to her children, "was the last we saw of mother."

The dig is located on the shores of Lake Wapanuket in Middleboro. At first, Josephine was apprenticed to someone else and worked under supervision until she was eventually assigned her own two meter square to work in. The Massachusetts Archeological Society has been digging at that site for 35 years. Dr. Maurice Robbins, Director of the dig, has written several books analyzing what has been found.

As I leafed through one of these books, Josephine pointed with understandable pride to photographs of some of the artifacts which she has found in her 20 years of involvement.

"Most of our carbon dates are around 4300 years old," Josephine points out, "but there are signs of Paleo Indians dating back to 10,000 B.C. The dig has provided useful information about how the Womponoag lived. For instance, Josephine believes that the snail shaped house floor patterns found by her group were to protect the inhabitants from wind and mosquitoes.

She says that her fellow amateur archeologists, after 20 years of working together, have become like one big family. Her group is not allowed to keep any of the artifacts which they have found and they have been placed in a museum.

Josephine's interest in archeology took her to Mexico several years ago to view the Mayan ruins. As they journeyed through the overpowering jungle, suddenly her guide and driver jumped out of the jeep and took after a wild turkey, leaving the rest of the party sitting alone with more than a few misgivings.

Eventually the guide and driver returned (without the turkey) and they continued their journey. Josephine recalls that it took three hours to go five miles and they often had to get out and push the jeep. When they finally arrived at the ruins, the caretaker had found the turkey and he gave Josephine a feather as a momento.

Another one of Josephine's interests has been gardening. The different varieties of rhododendrons and azaleas which surround her home are especially attractive. Last year, she joined the Rhododendron Society in order to learn more on how to take cuttings. Her children, she said, laughingly remarked, "You need another hobby."

Since her retirement in May, Josephine has been enjoying each day tremendously. "It's a time for me to catch up on everything I've wanted to do," she adds. Josephine had worked in the Cohasset schools for 13 years. She says her last job as a bookkeeper was always challenging and never dull. "But then maybe I'm an enthusiastic person," she concludes.

Open house at Art Center for summer program

On these balmy summer days, what could be more inspiring than to enroll in one or two of the South Shore Art Center's summer classes?

Their informal Open House, at which enrollments may be made, will be held at the Center on Sunday June 28 from 4 to 6 p.m. and will feature an exhibit of students' and teachers' work. The teachers will be on hand to discuss their classes. It should be noted that this will be the final day to enroll in the one-week Anderson workshop. The summer schedule goes for eight weeks from July 6 to August 28.

College credit through Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education will be offered for John Lanza's "Figure Painting" on Monday and Wednesday evenings, starting July 20 and for David Tandy's "Introductory Painting" on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, starting July 21; Betty Kohlberg's "One-Week Outdoor Painting," July 13-17 and for Rosalind Farbush's "One-Week Outdoor Drawing and Painting," August 24-28.

Special Workshops consist of Betty Kohlberg's and Rosalind Farbush's classes as already mentioned, a "Three-Day Pastel Portraiture" with Constance Pratt July 21, 22, 23, a "One-Week Landscape Painting Workshop" with Margaret Dillon August 10-14 and a "Two-Session Monoprint Workshop" with Louise Kalish August 18 and 20.

"Basic Drawing" with Virginia Moore starts July 20 on Monday evenings, "Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain" with Syma Komarin starts July 20, Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings. "Portraiture and Clothed Figure" with Clement Micarelli starts July 21, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. "Creative Drawing and Painting" with Louise Kalish starts August 4 on Tuesday and Thursday mornings and Virginia Avery gives her "Outdoor Watercolor Painting" class starting July 22 on Wednesday and Friday mornings.

The photography classes consist of Peter Anderson's "One Week Photography Workshop" July 6-10 all day; "Beginning Photography" with Paul Fortin starting July 20, Monday and Wednesday evenings; and "Intermediate Photography," instructor to be announced, starting July 21, Tuesday evenings.

Children's Art Week in Cohasset with Serena Brundige will be held daily June 29-July 3, ages 7-12.

The South Shore Art Center will also hold outdoor classes on the grounds of the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham: "Painting From Nature" with Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, ages 13-18, July 6-22; "Exploring With Paint and Pencil" with George Hancin, ages 8-12, July 7-30 and "Art From Nature" with Serena Brundige, ages 8-12, July 6-22.

For further information regarding summer classes or the center in general, please call 383-9548.

Children's art show at the Pratt

Tempera, pencil, pen and ink, watercolor and prints are some of the techniques used in the summer art show in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The show was assembled by Tom Lucas of the art department at Cohasset High School from students' work. Carolyn Horn, children's art exhibit chairman for the Friends of the Library, arranged the showing which will remain on display until September.

Gatlin to be here twice

Music Circus Producer, Ron Rawson, has scheduled an additional performance for Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers Band at the Cohasset summer theatre.

Gatlin was originally scheduled to appear for one day, Monday, August 17, at 8 p.m. However, due to an unprecedented demand for tickets, a second performance has been added on Monday, July 6, at 8 p.m.

Rawson said, "Gatlin's fans came out in such great numbers that we just couldn't accommodate everyone with only one show."

The Gatlin's unique vocal talents along with their widespread popularity has led to numerous awards, including the Grammy, and such top-selling records as "All the Gold in California," "Midnight Choir" and "Broken Lady."

Tickets for the July 6 performance are available at the Music Circus box office on Sohier St., off Route 3A in Cohasset. To charge tickets by telephone, patrons may call 383-1400 any day between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

To a publisher, a cookbook is a gold mine. A best-seller novel usually has a life span of four to six months, but it's books like the "Better Homes and Gardens Cook Book" that pay the rent and postage for publishing houses. It has sold millions of copies since it was published in 1930. So, it was with visions of fame and wealth that I finished reading Greer Underwood's as yet unpublished cookbook which she asked me to review. A Hingham proponent and teacher of the new lean cuisine, Greer has spent months collecting and testing recipes which she calls "Skinny French Cooking — A Primer." Greer shows how the adjectives "slim" and "delicious" can apply to the same dishes. The idea of lean cuisine was developed by French Chef Michel Guerard who published "Cuisine Minceur" a diet book for the rich — time and money wise. Greer found Guerard's recipes impractical, calling for many rare ingredients and long hours of preparation. And so, clever girl that she is, Greer has come up with her book for cooks at all levels who wish to learn to take needless calories out of cooking, be it for entertaining or family meals. Here is a dessert, tasty in the dead of winter and a treat now, in strawberry season. The rinds keep for months in their syrup and can be spooned over vanilla ice cream and garnished with a tablespoon of strawberry puree and a drop of orange liqueur. Spooned over day-old pound or sponge cake and topped with orange-flavored whipped cream, you'll love Greer's

ORANGE AU ZESTE [to serve six]

6 large navel oranges
1 c. sugar
1½ c. water
3 T Grand Marnier, or other orange-flavored liqueur
1 pint fresh or frozen strawberries or raspberries and a few drops of fresh lemon juice.

To prepare oranges: with a vegetable peeler strip the thin orange zest being careful not to get any of the bitter white and cut into long, fine strips. Remove white peeling from oranges and slice thinly across the grain. Chill.

To prepare rinds: dissolve 1 c. sugar in 1 c. of water over medium-low heat. When dissolved and syrup is clear, bring remaining 1/2 c. of water to a boil. Turn heat to high and add boiling water to sugar water. Boil five minutes. Reduce heat to simmer. Add orange strips and liqueur. Simmer at least 40 min. and as long as 1½ hours. If liquid level drops, replace with fresh water.

To prepare Melba Sauce: clean berries, if using fresh ones. Whirl in a food processor or blender or food mill to puree. Add few drops lemon juice and perhaps another tablespoon of Grand Marnier. Push through a sieve if desired.

To serve: separate orange slices and place overlapping on a large platter or individual plates. Pour a ribbon of the pureed berries down center of slices. Drizzle a few tablespoons of candied or ange rind and syrup over the berry puree.

Another new cookbook we'll all be watching for will add to the coffers of the First Congregational Church. Being prepared by a committee of church women, they are seeking old recipes, medicinal remedies and household hints from the past. Your contributions will be gratefully received for their 350th anniversary edition cookbook to be published next year when the Marshfield church is recognized as one of the oldest churches in the nation. Here is a sample recipe from Mrs. Wilhelmina Stahl, Elsie Wood's mother:

RHUBARB JAM

5 c. cut-up rhubarb
5 c. sugar
1 can crushed pineapple [1 lb. 4 oz.]
2 pkgs. wild strawberry jello

Cook fruit 15-20 min. with sugar. Add jello to hot mixture. Stir. Put in sterilized jars and cover with parafin. This will be on sale at the Church Fair on the Village Green on July 10 and 11.

****

Sometimes I toy with the idea of publishing a cookbook out of sheer gratitude to the many good cooks who have contributed their favorite recipes for this column. In the eight years we have been sharing this spot in the paper, many recipes have come streaming across my desk and some day, when I get ambitious, perhaps we'll all be rich and famous. If you're a new reader or summer visitor, do join in the fun!

Angler's corner

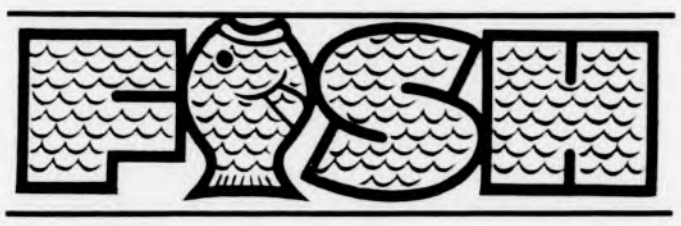
Lindy Blaisdell
David Cutler

Someday soon, very soon, surfmen from along the South Shore will feel the inevitable yank...the strike of a marauding bluefish...and when that happens we will all know that summer has arrived for good.

Last week we reported that blues were being taken in large numbers off Race Point; that will continue until the leaves fall. This week our reliable source (R.S.) reports that blues are now off the South Shore, having been caught in gill nets and, in a few cases, by anglers trolling hoochies and the like.

When feeding, this second best of our salt water gamefish, will take most anything (we know one boy who caught one on a hot dog), but for best results we recommend a Rebel, Repalla, hoochies or livelining with whatever you can get. Part of the whatever includes menhaden (pogies) which are showing up as well in local waters. Good news too, because the lowly pogie is a mainstay of the bluefish diet.

For livelining, get yourself a weighted treble hook, a fairly stiff fishing rod and look for bubbles...a sign of pogies lurking beneath the surface. Cast your line on the far side of the bubbles and retrieve it with quick jerking motions. The pogies you catch should be placed in a well aerated tank or can.



More on blues later. On other fronts...big stripers are not everywhere as hoped, but schoolies are still being taken along the coast. There are flounder hanging around the mouths of the North and South Rivers and if you enjoy a friendly chase for pollock, try the breakwater at the Pilgrim Power Plant. Bluefin tuna have been spotted, but few have been boated yet. Still early.

...The Massachusetts Division of Fish and Wildlife has received $309,500 through the Dingell-Johnson program for fisheries research and management programs. The money came from a 10 per cent tax on fishing equipment. Another $20,000 is available to the Division to study endangered species.

...Summer residents, etc. are reminded that they must have fishing licenses to fish in fresh water. Licenses are available from local town halls. Summer residents and everyone else who want more information on Massachusetts fishing should write to the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries, 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202, for their pamphlet publication #C-124 Mass. It is a saltwater fishing guide that lists fishing locations, charter boats, launching ramps, etc.

A similar guide for freshwater anglers is available from the Boston Globe.

...Tip of the week. You know those small ponds off Route 3 in Duxbury as you're heading south? The one with dead trees and stumps throughout? Well, they'll offer you some great action with large-mouth bass. Give them a try.

Coast Guard adopts new distress signals

By Dick Rice
First Coast Guard District

The Coast Guard has adopted new requirements pertaining to visual distress signals. Since January 1 all boats which carry six or less passengers for hire and all recreational boats 16 feet or longer have been required to be equipped with both day and night distress signals when operating on coastal waters. Boats less than 16 feet in length are required to carry nighttime distress signals when operating at night on coastal waters.

Boaters are not required to purchase each or every item contained in the table, nor are boaters required to have pistol-launched devices. The table contains a listing of all items which have Coast Guard approval. The boater may select any device or combination preferred.

As an example, let us assume your boat is over 16 feet long and has three hand flares accepted for day and night use. You would be in compliance with the law at that time. After using one hand flare, you would no longer be in compliance.

Persons on vessels over 16 feet long involved in the following activities are exempted from the requirement to carry visual distress signals during daylight hours but must carry the required signals at night:

A person competing in any organized marine parade, regatta, race or similar event.

A person using a manually propelled boat.

A person using a sailboat under 26 feet, of completely open construction, and not equipped with propulsion machinery.

For more information, contact the Coast Guard Boating Safety Office at 223-3607.

ACCEPTED VISUAL DISTRESS SIGNALS

Hand-held red flare distress signals, day and night (1), three required.

Floating orange smoke distress signals (5 minutes), day only, three required.

Pistol-projected parachute red flare distress signals, day and night (2), three required.

Self-contained rocket-propelled parachute red flare distress signals, day and night, three required.

Hand-held orange smoke distress signals, day only, three required.

Floating orange smoke distress signals (15 minutes), day only, three required.

Red aerial pyrotechnic flare distress signals, day and night (3), three required.

Distress signal for boats, orange flag, day only, one required.

Electric distress light for boats, night only, one required.

These signals must have a date of manufacture of October 1, 1980 or later to be acceptable.

These signals require use in combination with a suitable launching device.

These devices may be either self-contained or pistol-launched, and either meteor or parachute assisted type. Some of these signals may require use in combination with a suitable launching device.

Centenarian ...

Hannah Lindquist was 100 on Monday.

A special party at Cohasset Knoll

Hannah Lindquist smiled through her tears as she turned 100 in style Monday at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

On the dance floor in front of her wheelchair, her daughter, Ruth Swanson of Hingham, whirled about with husband, Phil.

Megan and Caroline Pratt, who are two and one respectively, toddled about the floor themselves while their grandmother, Catherine Mulcahy played the piano.

"Let Me Call You Sweetheart" rang out and the line up of nursing home guests joined in, singing to the special guest.

"Tell Reagan, I'm a Republican," Mrs. Lindquist commented as she pointed out she had heard from the President of the United States, the governor of Massachusetts and the House of Representatives in honor of her birthday.

In the background and on the piano, there were displays of her handwork. Crocheted table cloths, doilies, a piece of cloth woven from lamb's wool and a cutwork tablecloth.

"She was 96 before she gave up her apartment," Mrs. Swanson pointed out with pride. She said her mother had kept up her own garden until eight or ten years ago.

"She had the veritable green thumb," she explained. "She could grow anything."

Mrs. Lindquist was born in Finland in 1881. She came to this country in 1902, and lived in the Springfield area much of the time since then.

Her birthday celebration began Sunday with friends and relatives from far away dropping by the nursing home where she's lived this past year.

But the real party, planned by Claudia Bennett,

Will mean longer walks this fall

School Board goes into busing

The school system will buy two used buses for $1,000 each, and go into the busing business.

The busing costs were about $100,000 last year, but the coming year brings $70,000 for expenses plus many students who will have to walk longer distances.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell expects parents will be upset when the actual routes are announced in August.

Last spring school committee voted to adopt a system of depots for bus pick up. School children will walk to an assigned pick up spot which may be a good distance from their home.

Crowell said he won't be ready to go public with the routes until August.

The school system already owns six buses of its own. One can only be used in emergencies. Six drivers work directly for the schools. Last year they contracted for four more buses from Charles and Rose Pape. The contract included drivers for the extra buses.

During this week's school committee, the committee commended Charles and Rose for the 20 years they have served the town in the bus business. The couple plans to retire.

Why does the town own some buses and contract out the rest?

Crowell said it was a system he inherited. He came to the system just last year.

This week he asked for and received permission to spend up to $3,000 for purchase of school buses.

He gave school committee members a memo during the meeting, which he said was not a public document.

He wants three buses to fill out his fleet. One or two would be used as back-up buses in the event of

A preview of the arts festival

By Patricia Desmond

Nestled in the backyard of Lothrop House, art-lovers sipped champagne and talked about the success of art and energy.

The South Shore Art Festival begins tomorrow on the Common. But Saturday night, the show stoppers were on display.

Mary Good of Randolph took the best of show award for a charcoal drawing that is captivating in it's intensity.

"Pat" as the work is entitled is a haunting woman. Her eyes haunt the artist. And the memory of the drawing haunts the show.

Good talked about her work while friends smiled. Powerful, magnetic, larger-than-life, they all apply.

"Beautiful?" Good said incredulously as someone tried to compliment the sketch. "I wouldn't call it beautiful but people do."

No, "Pat" is not a pretty or attractive woman. Her bloodshot eyes just about scream out from the distance. Her wrinkles are defined. Her features, plain.

There are about 300 works of art to be displayed at the festival. Good decided to have her work displayed without glass because she wanted no barrier between the viewer and the subject, nothing to destroy the immediacy she managed to capture.

At the preview, there were four other pieces exhibited, all winners in their own categories.

Dennis Kowal of Cohasset took the first prize in sculpture. His work, Migration Series #12, looked like an ice sculpture waiting to melt in the warm summer sun.

The base is solid stainless steel. The top is made of carved acrylic. The abstract design had a winged effect.

Kowal spent more than six months working on that sculpture.

He recently finished a major work displayed at the new National Fire Protection Association building in Quincy.

The work happens to weigh six-and-a-half tons.

Jim Ann Howard of Scituate took the first prize in graphics with a mono print of Stephen Daedelus. The work was done on an etching press.

Jim Ann is married to Rev. Darrell Berger, minister of First Parish Church in Scituate.

She has a studio in Somerville where she works fulltime.

Pam Hoss won in the painting category with an

Painting bids

Bids for painting lines were taken under advisement by selectmen last week while they await comment from Harold Litchfield, highway surveyor.

Markings Inc. of Hingham bid $12.50 a gallon for 12-inch lines and $6.10 a gallon for 4-inch lines. The company estimated 490 gallons would be needed.

R&J White Lines of Middleboro bid $8.90 a gallon for yellow lines and $12.75 a gallon for white lines.

Bridge bids

The bids for work on sandblasting and painting Cunningham Bridge were opened last week. Selectmen have them under advisement.

Costello Contracting of South Boston bid $17,800 and South Shore Waterproofing of Braintree bid $28,888.

Greek Taverna

The selectmen gave the Greek Orthodox Church a two day beer and wine license last week.

The license is for the Greek Taverna at the church on Jerusalem Road from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, July 5, and 1 to 7 p.m. Sunday, July 6.

Summer movies

As in the past, the Recreation Department will conduct a summer movie series each Thursday evening, at 7:30 p.m., Town Hall auditorium. There will be seven movies this season. The first movie will be held on Thursday evening, July 9, at 7:30 p.m.

The title is "Brian's Song." The film will end at 8:50 p.m., and children should be picked up promptly at that time. All movies are free of charge and will be held each Thursday evening at 7:30 beginning July 9, continuing thru August 20.

Younger children must be accompanied by an older sibling or adult. All movies are free of charge and co-sponsored by the Cohasset Public Library.

Selectmen are thinking about granting a six month leave of absence to Patrolman Gerald Doyle who is taking a job with the MIT security police in Cambridge.

The contract allows for the possibility of a leave and the police chief would like to see the selectmen grant it.

Town Hall closed Friday

Town hall will be closed Friday, July 3, due to the holiday falling on Saturday.

Tree warden resigns

Samuel Hassan resigned as tree warden last week. He has moved to the Cape.

The selectmen voted to send him their thanks.

Various town departments are looking for summer help through the Comprehensive Employment Training Act, CETA, program, but chances are they won't get as much help as they want.

Requests into the selectmen's office total 15 slots. There will be 10 workers under 19 who will begin next week.

Requests are: tree and park, four; highway, three; recreation, four; recyling, one; town counsel, one; and Harbormaster, two.

The program involves a 30 hour week for eight weeks.

Liquor hearing Wednesday

Selectmen will hold a hearing tonight at town hall on a police complaint of a liquor law violation at the Riddle's Market.

The hearing will be part of the regular selectmen's meeting, which starts at 8 p.m., at town hall.

Police Chief John DeBassio said the charge involves the accusation that liquor was sold to someone under 20 years. The market holds a beer and wine license.

acrylic on canvas, titled "Patterned Chair." The painting in shades of purples has fascinating use of lines.

Joan Hacker of Duxbury won in photography with a starkly simple picture focused on a bare light socket. It is called "Summer Bathroom."

The program for the festival was designed by David Walsh of Scituate. He used a photograph of the corona of the sun during an eclipse.

Valerie Reiver is chairman of the festival which runs through July 5.

School goals

Martha Gjesteby is right. The school system needs to have its goals defined by the school committee.

Now so far no one has said she is wrong. They just haven't been working toward doing very much about it.

The question of goals was on the school committee agenda earlier this month. But the meeting was running late. So the topic was postponed. This week the committee held a brief meeting, putting off goals once again since the full board was not present.

Now the school committee is in summer recess. The next official meeting will be sometime in August. By then the question of goals will be approaching the eleventh hour.

Will that mean there will be no educational goals for the coming year? Hardly, the dedicated staff will be left to set their own goals.

Gjesteby suggested a meeting be held sometime in July to work out the goals.

Perhaps the committee would like our suggestions.

One good idea would be to pick up on the speeches of the top two graduates this year and begin from there. Brenda Birmann delivered a speech that talked about the problem of competition in students in the public school system. Her idea is that students should be encouraged to do their best and be satisfied with that, instead of being oriented toward being the winner.

A worthwhile goal. Doing the best you can, being able to feel proud of being number two or even number 82.

Philip Dormitzer had a few other ideas in his address. He suggested that punishments should not be arbitrary and homework assignments should not be given just to create homework but to teach something or other.

Another worthwhile goal. Relevant was a popular word in education a few years ago. Relevancy should be a popular idea even today.

Another goal that the school committee has to develop involves the policy on drugs and alcohol. School Supt. Eugene Crowell submitted a detailed draft for the school committee's action earlier this month. Setting the philosophy is up to the school committee. As it stands, that philosophy probably won't be put into action until mid-year, and that is supposing the school committee finds speedy agreement on issues like: the confidentiality of student teacher relationships, locker searches.

The beginning of the health education curriculum, already approved by the school committee, is a wise start. Obviously the school system can't eliminate a problem that is as widespread as the use of drugs and alcohol. The school committee might as well try to wipe out divorce.

But the way they choose to handle their educational goals is extremely important.

It deserves thought and discussion.

On the 'Making Choices' conference

Letters

To the Editor:

I, a 1981 High School graduate, attended the much publicized June 3rd Planned Parenthood organized "Making Choices" Conference held at St. Stephen's Episcopal, Second Congregational and Unitarian Churches in Cohasset. I was particularly motivated to attend having been in Joy Robinson-Lynch's (the Planned Parenthood Conference Coordinator) adolescent sexuality class at Cohasset High School. Joy's services were terminated when, after the first class, the administration and many of the parents read her shocking literature; one of which stated that contraceptives could be had without any parental knowledge, hassle or permission. The following is an account of my experience June 3rd at the "Making Choices" Conference:

The first event was the skits performed by a group of kids from Boston around the ages of seventeen. It involved situations/issues such as child abuse, abortion, alcoholic parents, premarital sex, homosexuality, drug abuse, etc. They seemed to push all types of government funded programs as if this was the only solution. The skit involving homosexuality seemed to say that we should accept this condition; that it is only a matter of sexual preference. The material that was presented in the skits told me that Secular Humanism is very real in our society today. Not one mention of Jesus Christ or God was heard in the skits or the morning workshops. These people don't seem to realize our purpose on earth.

The morning workshop was headed by two Planned Parenthood members, Barbara and John. They were very explicit in explaining the usage of contraceptives. They (Barbara and John) removed from a box different types of contraceptives. They talked about the percentage of people that were and were not successful with different types of birth control. Most of the girls in the room were sexually active. They talked about the types they used. Two girls about the age of 19 had already had a child. One of the girls had a four-year-old baby. She got pregnant at the age of 15. She married her boyfriend but later divorced him because he would beat her. Another girl stated that her boyfriend kept hounding her to hop in a bed with him, but she would tell him she wasn't ready yet. I later found out in her discussion that she had been raped by a twenty-year-old boy she knew. They are now involved with the court and the court so far has enough facts to put him away for many years. She continued to say her father would beat her family and her mother, whom she said had to get married. Her mother and her family had lived some place called the Dove and other places. The atmosphere at the Conference was very depressing. I could easily attribute my severe migraine to the depressing atmosphere.

I welcomed the end of the morning session and made my way upstairs to have lunch. I was given a bagged lunch and seated myself with two girls I knew from Cohasset; one was pregnant, married and 16, or maybe 17. I gazed down at my ham sandwich and goodies and was a little reluctant to eat it in fear that Planned Parenthood might have gone so far as to put birth control in my drink and sandwich, but I took my chances because I was extremely malnourished at this point.

Next was my afternoon workshop. There were many to choose from. Meredith, a friend of mine, and I chose Male and Female Sexuality. A lot of kids besides Meredith and I had signed up for that particular workshop. We both found the small darkened room where our class was to meet. No one had arrived yet. Both of us chose Male and Female Sexuality for the same reason; we wanted to hear what the other kids in the room had to say. As it turned out no one showed up and when Joy Robinson-Lynch, the organizer, walked through the door along with John something or other, Meredith and I almost fell over backwards. John walked in with all his material. He was going to give us an education on Male and Female Sexuality. As it turned out Meredith and I stole the show and gave both John and Joy an education on what it means to have good clean solid morals and Jesus Christ in your life. They were so taken or moved or whatever by what we had to say that they asked us if we would consider becoming Planned Parenthood Counselors. Both of us declined. Joy thanked us for coming and we were off. I hope that day Joy learned something very valuable that she could apply and pass on to other misled kids.

Sincerely,
Anne Marie Young

Grateful for Toma visit

To the Editor:

Our heartfelt thanks to all of you who made David Toma's visit to Cohasset possible. We, the Cohasset Citizens for Drug Education, have decided to use this means to thank you for your donations rather than mailing individual letters. This will allow all available funds to be used for drug education. Your many generous donations and your support of our fund raisers enabled us to reach our goal and still have funds remaining for future programs.

The Toma Fund Dance was a huge success, and a most enjoyable time was had by all who attended. We want to thank Pat O'Connor who donated the wonderful band "The Fox" and Hugo's who provided the room and the hor d'oeuvres.

We also wish to thank Michael Gill, the committee members and their friends, the school administration, and the school committee for their support. A special thanks to the local newspapers who were more than generous with articles and publicity about our fund raisers and Toma's appearance.

We feel Toma was a most effective start to an on-going drug education program. Those of us who spent the two days with him saw first-hand the impact he had on our children. After his talk to the Summer maladies...selective sight, hearing, etc.

By Claire McDonough

Seems we hardly get rid of the gypsy moths when another group starts swarming all over the town. Not that I'm referring to my children as a plague, you understand. But surely I can't be the only mother to decide that if heaven is spent surrounded by those you love best in all the world maybe it's time to look at the alternatives.

My kids aren't all that bad, really. It's just that they're subject to inexplicable maladies that last from June to September. And although the kids are the ones who come down with these summer viruses, it's the parent who suffers every time.

The following Glossary of Estival Ailments may be helpful to other parents. The important thing to remember in each instance is that although intense, the malady is rarely terminal.

Selective Sightedness: This ailment does not respond to any known treatment, but is self-limiting. The most common symptom is observed when a child who can back up into deep center field and, despite the glare of sun in his eyes, catch a fly ball without blinking, responds to a request that he remove his ball and glove from the living room with, "What ball and glove? Where?" Rarely persists beyond age 25.

Alternating Eardrums: Believed to be related to Selective Sightedness, this illness should be suspected when a child who can hear an ice cream truck a mile and a half away is totally unable to hear his mother tell him to clean his room. Repeated and increasingly louder requests are apt to elicit the response, "Huh?"

Sluggard's Syndrome: Although Sluggard's Syndrome can strike any time of year, it is more evident during the summer months. Typically, the victim will spend hours at a time staring at a T.V. set, and will show marked agitation if the set is turned off during "General Hospital." Suspect this disease at once if a child over the age of 18 spends any amount of time watching "Mr. Rogers." In extreme cases the subject will slouch in a chair three feet from the refrigerator and ask his mother, "Is there anything to eat?" In very extreme cases, the question will be, "Do I want a sandwich?"

Klutz's Cringe: One of the most baffling maladies known to medical science. A child who can leap like a squirrel from tree to tree and who can cross a soccer field filled with moving bodies without so much as hesitating will be unable to navigate the kitchen floor without tripping over the linoleum. (I guess it's the linoleum — that's all that's there!) The same child who never seems to have a thought for his own safety on the athletic field will, once injured, exhibit signs of stark terror and plead pitifully, "Don't put iodine on it!" or "Do I have to have stitches?"

Sinbad's Hunch: A fear (presumably) of being carried off by a large bird keeps the victim from leaving his or her house, despite the parent's continued urgings to "For heaven's sake, go outdoors."

Beautiful People's Ennui: The most common of all summer ailments, possibly related to all of the others. The victim, surrounded by video games, electric trains, sports equipment, unmade bed, uncleaned room, unmowed lawn, and within a five minute walk of the Atlantic Ocean, wanders, glassy-eyed, around the house, bumping into furniture and whining, "There isn't anything to do."

Although seldom fatal, the above diseases create great discomfort. I would suggest that everyone write to his or her legislators and point out that instead of squandering our tax dollars investigating the love life of the tsetse fly they fund some serious research into these mysterious dread summer diseases.

Or did she

The day she hit middle age

By Patricia Desmond

Here I am, sitting by my typewriter, looking straight at the world of the middle-aged. Today, I'm 35.

Actually I'm not sure I turned the corner into middle-age. Actually I'm not sure that it matters much, to anyone except me. But I'm writing about it anyway because that's what I do when things bother me.

Ever since I had my baby — he's two-and-a-half now — I've felt old and harried. My first child — she's eleven this month — never made me feel old. I guess that's because she's a perfect child and he's bright but intense.

I wish I were a perfect mother, at least to my perfect daughter. Somehow it's always the children with easy going dispositions who are left out of the division of maternal attention.

I also wish I were: thinner by 10 to 15 pounds; less tired; less gray; more suntanned and more capable of managing my household.

Did you ever run out of oil on your birthday? I suppose it wouldn't be important on June 25, except it meant no hot water to run the dishwasher, shower and wash my hair or bathe the children.

Is this what being middle-aged is all about? Washing your hair in cold water and knowing your feet are dirty???

Is middle-aged the minute you realize that you are far more than 30 and haven't accomplished the things you'd hoped to do in your twenties?

When I was on the verge of 30, I felt extremely depressed, talked about it a lot and realized I'd accomplished most of my life goals.

The problem with 35 is that I haven't accomplished any more of those goals and the list gets longer every year. As a matter of fact, some of the goals I thought I was doing all right at — like being a good mother — well, I'm not so sure any more.

What is a good mother anyway? Is she a statue that can't scream with frustration sometimes? Or is she a creature of fun, given to playing checkers once a night? Or is she the monster who makes sure the homework is done?

Would you believe, there are some nights when my choice is quitting my job or checking the homework. Well, my perfect daughter's teachers would believe it anyway.

But what about the wrinkles and the gray? Can I handle that? I always planned to grow older gracefully. And then it happened. I don't care about the wrinkles so much. And I've had gray hair since I was 21.

What I can't handle is that I still haven't finished doing what I planned to do with my life. I guess I'll just have to refuse to accept the fact I'm middle-aged for a couple more years. Maybe I'll have done it all by then.

☐Arthur Meacham of 47 Black Rock Road has been accepted at College Academy, a three-week program sponsored by Framingham State College, Stonehill and Holy Cross.

Founded by Dr. and Mrs. Harrington in 1978, the Academy has quickly become America's foremost program designed to meet the intellectual needs of gifted and academically talented children in grades four through eight. Students choose four courses from a curriculum of forty-five offerings, and attend classes which average eight students in size.

☐Four Cohasset residents received Bachelor of Arts degrees at the 160th commencement exercises of Colby College.

Mary Coe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Coe, majored in administrative science. A talented athlete, Mary was a leading member of the women's varsity ice hockey and lacrosse teams. She prepared for college at Cohasset High School.

Lawrence Drago was graduated with distinction in the major of government. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Drago, Jr., he also attended Cohasset High School.

Charles Higginson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Higginson, was graduated with distinction in the major of government and with honors in government. He prepared for college at St. Stephen's School in Rome, Italy.

Daniel Sheehy, Jr. majored in administrative science and economics. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sheehy, Sr., he prepared for college at Tabor Academy.

☐Navy Mess Management Specialist Seaman James Scobie Jr., whose wife, Kathleen, is the daughter of Mrs. J.T. Maher of 45 Smith Place, has returned from a deployment to the Indian Ocean and Mediterranean Sea.

He is a crew member aboard the aircraft carrier USS Independence, homeported in Norfolk, Va.

☐Stephen Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Taylor, 70 Pond St., and Susan Yake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Yake, 29 Beach St., will enter the freshman class at St. Lawrence University in September.

☐The Greek Orthodox Church had its first wedding celebration Sunday, June 28. The bride and groom were Iris Cruz and Loukas Contos, both wore Greek dress.

☐Bill Kellerman brought his boat up from Florida last week with the help of Ron Goodwin and Eddie Andrason, who met him in Hilton Head, South Carolina. The trip went without a hitch except something about a captain's hat.

☐George Haley is still logging 8 to 9 miles a day on his bike, even when the weather is at its worst.

☐Joe McAuliffe had a birthday party on Saturday night with one hundred of his closest friends. That's what the tent was for on Jerusalem Road.

☐Ann and Joe Gallagher have their mothers visiting from Ireland. Breda Burns, Ann's mother from Tipperary, will be here for a month. She's here with Ann's sister Patricia and her daughter Rosa. Joe's mother, Mary, is here to attend Joe's sister, Mary's, wedding.

Ann, who has been running a day care center for the last four years, has decided to try something new in the fall. Her children Tara and Sean will both be in school, so she'd like to do something else.

She said she's made a lot of friends and will miss the children. I know she'll be hard to replace.

☐Monique Esposito is designing stunning clothes for Tides Inn, which has moved to South Main St. She's created some lovely white cotton jackets and pants. I'm looking forward to seeing more in the future.

☐Jane Marshall will be tending bar at the Taverna at the Greek Orthodox Church Saturday, July 4 and Sunday, July 5. They'll be serving Greek food, lamb, salad, etc., wine, Greek music and dancers.

☐Donna McGee did a great job chairing a meeting of area Democrats last week. They filled the Cushing Room with two hours of discussion and debate. One subject discussed was the mechanics of a strong and effective campaign for the state representative seat; a Strategy Committee was set up.

☐Happy birthday to my husband Tom and our friend, Edward Brousseau, both are aging well. Well, one is anyway.

One of Tom's presents was two tickets to "My Fair Lady" at the Metropolitan Center in Boston. Rex Harrison was fabulous, performing the role meticulously, as he's done 2,000 times before. But Cheryl Kennedy, who played Eliza Doolittle, was an outrage. Her singing sounded as if she had laryngitis. I kept wondering how they let her go on. It's an insult to the people who went there to see a show they love. Unless you must see Rex Harrison, save your money.

☐The police are giving out twenty dollar tickets for anyone without a beach parking sticker and they're being diligent. So make sure you have your old one renewed by this week. If you're new in town just go down to the police station, pay your ten dollars, which is new this year, and save yourself some money. Hours are Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 4:40 p.m., except for lunch.

☐Joanne O'Brien has found a place in history. Her uncle, Richard E. Fairhurst, has written a book "Fairhurst Essays," which is about Joanne's family growing up in Paducah, Kentucky. Also mentioned are her children, Danny, Susie, Michael, and Timmy, who's coming back from Florida for a visit this week.

☐Kristin MacQuarry and Melissa Rouseau are going to Cathy Corrigan's Gymnastic Camp for a week.

The Recreation report ...

BAND CONCERT ON THE COMMON

On Tuesday evening, July 7, at 7:30 p.m., on the Cohasset Town Common, the first band concert will be held. Performing will be the 30 piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Band Master Richard Whitmarsh. The band members consist of musicians from a number of South Shore communities.

Concerts are co-sponsored by the Cohasset Recreation Department and the Federation of Musicians. This year only three concerts will be provided due to reductions in the Recreation Dept. budget. The Recreation Dept. is paying for about two-thirds of one concert, the remaining concerts are being provided through the auspices of the American Federation of Musicians.

Concerts will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m. and end about 9:20 p.m. The public is cordially invited and it is suggested that you bring blankets or lawn chairs, as well as insect repellent.

FUN CARNIVAL

On Tuesday, July 7, there will be no regular playground program. Rather we will be conducting a Fun Carnival at the Osgood School. The Carnival will begin at 10 a.m., and end at 2 p.m.

Children will need about $3 to buy tickets (10 cents each) to try all games and events. Younger children should be accompanied by a parent, adult, or older, responsible sibling as the playground staff will be involved in conducting the games and activities.

In case of rain the event will be rescheduled.

Open to all residents.

BALLOON FLYING CONTEST

On Friday, July 10, (rain date Monday, July 13), there will be no regular playground program for either 4 or 5 year olds, or 6 to 12 year olds in the morning. Children should be dropped off at the CHS football field (Miliken Field at the head of Norfolk Road) at 9 a.m.

The balloon flying will take place at mid-point during the morning. Games and activities will continue until noon. Four and five year olds must be picked up at noon at Miliken Field. Six to 12 year olds will be walked back to Osgood by the staff, have lunch, and continue with regular playground activities until the usual pick-up time at 3 p.m. Hence, 6 to 12 year olds should bring lunch.

Open to all residents.

MUSIC CIRCUS REGISTRATIONS

On Thursday, July 2, from 9 a.m. to noon, registrations for "Cinderella" will be held at the Recreation office, Town Hall. The performance date is Thursday, July 16, however, registration must be made on July 2.

The cost for "Cinderella" will be $2.45 per person, payable by check to the town.

Regular playground programs will continue on days of performances. The children who wish to participate in the Music Circus will be accompanied by an appropriate number of staff members. Other children not attending will continue as usual with playground activities.

The next Music Circus registration will be held same time and place on Thursday, July 9, for "Rumplestiltskin," the cost for this and all performances will be $2.45 per child. Tickets may not be bought at the Music Circus. Payments must be made on Thursdays, between the hours of 9 a.m. and noon. There will be a registration for one performance or another each Thursday, beginning July 2 thru August 6.

KENNEDY'S Country Gardens, Rt. 3A, Scituate, is offering gypsy moth traps AT COST in an effort to help control gypsy moths for next year. The sex traps will catch and kill the male moth in the coming month. If you slow down the mating, you will reduce next year's caterpillar population. Each female moth not fertilized will mean 1000 fewer caterpillars net year. Let's work together to protect our properties against this pest.

Grateful for Toma visit

high school on Tuesday morning, he spent several hours in small group sessions listening to the students and encouraging them to keep their promises to give up or stay off drugs.

Tuesday evening over one thousand people came to hear Toma. Included in this group were some of the students who had spoken with Toma earlier in the day. Some of them brought their parents with them. After a late supper with us, Toma returned to the motel at midnight to find a group of young people waiting for him. He finished talking with them at four o'clock in the morning!

Toma left Cohasset Wednesday afternoon with a number of letters from our young people. With their permission, we would like to share with you some of the letters' contents.

"Anyone who goes back to smoking grass after learning what we learned today has got to be sick." "That was the best thing that ever happened to this school." "After my parents saw you speak, my father came home that night and woke me up to tell me he loved me, that was the first time he said those words to me since I was a little kid." "For the first time in my life I feel like a worthwhile person." "I realize now I have too much to live for and too much respect for my body, my mind, and especially my family. I feel so good about myself and I realize how lucky I am to be alive. Thank you, Mr. Toma. You are a very special guy and I'll never forget you."

We feel one of the most important results of Toma's visit is that young people are talking with peers, teachers, parents, and friends about Toma and his messages. This sharing of ideas can do nothing but help our community.

Sincerely,

Recycling center needs a boost

To the Townspeople of Cohasset,

There is a new effort in Cohasset to make the recycling center at the landfill more effective.

A group of citizens under the auspices of the Board of Health is working to make the area more attractive and will arrange the recycling containers to make it easier for people to use.

The success of the program will depend on you, the townspeople of Cohasset, to use the recycling center.

We should all get in the habit of having a few shopping bags in the back hall or garage where we collect our glass bottles and newspapers.

It's really very easy to do and it is so important to help save the limited space at the landfill. There is also significant energy saved by manufacturers using recycled materials.

I personally don't want to be a part of the "throw away" society — perhaps it's the Yankee in me — that's why I like to recycle.

We want the recycling center to pay for itself and it can if we all use it and thereby increase the amount of materials being recycled.

Remember: paper and magazines should be either tied with string or placed in grocery bags and left at the covered dumpster. Glass should be put in the designated containers according to color — clear, green and brown. Metal rings at the top of the bottle should be removed but labels and plastic liners may be left on.

Let's all make a big effort and make the center a success.

Praise for State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

To the Editor:

During the recent House debate on the state budget, Representative Mary Jeanette Murray voted for an amendment to the budget bill that would have returned millions of dollars more in local aid to the cities and towns.

She deserves to be commended for taking a position in favor of her constituents but contrary to that of the House leadership. We believe your readers should know about this refreshing act by your community's State Representative.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Richard A. Manley

Historical Society launches summer program

The Cohasset Historical Society kicks off its summer program this week, participating in the South Shore Arts Festival by serving luncheon at its restored Lothrop House on Summer St. during the four days of the festival, July 2 to 5, and opening its three Village Museums from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. except Mondays.

Luncheon at the Lothrop House from 11 to 2:30 will serve further to put the handsome restored home on display since the $3.50 charge includes a tour of the building where three additional upstairs rooms have now been refinished and furnished in period pieces. The attractive grounds and rear patio, created through the efforts of the Community Garden Club, provide an ideal luncheon setting.

"Although we would still welcome gifts of appropriate furniture, the restoration and furnishing of the upstairs rooms has made a remarkable contribution to our refurbishing project," Mrs. Lawrence Parker, president of the Historical Society, states. "Many visitors who have already admired the downstairs restoration and furnishings, will be struck anew by the artistic changes that have been accomplished in the upstairs rooms."

Direction for the upstairs refurnishing was given by Mrs. Bruce McLean and Charlotte Frost, who had earlier done the first floor project. Refinishing of some of the furniture was contributed by John Nash, Jr.

The three Village Museums are once again this summer expected to welcome hundreds of visitors to these centerpiece attractions of the downtown area. The Historical House reproduces in its original building the living accommodations of an early 19th Century Cohasset family, with a downstairs living room furnished as it was at that time, and upstairs chambers showing the sleeping arrangements and children's room of the period.

The adjoining Maritime Museum represents the quarters of a 19th century ship's chandlery, its office, storage and display area, and contains scores of momentos of Minot's Light as well as of Cohasset's sea-going and fishing port heritage.

The Independence Gown Museum in the one-time Cohasset police station, contains a widely-acclaimed collection of men's and women's clothing dating back into the 19th century and donated by Cohasset families.

Register for gymnastics at Rec. Dept.

The Cohasset Recreation Dept. will accept registrations for summer gymnastics classes, ages 9 to 18, by calling the Recreation office at 383-6791.

The program, taught by Gaye Ripley, will be held at the CHS upstairs gym, beginning Monday, July 13 and Friday, July 17 depending on your class.

Beginners will meet from 10:30 to 11:30 on Mondays, intermediate will meet from 8:30 to 9:30 on Fridays and advanced classes will meet from 9:30 to 10:30 on Fridays. The fee for the six-week program will be $6 per person with a 50 per cent discount offered to more children registering from the same family. Classes will end on Monday and Friday, August 17 and 24. Immediate registration is advised as classes are limited in size.

Obituary

Blanche Figueiredo

Blanche (Wallace) Figueiredo, 86, of Cohasset, an active member of the George Mealy American Legion Auxiliary until her illness, died June 24 at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home where she had lived since last August.

Born and educated in Lawrence, she had lived in Cohasset for about 60 years.

She was a member of the Democratic Club and the Sixty Plus Club, both of Cohasset.

She leaves two sons, Donald L. Figueiredo and Robert W. Figueiredo, both of Cohasset; a daughter, Mary Ellen Maree of Pembroke; 11 grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 26 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

CACG raps plans for Legislature lunch

Carol Oteri, of Hull, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., has blasted the plans of V.O.I.C.E., Hull's pro-casino group, to invite the entire Massachusetts Legislature to Hull for an outing. "July is not 'Take the Legislature to Lunch Month'," said the anti-casino leader.

She continued, "I can only guess how a group claiming they are from a poverty stricken town can come up with the funds to be so lavish, on a scale unheard of, with their 'hospitality.'

"Everyone knows the poverty plea is a joke because the unemployment rate for Hull is now only 7.6 percent, in line with the fact that we as a state have a much rosier employment picture than the nation in general.

"However, with today's high costs V.O.I.C.E. must have broken the bank at Monte Carlo in order to afford this. I wonder how many other towns have ever staged such an event. I also wonder why Hull never invited the legislators before the casinos surfaced.

"The purported purpose of the day is to correct misconceptions about Hull. The only denigration of the town that I've witnessed comes from the flagrant statements made by V.O.I.C.E. members speaking on TV and radio, calling Hull 'honky tonk' and 'on the verge of bankruptcy.'

"I think that 92 percent of the legislators attending should come by car, through all the other towns involved to get a true feeling for travelling to Hull. In Atlantic City 92 percent of the casino customers come by car and we can expect the same habits here. Rapid transportation by boat is a long way off and would cost considerable sums, although I can assume the legislators would get a free ride.

"I would prefer that truly interested legislators come down to Hull on their own, with no strings attached, to get a balanced view of Hull, its problems and the problems a casino would bring to it, adjacent towns and the state. That is only fair."

David Place is sworn in as Air Force counsel

David Elliott Place, formerly with Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett, Attorneys of Boston, was sworn in recently as General Counsel of the Air Force.

Secretary of the Air Force Verne Orr officiated the ceremony.

As General Counsel, Mr. Place will be the final legal authority on all matters arising within or referred to the Department of the Air Force, except those relating to the administration of military justice.

Mr. Place was born June 10, 1921 in New York City. He graduated from Milton Academy, Milton, in 1939, then attended Harvard College, Cambridge, from 1939 to 1943, where he has been chairman of his class (1950-1981). While at Harvard, he was in the U.S. Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps program. Following graduation, he served as Third Officer in the U.S. Army Transport Service aboard the hospital ships John J. Meany and Jarred Huddleston.

David Place (center) takes the oath of office for his new post as general counsel to the Secretary of the Air Force from William H. Taft IV, general counsel to the Department of Defense. Mrs. Place holds the Bible for her husband.

From 1945 to 1948, Mr. Place attended Harvard Law School, then practiced general business law with Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett, Attorneys until 1952. He served as an Assistant U.S. Attorney and as Special Assistant to the U.S. Attorney General from 1953 to 1955, then returned to Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett, Attorneys to practice law and served as a senior management committee member from 1955 until his present position.

Past positions held by Mr. Place include Assistant Town Counsel to the Town of Cohasset, Town Moderator of Cohasset (1969-1981), Vice President and Director of New England Forestry Foundation (1972-1981), Trustee of Massachusetts Trustees of Reservations (1974-1981), Director and Secretary of Jackson Laboratory, Bar Harbor, Maine (1966-1981), Vice Chairman of the Greater Boston Red Cross (1955-1957), and President of Dana Hall School, Wellesley, (1972-1981).

Mr. Place is married to the former Penelope Griswold, and they have four children.

School Board into busing business

breakdowns.

He said he would like to buy two buses from the Papes. One bus, number 6, is a 1970 model. The other, bus 3, is a 1968.

"We know these buses and they are operationally sound," Crowell said. He and John Raftery, business director, have looked over other buses and find prices for used buses ranging from $1,500 to $15,000.

A new bus costs $20,000. Contracting a bus for a year costs $30,000. The school system, even with depots, will need seven buses.

Late buses will not be eliminated under the proposal. The starting times for the Deer Hill and Osgood School will be made simultaneous to allow one bus to serve students from both schools.

Crowell said he would rather not run a municipal bus system but he sees no solution for the coming year.

"We just don't have the money to do anything else," he said.

Bus storage space will still be contracted from the Papes under his plan.

"This is one of the pills of Proposition 2½," Crowell said. "We're going from 10 to seven buses and we're not going to be transporting as many students. We would be ill-advised to release the routes until they are finalized.

"We will get community input in spades in August. The bottom line is to give as safe a system as possible within the parameters of the budget."

He said he is considering the purchase of one more bus from the Papes but that bus has mechanical problems and could only be used as a back-up.

Dump hours to be enforced

The hours at the town dump will be strictly enforced beginning this week, Town Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield said.

The hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The landfill is closed Monday and Wednesday.

This week there will also begin an enforcement program for resident stickers. The stickers, which are the same stickers needed for beach parking, can be obtained for $10 at the police station during the normal work week. The stickers are only given out by the new police department clerk, who takes a normal lunch break.

Fire Facts

Celebrate the Fourth...Safely!

Historically, fireworks have been used to celebrate our nation's birthday each year on the Fourth of July. However, fireworks are extremely dangerous and, according to the National Fire Protection Association, cause possibly ten deaths and 4,000 injuries each year. The injuries associated with the improper use of fireworks are painful and often disfiguring. Severe burns and blindness are examples of fireworks injuries.

In Massachusetts the sale of fireworks to the public is prohibited. However, public displays of fireworks under expert supervision, with compliance of fire prevention regulations and approval of the local fire chief is permitted.

The best way to stay safe during Fourth of July celebrations is to obey the laws prohibiting fireworks. Attend only the public displays where licensed technicians operate the fireworks properly, and the fire department has approved the procedures and the physical arrangement. Even public displays can lead to injury. Staying completely safe from fireworks may mean staying away altogether.

From the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Sparklers in the night, bonfires on the dunes, parades in the streets and fresh salmon and peas on your table. Put them all together and they spell the Grand and Glorious Fourth. Hank Dunbar, owner of Brant Rock Fish Market, expects to order about two hundred pounds of Eastern Salmon from Labrador for the holiday, even though it will run about $5.50 a pound. A far cry from the July 2, 1936 issue of the Boston Traveler someone sent me, which features a full-page First National Store ad offering salmon center cuts for 29 cents a pound and fresh-picked peas, two pounds for 23 cents.

If you're expecting a crowd for the holiday weekend, forget the salmon and bring on the pizza. I've seen people lined up at the church fair, smelled it as it came out of the oven and watched as everyone devoured John LoConte's homemade pizza. For the past three summers John has done much to contribute to the success of the Community League sale with his

PIZZA

To make three large cookie sheet size pizzas:
2 c. lukewarm water
2 tsp. sugar
2 tsp. salt
4 T salad oil
2 pkgs. dry yeast
5 plus c. King Arthur Flour

Place first five ingredients in bowl. Add 2 c. flour and beat for two min. with electric beater. Gradually add balance of flour, stirring by hand, until dough no longer sticks to sides of bowl. Place dough on lightly floured board and knead for five min. Place in greased bowl, turning over to grease top. Cover and let rise in warm place until double in bulk.

Topping for three pizzas:
16 oz. mozzarella, shredded
1 lb. 12 oz. can Pastene Kitchen Ready Ground Tomatoes

To tomatoes add: oregano, garlic powder, salt, pepper, all to personal taste (easy on the garlic powder).

When dough is ready, punch down, divide into thirds. Grease three cookies sheets and with hands, lightly grease the dough before rolling out. Using either a small pasty roller or hands, spread dough out on sheets, making edges for crust with fingers. Top first with tomato mixture, leaving a bit of uncovered crust all around. Top with mozzarella and drizzle with olive oil. Additional toppings: onion, mushrooms, pre-cooked and sliced sausage, green peppers, salami, or anything else that turns you on. Cook pizzas approx. 20-25 min. in pre-heated 425 degree oven, or until bottom crust is lightly browned.

What is a family cookout without at least one baby for everyone to exclaim over and spoil a little? Five-month-old Meaghan Lawrence brought her own goodies to a recent pool party at her grandparents — enought for her dog, Sundown, as well. Both were drooling, Meaghan because she was cutting her first tooth and Sundown because he knew how tasty these are:

MAKE-IT-YOURSELF TEETHING STIX
2 c. whole wheat flour
1 1/4 c. milk
1/2 c. oil
2 c. wheat germ
1 T honey

Combine all ingredients and knead until smooth. Cut down and roll into sticks 1 1/4" thick, about 5" long. Place on oiled cookie sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 40 min., until brown and firm. Makes 50 to 60 sticks. Note: Because Meaghan has a habit of poking them in her eye, Mom had the bright idea of shaping the sticks into rings which didn't stop Sundown from enjoying them, either.

Here are a few hints on pizza making: be sparing in the use of strongly flavored ingredients such as anchovies, olives and capers...for those on low-sodium diets, salt can be deleted from the dough and unsalted mozzarella is available at many Italian specialty stores. Herbs, such as fennel and rosemary and hot red pepper flakes, do much to enhance flavor...unhomogenized mozzarella that has aged a few days is best for pizza. Absolutely fresh mozzarella has too much liquid, so let it age a few days in the refrigerator.

HAPPY FOURTH OF JULY!

Angler's corner

Those of you who have paid attention in recent weeks may recall our advice about chasing stripers from the Cohasset surf. Witness gentleman in photo...He's Dennis Kowal, a sculptor by profession, who is a fine fisherman as well.

The prize he's holding is a 27-pound bass taken from the rocks of Cohasset's Black Rock Beach last week. He was fishing the incoming tide and used a surface popper, which is always a good idea when you're fishing from the surf at night.

Kowal catches bass and bluefish with regularity in local waters and also holds an International Game Fish Association (IGFA) world record for Atlantic bonito which he caught near a pier at Woods Hole.

His success is being matched all along the South Shore. Big bass and some reasonably large bluefish have been taken in Hingham Harbor and off World's End. You would do well to also check off Minot Light, Third and Fourth Cliffs, High Pines, the Gurnet and off Manomet. Duxbury Bay is good for schoolies, especially if you fish the channels on the outgoing tide.

Bluefish are here earlier and will probably stay later this year. They are also getting bigger and, as the summer wears on, they'll take on an even more oily taste as they gobble up schools of menhaden (pogies). Use a wire leader when fishing for them and watch their teeth.

Mackerel are spotty again, but pollock are most everywhere and will sometimes interfere with your striper fishing. One angler told us last week that a small school of pollock had the audacity to go after the pogie he was trolling off Marshfield.

And elsewhere...flounder are still good in Hingham Harbor, Cohasset Harbor, the A Street Pier (Hull), the North River, Duxbury Bay and in Plymouth Bay off the Old Cordage Company. Kevin Scola (howyadoin' Kevin), took one of three bluefin tuna that were reported boated last week. Not a huge fish, but healthy at between 500 and 600 pounds...a flounder fisherman patrolling the waters at the mouth of the North and South Rivers caught himself a brown trout which is unusual but not impossible. Sea-run brown trout have been stocked in the Jones River (Kingston) for several years.

At Trip Hammer Pond in Hingham last week, fishermen used worms to bring in some handsome yellow perch...Fishermen who are 65 or older are eligible for free sporting (fishing & hunting) licenses. Check your local town halls.

Sweetwater anglers who wish to enter the Massachusetts Freshwater Sports Fishing Awards program can obtain an application by writing: Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, Field Headquarters, Westboro, Mass. 01581.

...Tip of the week: when trolling for freshwater bass, work a sharp drop-off along a weed line. Troll what is called a deep-diving lure, particularly one of the new lures that are equipped with a rattle. You will do best at dawn or at dusk.

Selectmen to study regional cable television

The full board of selectmen is trying to learn more about the possibility of a regional system of cable television.

Cable television would scarcely make the sort of profit the big companies seek out with only the town involved. While officials of the major companies in state were reluctant to go public, there is a strong interest in Cohasset as a part of a broader base.

The Hingham selectmen took the initiative to set up a regional meeting on cable systems this week. All three of the Cohasset selectmen were planning to be there.

Representatives of cable companies have been dropping into the selectmen's office for some time now. But the town is not ready to begin the actual process of selecting a cable firm.

"We're just at the talking stage," said Selectman Mary Jane McArthur. Not one firm has submitted an actual application.

The larger communities in the area have begun the process. Licenses have been awarded in Plymouth, Marshfield and Weymouth. Even the city of Boston is in the process.

Cable televison is what 1984 is all about. The possibilities of cable TV mean the ability to send transmissions from the home.

Buy by television, private burglar and fire alarms, security systems using closed circuit TV, plus an extremely large number of channels showing first run movies, live sports, 24-hour news, town meeting will be available in time. The technology is being tested now.

Coaches win raise

Cohasset school coaches won a seven percent increase this week.

The raise was an across-the-board for everyone in the coaching field except Clark Chatterton, the athletic director. Chatterton had received a 33 percent raise, amounting to $1,000, when the teacher contract was settled.

School committee members obtained the permission of the teachers' union to give the raise as an appendix to the already signed contract.

Jones leaves CHS

Gregory Jones, high school chemistry teacher, resigned. Jones is leaving after three years with the school system because his wife, who taught in Quincy schools, was laid off in the implementation of Proposition 2½. The couple plans to move to Texas where they will both have work.

The school system is now seeking replacements for that chemistry slot, a guidance counselor and a high school math teacher. There were eight-and-a-half teachers laid off in lower grades.

Now Something Better® means

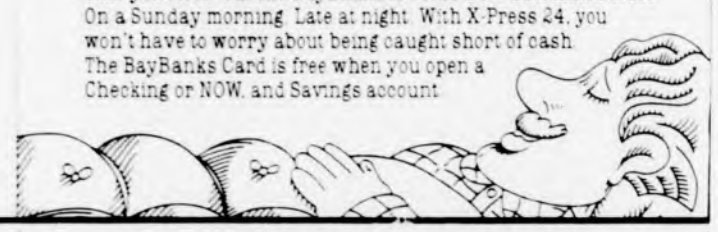
Something you should wake up to Wake up to a whole new world of banking convenience that's come to Marshfield. BayBank Norfolk Trust announces the opening of its new office at 934 Plain Street (Rte. 139) on Wednesday, July 1.

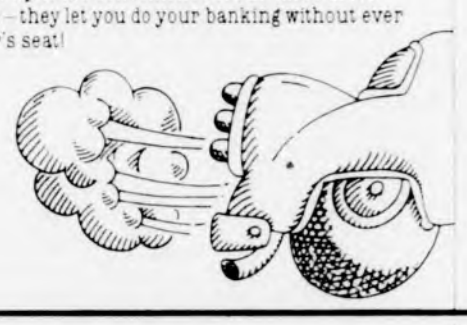
Something to make you sleep easy

With a BayBanks Card, you can get up to $350 a day any time you need it at the BayBanks X-Press 24™ automated teller. On a Sunday morning. Late at night. With X-Press 24, you won't have to worry about being caught short of cash. The BayBanks Card is free when you open a Checking or NOW, and Savings account.



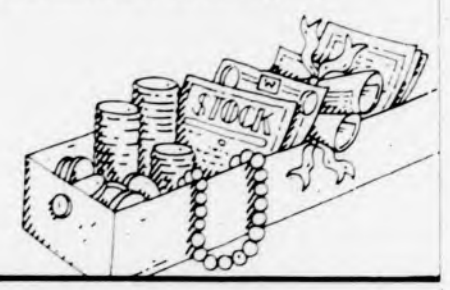
Something to warm you up

You'll really warm up to the convenience of our three drive-up teller windows – they let you do your banking without ever leaving the driver's seat!



Something to keep you cool

There's no need to get all fired up about protecting your valuables – our new Marshfield office has safe deposit boxes available now.

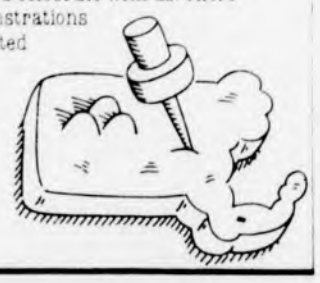


Something bigger

The BayBanks have a bigger network of locations around the state to serve you. With a BayBanks Card, you can get cash and check your balances at any of the more than 175 X-Press 24s around Massachusetts, day or night. And at all BayBank Norfolk Trust locations you can also make deposits and transfer funds any time you want. During banking hours, use your BayBanks Card to cash your own personal checks at more than 190 offices of the BayBanks.

Something smaller

We give old-style, small-town service. Personal service. Friendly service. We'd like to get to know you. Join the festivities on Saturday, July 11, and celebrate with us. There will be refreshments. Gifts. Demonstrations of the amazing X-Press 24 automated teller. Don't miss out on the fun.



Where Something Better® means something a lot better!

UNDER RENOVATION — New signs are up at the recycling center as the town-wide effort to promote reusing trash. More sprucing up is planned for the landfill. Signs are courtesy of the Boy Scouts. (Greg Derr Photo)

Recycling plan needs help

Town officials are trying to prolong the life of the dump through a major recycling effort.

The major hitch — still to be worked out — is the problem of enforcement. Right now the plan relies on the goodwill of the townspeople.

Selctmen have asked the auxiliary police for help on the overall problems of enforcement at the landfill on Cedar Street. Some help has been promised. But will volunteers be able to do all the law enforcement work needed at the dump even on weekends. Officials say it is doubtful.

Two teenage workers have been assigned to work on the recycling equipment throughout the eight weeks of summer. They are paid under a federal Youth Corps grant which requires adult supervision. The landfill workers who operate under Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield already work at full capacity.

But with July 1 a new system went into effect. All residents using the dump must have a resident sticker. The stickers which cost $10 are also good for beach parking.

In years past dump users were supposed to have the stickers, which were free. Enforcement was erratic. Workers had other things to do.

Well, now town meeting has ordered a new system of paid dump stickers. No money was appropriated to enforce it. In fact salary figures at the landfill were reduced to the bone with Proposition 2½. The dump is closed Mondays and Wednesdays.

And as town officials continue to think about the problem of enforcement of the dump stickers, there is a new group enfranchised to use the facility.

Last week selectmen voted to allow local business people who may not live in the community the right to purchase special dump stickers.

(Most of the stickers are the same as beach stickers. Police Chief John DeBassio is having something special printed to designate dumping privileges only.)

The change came after a number of small business people complained privately to selectmen about their problems with trash.

Norfolk Conveyor, a local business that has donated barrels at Sandy Beach, complained about not being able to provide employees with beach stickers. On that the selectmen stood firm.

"I think we have to provide them a dump,"

House action near on new casino bill

Members of the legislature say that once the state budget is worked out, they expect the House will move to accept the Hull-promoted casino bill.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset wants to keep that bill from ever being filed — that's hardly news.

What is news is the intense lobbying efforts of pro-casino people. What is continuing news is that many top officials won't issue a definitive answer when asked about their stand on casino gambling. For instance, the governor, Edward King, won't be pinned down.

He has said he thinks regional approval should be granted. A press spokesman said he can't define that any more.

The attorney general's office says he has no position. A copy of the report put together by the attorney general of New York, criticizing casinos, was dropped off in his office several weeks ago.

"I don't know if he's read it yet. I'll check and see if he has anything to say," said a spokesman

'Welcome to the Taverna'

By Patricia Desmond

Even under the cloudy skies Sunday, there was a glow at the Greek Orthodox Church on Jerusalem Road.

"Kalos ilthate stin taverna," the saying said or "Welcome to the Taverna."

I asked a woman who was serving the incredibly good Greek pastry whether the day was by the South Shore Helenic and Cultural Society or the Church itself.

"What's the difference," she answered. "It's the same thing, the same people."

She handed mea slice of baklava, oozing out honey and sticky goodness. She could see I wasn't the type to wait for dessert.

The line for the dinners was long but people waiting for the feast were jovial.

The man ahead of me — who came from Scituate — said he had come on the Fourth of July as well. His wife said she doesn't like to cook on holiday but they both like to eat well.

Well, they were about to have their chance to do just that. Church members had been working for weeks, preparing for this feast, which is the major fund-raiser for the church.

Patrolman David Pomarico, who was working at the church, trying to cope with the impossibilities of keeping part of the narrow stretch of Jerusalem Road clear for through traffic, estimated there were 1,500 to 2,000 people at the Taverna. There were more on Sunday.

Tents were set up all over the small church lawn,

A Common problem

Invasion of the flag snatchers

By Loretta Hoch

Martha Washington created her. Francis Scott Keyes wrote an anthem to her. Battles have been fought for her. And someone in Cohasset keeps stealing her.

The red, white, and blue banner of the U.S. is having a harder time flying over the Cohasset Common than she does on most battlefields. In fact, Cohasset has yet to execute a formal flag lowering ceremony on the Common as the flag never survives its 85' perch long enough to be so honored. The unconventional procedure now being practiced calls for an agile person to shimmy 20 feet up the pole, snap the halyard, grab the falling cloth and run.

Three flags stolen in one week during June set a new record on the Common, and town officials remain at a loss on how to combat the problem. Selectman Rocky Laugelle can only hope a new padlock which has been ordered will withstand the boltcutters used to snap the halyard's lock. In addition, a 20-foot wooden sheath has been constructed around the bottom of the highly vulnerable halyard, "making it that much further and harder for someone to shimmy up the pole," pointed out Laugelle.

Cohasset's week

Tree climber hired

Thomas Williams of Hull was appointed as tree climber by selectmen last week. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said this action means another employee in a different job will be laid off. The other employee asked town officials to terminate him in the past.

Selectmen say the problem of implementing Proposition 2½ forced the reduction. The other employee is not qualified as a tree climber.

Doyle request nixed

Gerald Doyle won't get his leave of absence to try a job with the MIT security police.

The selectmen voted two to one last week against his request. Board Chairman Henry Ainslie pointed out that if the request were granted there would be no appropriate category for listing the leave under civil service regulations. Selectman Rocco Laugelle voted in favor of the leave.

$800 for tow signs

It's going to cost $800 to put tow zone signs up on Jerusalem Road and nearby beachfront roadways.

Police Chief John DeBassio says 50 signs will be needed to post the area.

Ice cream trucks

There will be two ice cream trucks traveling about the town but they won't stop at Sandy Beach, Government Island or the Little League Field by the Swim Center.

Four applications for the vendors' licenses were sent to selectmen. None of the applicants live in town. The first two accepting the terms, in the order of the date of their application, will receive the licenses.

Exec. secretary report

By mid-month the choice of executive secretary will be narrowed to the winner.

Interviews of the top seven candidates are continuing this week. Included in the top seven are: Arthur Clark, and two other unidentified Cohasset residents.

There were about 70 applications for the job, including three from town residents. Selectmen Henry Ainslie said he was refusing to give out the names of the candidates until the interview process began.

Storyteller at Pratt

Storytellers from the Boston area will present a series of evening programs for family enjoyment. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is pleased to offer these story hours to school-age children and their parents, beginning Monday, July 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the children's room.

Ms. Mildred Adelson, a former children's librarian in the Boston Public Library system, will be the first guest storyteller. She will tell a group of tales, "to prove that you're smarter than you think you are...compared to whom!"

Such favorites as "Gone is Gone," by Wanda Gag, "The Wisemen of Helm," by Solomon Simon, and "The Three Sneezes" by Roger Duvoisin will be among the stories told.

An accomplished teller of tales, Ms. Adelson has told stories throughout the Boston system and at the Boston Globe Book Festival. Her program will last about 45 minutes.

Liquor license okay

The legislature recently passed special legislation to allow the selectmen to give Cohasset Harbor Liquors an all-year all-alcoholic license.

So far no application has been presented to the board. But then Cohasset Harbor Liquors has a seasonal license that will allow liquor sale until November.

Pedestrian safety award

The American Automobile Association is giving Police Chief John DeBassio a pedestrian safety award because the town has had no auto-pedestrian fatalities in the four years from 1976 to 1979.

Actually the police chief during that time period was Randy Feola Sr.

Higher registry fees

Cohasset selectmen are backing the efforts of the Norfolk County Commissioners to increase the fees for the registry of deeds. The increase would end up saving the town money.

Line painters

Markings Inc. of Hingham will paint the street lines this year. The company was awarded the bid as low bidder.

Litchfield reappointment

James Litchfield was reappointed building inspector and inspector of public buildings last week.

Macklin resigns

Sportsman's Club use questioned

The little red building on Route 3A opposite Cohasset Winter Gardens may be moving to a new location.

Selectmen want the building off town property and have authorized Mary Jane McArthur to begin the process.

The building itself is owned by the Cohasset Sportsman's Club. There is some dispute over the viability of the club. Selectmen have discussed the club membership with Joe Rosano, an officer of the club and the present tenant of the building.

Back in 1964 town meeting authorized the selectmen to enter into a lease for the land with the Sportsmen's Club.

Henry Anislie, chairman of the board of selectmen, says there was an extensive presentation at town meeting about the kind of building that would go up and the operation of the club.

For a while everyone seems to agree the club did operate with a broad membership. But when Rosano went to talk about the building with selectmen earlier this year, his argument that the club was still alive rested on a membership of about a dozen and a meeting that had been held three or four months before.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle says some residents have complained that the building is used as a residence yet the town owns the land. The building itself is taxed at the rate of about $200. The structure is owned by the club, having been moved to the town land after the 1964 vote.

"Can we act on this where town meeting approved it initially?" Ainslie asked last week.

Town counsel Blake Thaxter is of the opinion the selectmen have the legal right to demand the property be left in the same condition, should they evict the structure.

A spokesman for Rosano said there would be no comment until the selectmen notify him.

The Greek Taverna

to keep the food safe in case of rain. The small amount of wet weather scarcely seemed to bother the crowd. People came with umbrellas during the downpour.

The long line was a sign of the fame of the Taverna. Stuffed grape leaves, lamb, moussaka, shish kebob, traditional Greek salad and spinach pie were heaped at the end. Reward enough.

Of course, provision was made for small people with less developed tastes. Hamburgers were also served.

One tent was set aside for merrymaking. In that tent, lines of very full people danced and hummed to the fast-moving Greek music.

It was a day of fine humor.

Vacant stations

The question is: what to do with the two manless fire stations.

Maybe a committee should be appointed to look into the possibilities — the charge in the back of their collective mind being to find some way of bringing a return to the town.

In nearby Scituate, they are turning an old fire station into a senior center. Not a bad idea. In nearby Hingham, they turned a vacant school into housing for the elderly.

Now you wouldn't be able to fit many units into the Beechwood Station but it's worth a thought. The federal government seems to have unlimited funds for this sort of project.

The station in North Cohasset wouldn't do for housing. But some entrepreneur might like to take a stab at opening a gift shop.

The selectmen, worried about the dozen or so broken windows in the Beechwood Station, have decided the way to go for now is to board up the building. At least they hope they can find enough money or materials to board up the side of the station that faces the ballfield.

Good thinking. Good start.

For quite some time it was considered unfashionable to think patriotic thoughts on the 4th of July. For quite some time it was fashionable to be embarrassed at American foreign policy and mistakes.

We Americans were acting like a bunch of teenagers about you.

That is the way of adolescents — watching with ever critical eyes all the mistakes their parents make, unable to feel proud of who they are, who they are part of.

Now a new era has entered American society. Some call it a wave of conservatism — especially since it put the Republicans back in power — some call it a wave of patriotism. We might guess the people using that word voted for at least one Republican in the last federal election.

Whatever it is that is happening seems to carry a surge of hope at the national level. And this is the point, America: do you think some of that talk about a bright new day and better times beyond the penny pinching of today could filter down to our town?

All this verbiage about Proposition 2½ is getting us down.

Anyway, happy birthday, America.

Backstage at the universe

By Paul Steven Stone

Commentary

Not yet three years have passed since that day in late August; a day when sweat stained everything you touched and the breeze lifted your hopes but never the heat.

I was on a spiritual retreat, locked away for a week on a country estate with a few hundred others who, like myself, craved a sense of order for this life. On the day in question, I was working in the kitchen.

It must have been mid-afternoon when a heavy droning sound pulled me from my task, and I found myself first staring at, then chasing after, one of those mammoth B-52 moths that so much likes to bank against porch screens on sultry summer nights.

He was so fat and ponderous that his retreat seemed to unwind in slow motion. Still, he might have escaped had he not flown so close to the window, where someone had set up a large portable fan to exhaust the kitchen heat.

I watched without moving, fascinated, as the moth was drawn out of his flight path and pulled — wings flapping to the contrary — towards the whirling, humming blades of the fan.

It was then that the spectacle took a curious turn. The moth, in a plucky bid for survival, grabbed onto the fan's safety screen as he was sucked through. So when I stepped up for a closer look, there he was clinging with two incredibly thin front legs to a strand of the enameled wire mesh while the rest of his oversized torso was lifted up into the vortex of the inexorable fan.

There was something bewitching about this melodrama before me. How else can you describe a moment in your life when a moth becomes a hero?

I was moved by the moth's almost human will to survive, and by the very human way in which he struggled. It was as if he understood what was waiting for him the moment he released his grip. Somehow, I lost the sense that he and I were different; and in a moment of timeless expansion I seemed to step outside the physical world as I knew it.

Looking back, I can see why certain qualities seem to shine when manifested, as though they contain glimpses of higher truths. What I was experiencing in that drama of the indomitable moth was valor in its purest form. There was something so basic about it, that I felt as if I were watching the gears of the universe at work.

There were two worlds, and from where I was standing I could see them both. In one, a moth was fighting for his life. In the other, a moth and a man were no different from one another than one actor in a drama is to the next. They had different roles to play, different costumes to wear, but the importance of those differences melted away once you saw they existed only on a stage. Two worlds, or two views of the same world; a play seen from both sides of the stage. And suddenly my role became clear.

I placed my index finger within reaching distance of the moth, and he — true to his role — reached for it, one leg at a time, pulling himself to safety.

For a few moments I stood there staring at this brave little creature who seemed content to sit forever on my finger. But you can only remain in the middle of a busy kitchen staring at a moth on your finger for so long before people begin to murmur vague remarks that grow less and less vague the longer you remain.

I carried my new friend out of the kitchen, and once outside brought him up close to my face. Here was a moth again, fat and ugly as before but somehow not so foreign. The moment of our connection had passed. Whatever door had opened up to reveal the clockworks of the universe had closed again. Just a moth on my finger in a world where moths and humans rarely mix.

I don't recall any parting words. There was just a gentle shove, and his fat little body took wing. I envied him the sky to which he rose, but returned without regret to my duties in the kitchen.

There's a place in the universe -- call it a back room, if you like — where all things share equally in the substance of creation. A place where a moth and a man can meet on equal terms. A place where courage never loses its luster. One hot August afternoon I stumbled into that room, and I've been trying to find my way back there ever since.

Gypsy moth money went unspent

Letters

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray sent the following letter to John Bewick, Secretary of Environmental Affairs. ED.]

Dear John:

I spoke with Mr. Charles Hood, Environmental Management, several weeks ago, regarding the gypsy moth infestation in the Commonwealth.

Mr. Hood's answer to my request for his department to apply for the Federal funds for 1982 for this purpose was not positive.

I would like to suggest that application for funds to eliminate the gypsy moth problem next spring be executed now.

Two million dollars was allocated to the New England states for this purpose this year. We did not apply for any of these funds and I am extremely disturbed about this.

My constituents have lost evergreen trees and leaves from many of their trees (not only oak trees) due to the ravenous appetite and the great numbers of these caterpillars.

I can speak for myself as well as my constituents as far as damage in my yard is concerned.

Several times a day (even now, when they supposedly are no longer with us), I knock the caterpillars off the trunks of my trees and bushes and kill them. (Fifteen this morning on one linden tree.)

And please do not attempt to tell me they are no longer eating. Each morning I check and find more leavings under my trees and bushes.

We have had our trees sprayed twice by a professional tree man and we still have the "critters."

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Please do not let us miss the boat next year on any Federal funds which might be available.

I voted affirmatively for the amendment which placed money in the House budget for the purpose of ridding us of the gypsy moth caterpillars.

Sincerely,
Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative

Beautiful people

Dear Cohasset Parents:

I have just finished my last days and weeks with your children. I am at times angry and bitter, but mostly I am sad. They have given me the best three years of my life, and I love them for it. You all should be proud. They are beautiful people.

Sadly,

Life is good at the age of 32

To the Editor:

My husband, Jim, and I have lived in Cohasset for 1½ years and received the Mariner as a housewarming gift from our friends on Linden Drive.

What a special treat each week when the paper arrives. I especially like Patricia Desmond's column. I do disagree with her essay of July the first, though. She just turned 35...well here is my story.

I just turned 32 and feel great about myself. L'Oreal can cover any gray hairs and wrinkles are simply laugh marks. Grow your fingernails or change your hairstyle to perk yourself up. Try cultivating a new friendship like I have with Judy. Make that extra attempt to attend church. Jog through our beautiful streets, and be thankful we live in this wonderful town.

My baby, Patrick, was born this year, and won't he ever have a great place to grow up in? He will even have Marie Price as a teacher. How special.

I thank God each day for my health, family and beautiful home. So what's so bad about turning 32?

The rules of the house

By Claire McDonough

Now that summer has reached its mid-point, it has become clear that it was a big mistake not to set down ground rules for the people who live in my house and who don't have to go to school until September. Let me hasten to rectify this error with the following non-negotiable demands.

1. House, alteration of: There are to be no structural changes to the house without prior consent of the management. Such consent is not likely to be forthcoming. Any desires for partitions, picture windows, skylights or other addition to your room will have to be frustrated until such time as you maintain your own domicile. I really mean this, Jay.

2. Entertainment: Children entertaining their friends shall assume all financial responsibility for same. This includes refreshment, replacement of any windows, dishes or furniture that may be broken in the course of said entertainment as well as any financial arrangement that must be reached with the Police Department or Hingham District Court.

3. Pets: No new pets are to be introduced into the household. This cannot be too strongly stressed. A good rule of thumb is, "If it eats, sheds, or moves, forget it."

4. Car Repair: No car repair is to be done in your bedroom. Any disabled vehicle found in a child's room will be confiscated and converted to a coffee table ornament.

5. Food: The management continues to entertain an active interest in your nutrition. The padlock on the cabinet containing peanut butter, tuna fish, corned beef hash and other canned goods does not, despite your obvious conviction to the contrary, indicate a desire that you starve, but merely that food be available for all members of the family at regular meal times. Snacks, camping trips or fluffer-nutter attacks can be negotiated with the management. It is probable that said negotiations will involve physical labor on the part of the child in question.

6. Nothing to Do: Any child who finds him/herself with nothing to do shall report to the management for immediate rectification of the situation.

7. Sand in House, Wet: Sandy and/or wet laundry contributes nothing to the decor of the house. Deposited on a bed, it is likely to contribute sand fleas to the occupant. Upon your return from the beach rinse out all towels and bathing suits with the outside hose. Violators of this rule will not be issued calamine lotion.

8. Sand in House, Dry: We want you to enjoy healthful activities at the beach. However, when you leave the beach, leave the beach. Sand transported from the shore to the living room via sneakers, etc., not only violates the town's earth removal bylaw, it also can prove hazardous to your health. N.B. An enraged parent may well be hazardous to your health.

9. Music, volume of: Although music appreciation is acknowledged to be enriching, unacceptable volume will not be tolerated. The following will constitute indication that music has exceeded an acceptable volume — (a) a complaint from a neighbor 3½ blocks distance; (b) a visit (non-social) from the Police Department; (c) glass that shatters without being touched.

10. Whereabouts, notification of: Any child who absents him/herself from the home property shall, prior to leaving, inform the management of the anticipated whereabouts and estimated time of return. The term "estimated" should be construed to mean within 15 minutes of actual arrival time. "Sometime Thursday" will be considered too vague.

We realize that the above regulations would be frowned upon by that paragon of virtue, Everyone Else's Mother, who allows her kids to watch everything on pay T.V., never asks them to do any work, and is taking them to Europe just as soon as she gets back from picking up her Pulitzer. In the interest of fairness, therefore, all complaints addressed to the management will be seriously considered then discarded. Why? Because we like you!

A hard line against illegal liquor sales

By Patricia Desmond

The town is taking a hard line against liquor sale to anyone under age. No matter what the circumstances.

The Riddle's Market lost its beer and wine license for the Fourth of July over a recent sale to a 17-year-old who even police admitted looked a bit older.

Business is going on as usual this week at Riddle's. But from now on no out of state drivers' licenses will be accepted as a means of establishing age.

The young man involved in the June 12 incident had a full beard, was six feet, four inches tall and weighed 220 pounds, according to the testimony given to selectmen last Wednesday night.

But Patrolman David Pomarico, making a routine check of the store, spotted the sale on that Friday night and knowing the young man, brought charges against both him and the store.

The youth had a Missouri license on him when he was taken into custody. He lives in Cohasset.

The night of the arrest he bought two cases of beer and a half gallon of wine and was heading toward a car where two 16-year-old girls were waiting.

The owner of the store was philosophical about the matter. Ray Riddle never tried to defend the sale. In fact at one point in the hearing, he said, "Thank God Officer Pomarico came by and stopped the sale. Some teenager might have been killed."

He made it clear his store was not looking for the underaged business. He ordered the new, tighter controls on liquor sale identification to prevent recurrence of the incident.

The store clerk hadn't asked the youth for an I.D. that night. He had carded him before, more than once, and found the identification in order.

He said the store required two pieces of back-up identification for anyone using an out-of-state driver's license and that the young man had that back-up before.

He said the young man had been a regular customer for three weeks before he was arrested.

The store manager said there is a problem in town with under-aged youths trying to buy liquor using their older brothers and sisters driver's licenses.

Estimates are four to seven potential liquor buyers are turned away each night at Riddle's alone.

House action near on new casino bill

for Frank Bellotti. The spokesman called back later to say there would be no comment for the time.

Robert Abrams, the New York attorney general, said in his report, "The evidence from Nevada and Atlantic City conclusively indicates that legalized casino gambling would be accompanied by a debilitating upsurge of crime in the areas where the casinos are located.

"Nevada which has had 50 years to learn to live with casino gambling leads the United States in crime. In Las Vegas alone, there were 34,257 serious crimes last year, including 92 murders, giving that city the nation's highest per capita crime rate."

The figures also show that one in every nine women between the ages of 15 and 19 is a prostitute in that city.

By the end of 1980 there were six casinos operating in Atlantic City; the first had opened in 1978. In that three year period, crime rates there went up 200 percent.

Sally Jackson is the public relations specialist who now works for MGM Grand in the lobbying effort to allow casinos in Hull and Adams. Her office is on Clarendon Street.

She has different arguments in favor of the legislation. She says people here can't begin to understand what a casino would be like in Hull because the example of other American cities wouldn't be followed.

She said the place to look is Europe where casinos are more like clubs and quite elegant. She points out the MGM Grand people plan to have top name entertainment in Hull, big stars who would attract tourists themselves.

Maria Plante, one of the people who would be living within a mile from the Hull casino, counters that in Europe the casinos are for tourists. In some places natives are not even allowed.

MGM expects it would draw most of its casino traffic from 160 mile radius.

Flag snatchers

In the meantime, Cohasset is doing its best to observe the government's meticulously outlined rules regarding the flag. Federal and state laws call for the display of the American flag on all publicly owned property, and any defacement, mutilation, or misuse is subject to a $10 to $100 fine.

Flag etiquette upholds the respect due the country's symbol by dictating the proper means and manners to be observed when showing off Old Glory.

However, Cohasset's efforts to comply with these standards are embarrassingly thwarted by the ongoing thefts.

Developing a dependable security system is complicated by the discrepancies involved in assigning flag-tending duties to any one group in town.

While the Selectmen oversee the general upkeep of all publicly flown flags, the Tree and Park Department is charged with the general maintenance, such as making sure that the light which illuminates the Common's flag is always lit and lowering the banner during inclement weather.

The Fire Department has assumed the annual chore of painting the 85-foot pole, a job much simplified by the use of their 100-foot ladder. The Police Department provides a routine surveillance of the Common, but cannot afford to assign one patrol with 24 hour "flag duty."

Replacing the stolen flags is the responsibility of Selectmen. Cohasset practices the tradition of flying flags which have been donated to the town by the families of dead veterans. "It's customary for the flag which is draped over a veteran's coffin to be passed along to the town by the family," explained Laugelle.

Last year, however, a few ambitious citizens decided that the Town's Common should be honored with a flag large enough to complement the prominent pole. Through the efforts of CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton, $1,200 worth of hats were sold to raise the $400 on the price tag attached to an 18 x 20 foot flag. The new banner replaced the old 8 x 12 foot flag in March of 1980, and was so large, that Laugelle recalls, "We had to lower it on windy days, because of the chance that given the flag's weight, any severe flapping would snap the pole."

But the Common's pride and joy was short-lived, as the new flag proved too much of a temptation to local flag snatchers. After two weeks, the flag succumbed to the same fate as its predecessors, and every flag since then has disappeared with depressing regularity.

Bristling at the brazenness of the ongoing crime, Laugelle insisted that, "We're going to keep experimenting with new safeguard techniques, and when we come up with a fool proof system, we'll get another 18 by 20 footer."

Letters

50 is quite nice

Dear Pat:

Don't worry about being 35...tomorrow...with a giant step...you'll be 50 and it's really quite nice!!

Fifty is middle age, (if the perspective is Hannah Lindquist whose picture on Page one accompanied the article about her 100th birthday party).

You state that you haven't finished doing what you planned to do with your life. I hope you never do. It is much more exciting to continue to strive.

Wrinkles and gray...so what...the seasons change too. Summer is lush, but autumn is breathtaking, a time to absorb what life has offered.

May I add a line from Desiderata (author unknown but it has been a favorite of mine since I first read it as having been on Adlai Stevenson's last Christmas card):

"And whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life, keep peace with your soul."

Sincerely,
Margy Charles

Casino opponents hit crime issue

The president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, has challenged statements concerning crime made by casino promoters on recent radio and television shows.

Carol Oteri, of Hull, said, "Some pro-casino speakers admit that increased crime will be a problem if casino gambling is legalized in this state, but try to dismiss it by saying that any increase in population is accompanied by an increase in crime.

"We are talking about casino related crime, a type which increases at a rate far beyond any general increase in population. Wherever you have people who can't afford to lose leaving the tables minus the funds to get home, they will find a way to get what they need. Wherever huge amounts of money circulate and are carried by individuals you invite increased assaults and robberies. Casino environs are magnets for all sorts of 'operators' looking for 'action.'

"The executive director of the Narcotics Addiction Rehabilitation Center, addressing casino representatives at a recent seminar in Atlantic City, said 'there has to be something over there in the casino' when attempting to assign blame for the city's skyrocketing drug problems.

"Casino proponents expect us to believe that casinos in Massachusetts would be 'different,' that problems would be 'controllable' — this despite the evidence of soaring crime in Atlantic City after the opening of the first casino. They then try to excuse Atlantic City's experience with mention of its 'urban slum areas.' If crime can shoot up so dramatically in a city with an existing urban slum and its typical problems, we can expect huge increases in a town like Hull, which has extremely low numbers in the very areas where Las Vegas and Atlantic City have significant 'distinction.'

"Statistics are cold, hard facts. They don't suggest the trauma suffered by victims of robberies, muggings, purse snatching, or the fear of untold numbers of elderly persons. If you think that casinos won't bring open-ended crime and corruption you are kidding yourself.

"Crime is not always something that happens to 'other' people. It can happen to anyone and your chances of being a victim are greatly increased by the proximity of a casino.

"It is no accident that Connecticut's casino bill was killed in their legislature's Public Safety Committee. Casinos are not conducive to the public's safety. It is also the reason why Attorney General Robert Abrams of New York last month announced his opposition to casinos, a reversal of his previous position.

"As our sister states reach the conclusion that the risks and disadvantages of casinos outweigh the advantages, resisting the siren song of speculative interests and the construction and service unions, Massachusetts is being pressured to believe that we are too 'diverse' and 'sophisticated' to be plagued with the types of problems associated with casinos.

"We are being promised a 'Monte Carlo' type gambling setup. That was the same promise made to Atlantic City. Must we always reinvent the wheel? Can we never learn from the experience of others?"

Extra school money goes for oil

School committee authorized spending the rest of this year's budget for next year's materials this week.

Almost $10,000 of the $56,000 extra went to filling the oil tanks.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said that due to a glut on the oil market right now, the tanks were filled for 10 cents a gallon less than the last oil delivery. The new rate is a gallon under a contract that is regulated by the price per barrel.

The funds, which were built into the coming year's budget, will pay the salaries of two staff members the school committee decided to keep without placing any money in the budget.

Crowell said the concept of using funds saved from this year's account to cushion next year's cuts were essential.

Mixed doubles tournament to benefit hospital

One of the highlights of Cohasset summers is the annual Cohasset Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament to benefit the Children's Hospital.

Organized and run by a group of teenagers from the area, the tournament has been raising money to support the hospital for a number of years. The beauty of the town and the opportunity to play competitive tennis for a worthwhile cause attracts players from not only the South Shore but greater Boston as well.

This year, the elimination matches will be held on Saturday, August 1, at various private courts around Cohasset. On August 2 the semi-finals and finals will be held at "The Oaks," home of Mrs. William Cox, at 49 Margin Street in Cohasset. Mrs. Cox is donating the prizes that will be awarded to the winners of the tournament. A light lunch will be available on Sunday for interested spectators for a small donation. The tournament will be umpired by James Sullivan, who has officiated at many professional tennis tournaments, including those at Longwood.

Proceeds from the tournament will be used by the hospital to provide furniture and equipment to create a better atmosphere in the playrooms. Since the young patients spend most of their recreational time relaxing in the playrooms, it is important that they be pleasant and cheerful.

Raffle tickets for prizes donated by local merchants will be on sale until the finals, when a drawing will be held.

This year the members of the steering committee are Doug Mitman (chairman), Mary Jane Benson, Hayden Foell, Diana Manchester, and Susan Yake. The registration fee is $20 a couple. Interested players should write Diana Manchester at 61 Nichols Road, Cohasset, or call 383-1575. Entries close on July 22.

Norwell issues softball challenge

Norwell Selectman David Mayers has thrown down the gauntlet to Scituate and other neighboring towns for a softball duel.

Last year, Scituate invited Norwell to play a softball game between teams comprised of Town officials and employees.

Despite the pitching presence of former Red Sox pitcher Jim Lonborg for the Scituate team, Norwell's entry won in a waltz.

"It was a fun event," Mayers commented, "It would be nice to see if Scituate or any other neighboring town would like to see if they can beat us."

Register for gymnastics at Community Center

Registrations are now being accepted for the Cohasset Community Center's popular summer gymnastics program.

Center instructor Ruthann Sargent will begin her six-week Saturday morning program July 11. Tumble tot classes will run from 9 to 10 and from 10 to 11; beginner-intermediate classes are scheduled from 11 a.m. until noon; and intermediate-advanced will run from noon until 1 p.m.

Further information is available at the center on Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Summer soccer summary

Cohasset's three entries into the Boston Area Youth Soccer (BAYS) League this spring made strong showings in their first year in this highly competitive high school league.

The two boys' teams, the varsity Skippers (AA Division) and the junior high Seaman (B Division), each finished in third place. The varsity girls' team (AA Division) finished with a 4 win, 5 loss, 1 tie record; their league standing has not yet been established. A summary on each team's performance follows.

COHASSET SKIPPERS

The Cohasset Skippers boys' soccer team (AA-varsity) completed its first season in the BAYS League with a decisive 5-1 win over Westwood. That win put the Skippers in third place with a 5 wins, 3 losses, 2 ties record. The Cohasset players beat every team in the league once, with an early-season 3-2 win over Medfield, the first place team, and a resounding 6-1 beating of the second place Brookline team late in the season.

Under Coach Martin Acevedo of Scituate, the team developed into a fine offensive machine as the season wore on.

The season started with the strong defensive combination of Nick Berents or Greg Raffa in goal and Pat Duffy, Ed Booth and Steve D'Onofrio as fullbacks. With forwards and halfbacks developing more fluid and confident game as the season progressed, the offensive plays began to click and the team score 20 goals in its last four games.

With Jim Leonard as striker, Nick Berents, Gordon Ricketts and Todd Langford as forwards, and Mike Nedrow, Bill Duncombe and Matt Packard at midfield, the team played like seasoned professionals and steamrolled strong Milton, Brookline and Westwood teams, none of which the Skippers defeated in the first half of the season. Even in its late-season loss to Medfield (the league leader), Cohasset scored four goals but lost because of the absence of some of the Skippers' starting defensive players.

The season held many fine moments. The first Cohasset goal in the BAYS league was scored by Matt Packard, who placed a perfect kick from the 30-yard line. Jim Leonard and Nick Berents played brilliantly together on the attack, particulary against the tough Brookline team. And in Todd Langford's final game as a Cohasset Skipper, he scored four goals; the first two he headed in on corner kicks, and the next two he drilled in with near-perfect kicks from midfield.

Chris McNabb, who had not played varsity level soccer before, vastly improved over the season in several positions and contributed two goals to the team's total. Both Nick Berents and Greg Raffa were outstanding goalkeepers, and both made many great saves during the season. Jim Leonard came through the season without injury and scored an impressive fifteen goals.

Unfortunately, the varsity soccer team for Cohasset High's Fall season will not have the benefit of all the fine players on the BAYS League team. Ed Booth, Dean Brown, Pat Duffy, Todd Langford, Matt Packard and Greg Raffa have graduated, and Nick Berents and Bill Duncombe will be attending out-of-town schools. However, with returning forwards Jim Leonard, Andy Pottenger and Gordon Ricketts and starting backs Steve D'Onofrio, Mike Nedrow and Diarmuid O'Connell, the fall team will have a strong nucleus.

SEASON SUMMARY - GOALS SCORED

BAYS [10 games]	Scrimmage [4 games]	TOTAL
Leonard 9	6	15
Langford 8	0	8
Ricketts 4	0	4
Berents 2	0	2
Duncombe 1	0	2
McNabb 2	0	2
Packard 1	1	2
Pottenger 1	0	1

COHASSET SEAMEN

The Cohasset B Soccer Team (Seamen) completed its season at Wellesley with a 3-5 loss.

Mason Sandel led the Cohasset effort with two opportunistic goals.

The Cohasset team played gallantly although seriously weakened by the loss of halfback Bob Shultz with a muscle strain and Mike DeSantis with the flu.

This was the first organized season for Cohasset 13 and 14 years olds and their 5-4-1 record placed them third in their league. They beat every team in the league at least once except Westwood, the champion.

Coach DeSantis was impressed by the team's progress. Many boys vastly improved their skills. David MacDonald developed a left footed shot and excellent ball control. Bob Shultz became an all around threat. Mason Sandel demonstrated fine one on one and ball control skills. Kevin Dunn proved to be perhaps the most improved player on the club. He learned the objectives of the halfback position and develped a strong and accurate passing game. Jeff Aaron played a tenacious fullback while Mike Mahoney proved to be our most aggressive player with ever improving technique. Sweeper back Aiden O'Connel and fullback Bob Leonard played their pressure positions confidently.

Center half Mike DeSantis was our most lethal player enduring the combined pressure of double teaming and a father-coach. Mark Crough, a striker halfback, displayed fine potential and a good shot. Will Langmaid was our most fearless defender. Billy McKenna and Greg Igo shared goal this year and both boys played some strong and exciting goal.

The coach hopes that all 21 of his players enjoyed the season as much as he and looks forward to another successful season next spring.

COHASSET WAVES

The Cohasset waves, although in a AA division composed of varsity girl soccer players, was a young team and one that had not played soccer previously as a team. Against very experienced competition, the Waves maintained their enthusiasm and managed to post a 4-5-1 record for the season.

With Jack Duncombe as their coach, the girls perfected their skills and learned much about the strategies of varsity level play. Unlike the boys' AA team, all the team players will return to the soccer field for Cohasset High in the Fall and to the BAYS League in the Spring.

Reserve account empty, still some outstanding bills

The advisory committee spent the last of the 1981 reserve account last week — but there are still some outstanding bills.

The few bills remaining will be left for a future town meeting to consider. They total $4,745.09 and include items like $2,700 for a bill for electricity at the water department due to Eastern Edison, another $950.29 for Eastern Edison for street lights, $203 for the fire department to pay hydrant fees due to rate increases, $724 for gypsy moth spraying in the tree and park department and $166 for insurance increases.

The $6,390.41 balance in the reserve account was spent, according to Osborne Ingram, board secretary.

Transfers approved were: police department expenses, $877.899; elections and registrations, $415.39; tree and park expenses, $732.04; harbor expenses, $170.02; wire department expenses, $492.01; all representing budget overruns from unexpected costs, and legal fees of $3,683.06, in connection with the Rice Island tennis court litigation.

The Advisory Committee also approved a transfer of $8,000 from the new 1982 Reserve Fund to the fire department salary account to continue the employment of one firefighter for up to six months. The 1982 fire department budget was established on the basis of a retirement then expected in August which would have reduced the roster to 24 men. This retirement has been delayed and on the recommendation of Chief Charles Piepenbrink, it was agreed that employment of the one extra man be continued. It was pointed out that possible unemployment liabilities could run to $4,000.

Plant a brick patio this summer . . . you'll grow to love it!

INSTRUCTIONS:

- After planning the size, dig out 6'' of soil/dirt.
- Border with soldier brick or R.R. ties or treated lumber.
- Spread 4'' of sand and tamp 'til firm and level.
- Figure 4½ to 5 brick per sq. ft. Use a hard brick suitable foı paving (at Plymouth Quarries you'll find a wide variety of top quality brick pavers)
- Plant brick firmly into sand 'til level and sweep sand into joints between brick.
- Water lightly . . . then enjoy.

We have everything you need to plant your patio this spring . . . we're the South Shore's largest masonry supply dealer.

What's today's good word?

COMPARE.

Smart shoppers always compare prices before they buy. And they're not fooled by offers of so-called "free" gifts, which they know that they'll probably end up paying for through higher prices. Keep this in mind when you shop for packaged goods, and you won't go wrong.

Compare these low prices with what others charge!

Federal legislation may be a boost to savers

Although much of the legislation is not yet final, recent developments in Washington are more encouraging for savers than anything in recent years, Osborne Ingram, president of Cohasset Savings Bank, reports in a review of proposed changes in banking regulations now before Congress.

"It begins to seem as if savers are going to be in the driver's seat for the first time in many years," Ingram states. "All indications are that we are going to get essential incentives and rewards for saving to match those that have been available for borrowing. Right now the timing and details of some of the changes are not certain, but they are all in the right direction."

Within the past several weeks, committees of Congress have proposed a significant increase in the amount of savings that would be tax exempt, have adopted a speeded-up schedule for the phaseout of deposit interest rate ceilings, and have recommended greatly expanded Individual Retirement Accounts and Keogh Plans for savings in anticipation of retirement.

"One of the strongest forces feeding inflation," Ingram says, "has been the tax deduction for interest paid on loans at a time when interest received on savings has been severely taxed. It's no wonder that people borrowed rather than saved when they found it to their advantage. The result has been that the United States has dropped far behind almost every other industrial nation in its percentage of savings, leading to a shortage of capital need for a healthy, growing economy."

Perhaps the most important of the proposed changes, Ingram says, is the "All Savers Plan" approved by the unanimous vote of the Senate Finance Committee and by a 29-3 vote of the House Ways and Means Committee. This legislation would authorize banks to offer special one-year "All Saver Certificates" paying maximum rates of 70 per cent of the one-year Treasury bill rate. Taxpayers filing joint returns would be permitted to exclude up to $2,000 per year of interest from federal taxation ($1,000 on single returns).

"At the present rate for one-year Treasury bills," Ingram explains, "the rate on these certificates would be about 10½ per cent, tax free, so that it would be equivalent to about 15 per cent return for persons who are at the 30 per cent tax rate. The deduction means that the interest on up to about $10,000 in these certificates would be tax free. That is a most appealing rate for savings, and should encourage people to save."

In connection with Individual Retirement Accounts and Keogh Plans where contributions may be deducted from taxable income, committees of the Senate and House took action that indicates these deductions may be greatly increased and the programs extended to persons not now eligible.

There is a proposal, for instance, to increase the maximum IRA deduction from $1,500 a year to $2,000, to extend this program to persons who are already in formal retirement plans, and to permit an employee to set up a second IRA for a non-working spouse. In the case of Keogh Plans for the self-employed, there is a proposal to double the contribution limits from $7,500 a year to $15,000.

The first certain change in banking regulations will come as of Aug. 1 as a result of action by the Deregulation Committee which adopted a sweeping, long-term deregulation schedule which would completely eliminate the present interest rate ceilings on many term deposits.

On Aug. 1, all rate ceilings on deposits of four years and over are removed, freeing banks to offer a rate of their choice on these deposits. At the same time the 12 per cent maximum limit on 30-month term deposits will be lifted and savings banks may offer rates up to that of the matching Treasury bill rate.

Each year on Aug. 1 thereafter, ceiling rates on time deposits will be eliminated according to a schedule voted by the committee. The committee has yet to act upon the elimination of the ceiling on regular savings deposits, but it is expected that the present 5½ per cent rate will be eliminated by the end of three to four years.

"There are many important banking developments now under consideration in Washington," Ingram says, "and these are not simply of interest to banks. After all a bank is only a repository for the money of people when they have a little more than what they need to live from day to day. The bank invests this money for its depositors, sometimes using it to help other people buy houses, automobiles, etc.

"For a number of years, people who have put their money in banks have sometimes been at a disadvantage in the interest they received. But they have had the protection of reserves, insurance and careful community responsibility.

"With the changes that appear to be coming, some of the disadvantages of saving will be removed and the historic protection of a savings account will be maintained."

Art Center enrolling for photography class

The South Shore Art Center is enrolling for their photography classes, including beginning photography with Paul Fortin starting July 20, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., a lecture-demonstration approach to understanding how a camera works — F stops, exposure techniques, depth of field — developing and printing demonstrated in last three sessions. Bring your own 35 mm camera; separate darkroom time available.

Intermediate photography starts July 21, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and consists of demonstration, lecture, critique approach with students scheduling individual time in darkroom; must have basic darkroom knowledge. Intermediates will concentrate on sequences and projects toward developing a finer print. Advanced students will explore tone-line separation, solarization, high contrast prints, etc. This couse is being taught by a new instructor to the Center — Anne Garrison, a graduate of the New England School of Photography with honors in color photography and a B.A. from Connecticut College, does free lance photography in both black and white and color. She has worked with the Stephen Rose Gallery as a photography technician, has been a teaching assistant at the New England School of photograph in black and white photography and also in media with slides workshop.

For further information, please call the center at 383-9548.

Fire Facts

TO FIGHT OR NOT TO FIGHT!

There's a fire in my house! Should I fight it with my fire extinguisher? Will you take careful, life-saving action or do the wrong thing and make the fire worse? Here's how to improve your chances to stay safe from fire.

To Fight or not to fight:

NO! Don't fight the fire. Get out. Get others out. Call the fire Department...

IF:

1. The fire is spreading beyond the spot where it started.
2. The fire could block your exit.
3. You're not too sure how your extinguisher works.

YES! Fight the fire. Use your extinguisher:

IF:

1. You've called the Fire Department first.
2. The fires is small (confined to its origin in a mattress, wastebasket, cushion, or small appliance).
3. You can fight it with your back to an exit.
4. Your extinguisher is in working order and you know how to use it.
5. You know enough to get out fast if your effort is failing.

How you react to an emergency can determine whether your house burns down or you or a family member survives a fire in your home.

Cohasset actors in Christo's II show

This week Christo's II, Brockton restaurant and function hall, is venturing into dinner theatre.

The vehicle is the lively British farce "Not Now Darling" and the company includes three members from Cohasset: Martha Gaffey of Border St. as the prim, if not quite proper, Miss Tipdale; Bill Morgan of Bow St. as the thoroughly reprehensible casino owner Harry MacMichael; and Molly Hochkeppel of Smith Place as the set designer and production manager.

Play dates are July 9, 10 and 11; 16, 17, and 18. Dinner — a choice of three entrees — is at 7 and the show follows at 8:30. Discounts are available for senior citizens.

The show itself is a frothy, champagne-light entertainment for a summer's eve and yet it's been amazingly durable. In fact you might say this particular show has been running for nearly five years. George Stevens of Braintree, the director and executive producer, first put it on in the fall of 1976.

Then it ran for a week in the summer of 1977 at Pricilla Beach Theatre in Manomet.

Last summer it was resurrected at the Old Colony Summer Theatre in Plymouth where it was picked up for a highly successful run at Dunfey's Hyannis Dinner Theatre this past fall and winter. Now on to Christo's.

Recycling

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said last week. "There's a lot we hadn't thought about before."

Members of the board of health and the recycling committee are working together to promote the recycling effort with a media campaign. Last week we ran a letter from Jack Hubbard, recycling committee member, that was part of the push. It was a letter explaining the system.

"I personally don't want to be part of the 'throw away' society," Hubbard said. Fine words. No one wants to think of himself that way.

Barbara Kearns, member of the board of health, pointed out this week that paper is one of the most important parts of the recycling effort.

"With all the newspapers coming into the home, practically every family has a square yard of recyclable paper a week," she said.

Eventually paper is biodegradable. But in the meantime gravel is added to the pile at the landfill to cover it and the rest of the trash.

"Recycling can make money," Kearns pointed out.

The Boy Scouts provided the new signs for the official recycling center at the landfill on Cedar Street. There is an overall plan, put together by the recycling committee, that would eventually mean moving the dump gates to put the recyclables outside the posts. The expense of the change will delay implementation.

For the time the recycling effort will involve separate bins for aluminum cans, glass and paper. The glass must be clean and sorted by color. Steel cans cannot be included with the aluminum ones.

The supervision in the sorting effort is the job of the youth corps workers for the summer. By fall town officials hope the recycling effort will be generating enough to pay for some supervision.

Supervision is considered essential to the success of the project. So is the cooperation of townspeople.

The end product would be a savings for the town and therefore the taxpayers.

Service League schedules Keep-Well Clinic

The Social Service League of Cohasset will be conducting a Keep-Well Clinic Wednesday, July 22, at Harborview, 60 Elm St., from 10 a.m to noon. Blood pressure, urine testing, weights and general health consulatation will be available to all Cohasset residents.

Throughout the summer, the office, at 16 Highland Ave. will be open for Board of Health nursing service Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m., and noon to 1 p.m.

The Senior Shuttle Bus is scheduled for Braintree Mall Wednesday, July 15. Reservations may be made one week prior to the trip by calling the office at 8:30 a.m., 383-0771 or 383-0821. Each passenger must call individually for a reservation to the Mall.

CCC float a winner

The Cohasset Community Center is proud of the ribbon the center's float won in the Hingham July 4th parade.

Its entry, A Salute to American Patriots, won Third Place, Most Patriotic, and the award is now on display in the center office.

Nine children from the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools rode on the float. Selection was based on an essay competition on the American I Most Admire.

Eight-year-old Matthew Norris chose Squanto because "he helped the pilgrims to stay alive in the winter." Ann Dockray, 6, chose Ronald Reagan because "he helped get the hostages free and also because he likes jelly beans and so do I."

An interesting bit a family history was pointed out by Kelly Combs who portrayed Martha Washington. Kelly is actually related to George Washington through her father's family. She also admires him because "he showed himself a trustful man and so he became the first president."

Mrs. Marie McCarthy, float chairman, was especially impressed with the team work which went into decorating the float. A flatbed was donated by J. Michael Sullivan and a local businessman generously allowed his garage to be used to store it. Elementary and high school students donated many hours of their time to help prepare the float for the parade. All of the workers also rode on the float and everyone received a gold ribbon and a gift certificate donated by the Strawberry Parfait.

Good morning, Stretch. . .

By Lois Martin

Dear Stretch,

You don't know me but it's high time we met. I'm the woman on the other side of the television screen every morning at 5:45 a.m. when you're conducting your exercises.

I first saw you by accident. My husband had headed for the shower and I turned you on instead of the news. There you were, with background rock music, you in your snazzy leotards doing all those impossible gyrations on behalf of a better body.

And I was impressed. I snuggled more comfortably into bed and marveled as you held your heel up over your head. Honest, Stretch, you could be an anatomy chart on a doctor's wall or in a biology book. I've wondered about your age. It isn't 22. But given the blonde pony tail, the brilliant smile and the easy patter as you exercise, you're probably the best 30 plus person going.

PATCHES

You've made an impression on me. And I thought I should tell you about it. For several months I've been getting up with your show to have a go at better physical condition. I probably wouldn't have done that except that I noticed that by comparison our bodies could have been from two separate species. And I've always been one who likes a challenge.

The first day I tried to keep up with your exercises, I thought you were trying to kill me. The next day I believed I was trying to kill myself. But my masochism has continued. And today I can get through a full 60 seconds of leg lifts without dropping. Now that you've shortened the aerobics part of your stint, I'm deluded into thinking my stamina's improved.

My workout area is my bedroom floor where there's not quite enough room to do the twists without kicking either the footboard of the bed or the wastebasket. It's not easy trying to lift the upper body to meet the lower body when the cat walks across your stomach and the dog wants to go out.

And my exercise outfit leaves a lot to be desired. Try some of those moves in your nightgown.

But I was wondering, based on my limit of experience with your program, if you could concentrate more on the exercises for people just out of surgery, with bad backs or even pregnant. This may seem like an effort to regress instead of improve. But I'm due a vacation of sorts in view of my perfect attendance.

Thank goodness you don't work weekends. It's tough enough weekday mornings to fall back on one's bed exhausted at 6 a.m. And I've had difficulty explaining why I'm wheezing and puffing even before I make coffee.

But compared to getting dressed to jog, or going to a beauty/exercise shop, Stretch, your show's an appealing alternative.

And by the by, do you ever run short of two volunteers to stand behind you on the show and follow your workout? I know it wouldn't look good for someone to lie flat on the floor and stop exercising when she's tired. But I'd keep telling myself a commercial's coming. I'd smile a lot and look like a good sport. I figure other people would take heart if they saw a body that doesn't look like that chart. They'd have the courage to make a fool of themselves every morning too. Just don't count on me to carry on a conversation like you do during those physical endeavors. It's all I can do to breath.

Thank you for your consideration. You can count on me to be with you in the early dawn...at least until I find out who sent me that catalogue for the "full-figured woman."

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Part of the joy of vacationing is forgetting the calendar and letting the days just slide by. Just for a while, the hustle of everyday life gives way and there's time to stop and stare along the marshes and the woods. That white, feathery yarrow bordering the country roads makes good soup with the leaves and cooked like spinach, it makes a pleasant vegetable. The vivid blue flowers of borage were said by old herbalists to make a man merry and joyful and chopped leaves make a slimming lunch with cottage cheese garnished with the flowers. Toward the end of each summer day we see dories filled to the gunnels with Irish Moss being brought into harbor by youngsters who find gathering at low tide a profitable summer job. Irish Moss has many uses in modern medicine and when dried in the sun and combined with eggs and milk, makes a nice pudding. Its natural jelly makes it as cleansing as soap for the bath and shampoo. Woodruff, another wild flower, can be used to make a pale green herbal tea and has a unique fragrance. Instead of spending a precious summer hour or two in the supermarket, dig a bucket of clams at low tide for this "classic" chowder which Elise Woods unearthed from a yellowed newspaper clipping while searching for recipes for the cookbook being compiled by the women of First Congregational Church in Marshfield:

1 qt. clams
1/4 lb. salt pork
4 potatoes
2 onions
1 qt. milk
1/4 lb. butter
Salt and peper
Plenty of common crackers

You may also add a kernel of garlic if you like it and a jar of cream if you care for a rich chowder. Cut salt pork into small pieces and "fry it out." Strain fat and saute chopped onions gently until golden. Heat clams in own juice until edges turn up (only a couple of minutes). Dice and parboil potatoes. When clams are cool enough to handle, skin the dark part off and remove necks. Put everything together and add milk and butter, floating crackers on top.

Primroses can be pickled, oak leaves used for a medium-dry white wine and wild rose petals make a sweet jam or conserve. Blackberries can be used in preserves and pies and clover makes a dainty sandwich, using lightly buttered thin slices of white bread; one side sprinkled with sugar and the other spread with clover blossoms. Different, anyway and so is this recipe of Doris MacLeod's which is so good she has been making it for years, ever since she lived in Minnesota. Dot suggests making it 24 hours ahead and refrigerating. Served with crackers, chips or raw vegetables, it makes two cups and is called

CHOPPED SPINACH DIP

1 c. mayonnaise
1 c. sour cream
1 pkg. chopped spinach, thawed and well dried
1 T. dill
1 tsp. herbs. Dot uses thyme, marjoram, a pinch of poultry seasoning, whatever is on hand, depending on her mood
1 1/2 tsp. lemon juice
1 c. chopped fresh parsley
1 tsp. salt
Onion to taste

The flowers of the elder shrub are sweetly fragrant and can be used for vinegar and wine. 'Tis said that if you drink hot elderflower tea three or four times during the day when you feel a cold coming on, sometimes it will fail to develop. An ideal drink with dessert is elderflower wine and a very special dessert is this recipe of Peggy Mason's called

PINA COLADA CAKE

Duncan Hines white cake mix, using whole eggs, not just whites as directed on package. Bake according to directions in 13" x 9" pan and as soon as it comes out of the oven, poke little tiny holes all over cake. (Peggy uses a skewer used in roasting chickens). Pour a 16 oz. can of cream of coconut syrup all over cake while still warm. When cool, frost with container of cool whip (medium size). Sprinkle with coconut. Refrigerate overnight.

A birthday for Ruth Welton

By. O. F. Ingram

No parade or fireworks was scheduled for Cohasset's Fourth of July, but scores of townspeople combined the celebration of the country's birthday Saturday, with a 90th birthday party for Ruth Welton, a long-time and well-known resident.

The party was held in the Lothrop House of the Cohasset Historical Society where Mrs. Welton received congratulations, well-wishes and gifts from a stream of her many friends, and then shared a birthday cake and refreshments with all present.

Mrs. Welton could look back on a particularly adventurous period of her life when she served 13 months in hospital and canteen work with the First Pursuit Group in France during World War I. She recalled an incident at Chateau Thierry when a young man came into the canteen and introduced himself as "your ice man." He was Sgt. George Mealy of Cohasset, who was killed in action the next day.

After the war, Mrs. Welton was associated with the accounting firm of Lybrand, Ross Brother & Montgomery :now Coopers & Lybrand;, and served for many years as executive secretary of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants.

In Cohasset she has served as treasurer of the Community Garden Club and treasurer of the Women's Guild of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, where she is now the oldest active member.

AT HER 90TH BIRTHDAY PARTY ON THE FOURTH OF JULY, Ruth Welton of Cohasset greeted scores of friends and well-wishers at the Cohasset Historical Society's Lothrop House.

Art Center to get state grant

The South Shore Art Center has notification it will receive a Local Projects Grant from the Massachusetts Council on Arts and Humanities to help fund an outdoor Children's Art Program in June and July.

Receipt of the grant will depend on final approval of the Council's 1982 budget. The Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities is a state agency whose funds are recommended by the Governor and appropriated by the State Legislature.

The $750 grant will partially underwrite the Center's Children's Art Week to be held in Cohasset from June 29 to July 3 daily from 10:30 to noon. Children ages 7 to 12 will sketch and paint outdoors and explore many media with teacher Serena Brundige.

The second part of the Children's Art Program will be held in cooperation with the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham where classes will be held on the Conservatory Grounds at Cedar Hill for both teenagers and children. Teens Painting from Nature will be taught by Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman for ages 13-18 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 4 to 6 p.m. starting July 6 and ending July 22. Students will use water media and pastels to interpret the Cedar Hills environment. Exploring with Paint and Pencil will be taught by George Hancin for ages 8 to 12 on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2:30 to 4 starting July 7 and ending July 30. Children will learn beginning drawing and painting skills by working from nature forms. Art From Nature for ages 8 to 12 will be taught by Serena Brundige on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 2:30 to 4:30 starting July 6 and ending July 22. This is an exciting new class where the students "explore" the Cedar Hill area to "find" 3-dimensional objects as their supplies. The teacher will guide them in making imaginative works of art.

For information on registration (which must be made in advance) telephone 383-9548 or 749-7565.

Last chance to enroll

It's still not too late to make classes at the South Shore Art Center an exciting part of your summer plans. Enrollment must be made in advance for the term beginning the week of July 20 and some classes are already beginning to fill.

Space is still available in Constance Pratt's three-day Pastel Portrait Workshop July 21, 22 and 23 for a full day working session from the model for advanced students.

Figure Painting with John Lanza, and Portraiture with Clement Micarelli both meet in the evening two times a week for eight sessions as does Introductory Painting with David Tandy. Outdoor painting classes are filling rapidly but there are still some places left in both drawing classes, Basic Drawing, Monday evenings with Virginia Moore and Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain with Syma Komarin, both for six sessions only.

For information on available space in outdoor classes and studio offerings, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.
